The drugs include: alcohol, cigarettes, smokeless tobacco, marijuana, inhalants, amphetamines, steroids, psychedelics, cocaine/crack, heroin, tranquilizers, barbiturates and pills.

Various percentages of the to-67.4 percent of male students and 64.5 percent of female students in Charlevoix County have reported using some form of drugs.

Numbers based on a recent survey given to Charlevoix County students tal students reported using each of these drugs. For example: 56.9 percent of the students reported using alcohol at some time, 26.9 percent reported using marijuana, 2.5 percent reported using cocaine/crack and 1.9 percent reported using steroids.

However, according to Scott Kelly, director of the Bay Area Substance Education Services (BASES), the percentages of student use is at the same level as those reported across the nation. This is a positive because a previous survey a few years back reported student use in Charlevoix County higher than the national average, he said.

The survey was given to students in sixth through twelfth grades in Charlevoix, East Jordan and Boyne City public schools by the Hazelden Foundation in December and January of this school year to determine student drug use in the county.

Kelly also said this survey directly attacks the preconception that kids with a poor family life are the main users of drugs.

According to the survey, 85.7 percent of the males in the "Dependence-Risk" Category said they have a strong family support system, while 26.7 percent of the females in the same group report they have a strong family support system.

"That means we have males that use substances heavily that come from really good families," he said.

Librarian to fight board

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

Charlevoix Public Library director Marybeth Wallick may be fighting a losing battle against the library board that she claims wants to remove her from her position, but she still says that she "would love" to keep her job.

Wallick has been the library director for almost 30 years and she says now, four library board members are trying to oust her from her position. Wallick won't go quietly though, she has hired a lawyer and rejected the "one time" retirement offer given to her by board president Rick Brandi.

The words, "one" and "time" are underlined in the contract followed by, "To accept the offer you must sign and present this agreement for Library Board Approval by the May 1, 2001 date to be voted on at the May board meeting. The termination date of the current contract would remain June 30, 2001."

Wallick said, "I wouldn't think the May 1 deadline (stated in the retirement proposal) is set in stone. People have told me, they hope that I get a much better buy-out proposal than what is being offered."

When asked if the deadline is a final decision, library board president Rick Brandi said, "I wouldn't want to comment because there are some negotiations."

However, Linny Arnold, Marion Township's library board representative said that the retirement proposal has never gone before the board for approval.

"As one member of the board, he (Brandi) can't do that (draft and offer a retirement proposal). To insist that she (Wallick) sign it before we met as a board is wrong, wrong, wrong," Arnold said.

The proposal Wallick rejected offered her one additional year of retirement which would give her 30 years of service as of June 26, 2001. The purchase of the additional year by the board would make Wallick eligible for retirement.

The proposal also offered her $24,834.68 which is '66 and two thirds percent of her 170 accumulated sick days rather than the 50 percent she "would normally receive on retirement."

The proposal closed by offering a stipend of $3,000 upon retirement.

However, Wallick doesn't want to retire.

"I would love to stay and do my job, but I can't go on working for them. I have bent over backward and they have made it plain that they don't want to work with me," Wallick said.

"For me to stay, at least four board members would have to resign," Ethel Coeling, Norwood Township representative could not be reached for comment. Mary Ann Chew, school board representative; Anne Hansen, representative for Eveline Township; Betty Henne, Hayes Township representative and Gordon Van Wieren, Charlevoix Township representative, all deferred comments to Brandi.

A press release authored by Brandi states, "The goal of the Board of Directors is to continue to provide the community the library services it wants and needs. The Board of Directors has provided clear direction to library staff since creation of the board in 1997. Although we are a relatively new board, we have learned a great deal and want to attain our goal of constantly improving our library with management and financial expertise. The board will continue to support an improved library for the entire district and appreciates public input, past and future."

It is our intention to make Charlevoix library the best it can be to serve its citizens. As always, we encourage and appreciate your input. Careful listening and communication solves differences."

The board's next meeting will take place at 3:30 p.m., May 10 in the library basement.

Some barking about the library board

Jeremy McBain

'Just a thought'

Sometimes I am amazed at the number of people who want to quiet their government watchdog — also called the local newspaper.

Take the recent story concerning the future of Marybeth Wallick at the Charlevoix Area Library. When that story first came to us, I was a little skeptical because it was a "she said/they said" situation that tends to get ugly.

But, as we looked into it, the story became more clear, especially once we received a copy of a retirement proposal from Library Board president Rick Brandt to Wallick. That gave me proof that something was not right.

"If the library board was just giving Wallick an evaluation, then why would the board president give her a retirement proposal," I thought. To make matters even more interesting, no one on the board wanted to talk about it, except for the board secretary, Linny Arnold — who spoke out against the board's actions.

The rest of the board hid behind the idea that the only one who could talk for them was their board president, Brandt. This gives individual members of the board the ability to leave the public they represent guessing about their motives.

Plus it makes it difficult for us to give our readers both sides of the story.

But, we sniffed out the story and were amazed at some of the responses we got. Of course there were many people who wrote in congratulating us for informing them of these actions. They were happy that we warned them that something was amiss, thus giving them a chance to voice their opinions to their representatives before a final decision is made.

However, some people were angry and said we printed "hearsay," others defended the board's actions of not speaking out individually — one reader said a board member who speaks out against the board in anything other than a public meeting is a "rouge" member.

So, why was it a story? Well, here we had a public body trying to be secretive and giving the public librarian a retirement proposal that stated it would be nullified if she spoke about it to anyone. The key word here is "public."

The library is a public place, the library board is a public body and the librarian is a public employee, all paid for with your tax dollars. This means you are their boss. So here we have our employees trying to make another employee retire, all in our name. To make matters worse, the one employee trying to force the retirement is trying to keep the details of it from their boss....us.

Just the thought of that makes me madder than a pitbull with rabies. A public body cannot make a secret contract. That kind of secrecy goes against everything that public government stands for.

And don't tell me that they can do this because it is a personnel issue. The personnel in question is an employee of the taxpayers. This is not a private company and the library board is not a private body; they cannot be making decisions for you and me in private.

Some say, "Well Jeremy, would you want your evaluation done in the public?" The big differences here are the Charlevoix Courier is a private company, the library is not; I am not a public employee, those employed at the library are; my boss is Ken Winter, publisher of the Charlevoix Courier, the taxpayers are the ultimate bosses of the library or any public employee.

Everything about being a public employee is public — even their salaries. Did you know, as taxpayers you have a right to know the salary of any public employee and this right is guaranteed in the Michigan Freedom of Information Act?

Now about those board members that speak out against board actions in the public being called "rouge." When a member of a public board says they do not want to comment on a particular issue or defer comment to another member, that basically says to me they do not want the public they represent to know what kind of politician they are.

The newspaper is a way for the public to find out just what kind of representatives they have, good or bad. When a representative won't talk to the newspaper, they are basically taking away a tool from the people that can be used to determine if they are any good at their job or not.

But, what still distresses me is some people still don't understand this concept of public government. They are willing to let any public body conduct its business in private and without questions being asked.

And when it comes to the newspaper being a watchdog for the public by alerting them to potential problems with a local governing body before they get bigger, they are not only deaf to our barking, but they want to put a muzzle on the dog.

What these people do not realize is I am not particularly fond of muzzles; they tend to itch and I just end up chewing them off.

Therefore, we will continue keeping an eye on your government and barking about the good and bad. As for this library mess, I am howling for your attention.

They conducted an evaluation with the public in mind. How can we better the library, increase use and serve our users? Their intention was not to personally attack anyone who has dedicated 28 years to the specific position being evaluated. Evaluations are strictly business. It is something that has to be done. No one is trying to take a job away from anyone. The evaluation was for the betterment of the library. I think it is as simple as that when you get right down to the root of the problem.

When an individual receives an evaluation and there are areas that need to be improved or worked on, then that's what needs to be done, not ignored because the individual feels he/she doesn't have to change a thing. Evaluations are tools for constructive criticism, not personal attacks. This is why we have bosses, mentors and board members. They are there to provide guidance and to make sure the company, business or library is running smoothly and to the best of its ability.

Being an employee means doing your job to the best of your ability and making sure expectations are followed. My point, when the job is not being done to the highest standard, which reflects the establishment, things have to change; things need to be done or the establishment suffers and does not properly serve. Change should not be viewed as a bad thing.

I have noticed there are people missing the point. There was an employee evaluation done by appointed members of the board. The evaluation reflected her job performance and requests for improvement were made. Those requests should have been done. Period.

When they are done and up to standards, the evaluation score changes. When things aren't completed because of refusal and stubbornness, then the individual's job is in jeopardy until there is a change. Name one business owner who keeps workers that do not grow with the company or reflect good business. No one I know. It's the same thing when an employee is not doing her job up to the standards for which she is evaluated. In this case, seems to me a choice was made not to care about the evaluation or what it said; as a result, she is feeling threatened.

More reasons against dock plan

Editor:
Possibly 80 - 110 more docks in Round Lake? Many reasons against such a proposal have been accurately and clearly stated in previously published letters in the Courier. Two other factors not previously mentioned are: What is going to happen to Venetian with docks and boats 400 feet into Round Lake and if the city can go 400 feet into Round Lake what is to stop landowners from doing the same thing?

I feel compelled to say a multi-dock addition smacks of one thing — greed.

Letter was right

Editor:
The editorial by Paul Whitting (Page 13, April 25 edition) of this past week was right on point. The only ones who believe we need more dockage are the transient boaters, who visit for a few weeks, or those individuals within our community who can't resist the lure of what they perceive as "free money" from state or federal funds.

For those who insist on the "free money" aspect of this scheme, I would suggest that we replace the existing docks with floating docks. A more thoughtful arrangement of existing docks would add not only needed docking space, but greater convenience.

The dockage schemes which are being suggested is a luxury that we cannot afford. For anyone that has traveled to the east coast and in particular Annapolis, Md. and Newport, R.I., it becomes quickly apparent that mooring cans are the rule not the exception. Since anchoring in Round Lake in front of the marina is always "iffy" at best, given the depth of the water, mooring cans offer a reasonable alternative for the very reasons suggested in Mr. Whitting's letter.

I live in Charlevoix and sail on its waters. Do we really want to see empty docks extending into Round Lake as far as the eye can see, after all the visiting boaters have retreated to their home ports, for 10 months of the year.

We need an indoor rink

Editor:
I'm a middle school student in Charlevoix. I think Charlevoix needs a new indoor ice skating rink. One reason is because the public rink gets all slushy halfway through the winter because of the weather. Some kids have rusted blades because of the slushy water. Also kids are bored in spring and summer. Have you seen all the kids just walking around with nothing to do? We should have at least one indoor ice skating rink. We can get the money from taxes and you can charge $10 for one person and $15 for a family. If we could have an ice rink, kids would be much happier.

Boycott the gas companies

Editor:
How frustrated one feels when it seems we are helpless as gas prices continue to go up. Is it possible that we are not totally helpless? What if everyone boycotted the major oil companies, namely Exxon, Mobil (now one company), and Chevron? To end the boycott and have their customers return to them would Exxon/Mobil/Chevron not have to lower their prices? In doing so the smaller oil companies would have to lower their prices also to be competitive.

Do you suppose this could work? Only if people participate! This idea sent to me by e-mail this week seems particularly timely after reading the earnings reports at the end of the first quarter of 2001. Exxon/Mobil reported a $5 billion profit, a 44 percent increase from first quarter 2000. Chevron also reported huge profits this quarter. Not surprising when we know what it cost to fill up the gas tank. And in parts of Chicago the gas is costing $2.20 a gallon this week.

We know that it will only get worse for us in northern Michigan this summer. Let's participate in this grassroots movement. We have nothing to lose.

Board should volunteer at library

Editor:
As a volunteer at the Charlevoix Public Library, I feel that I have a right and a duty to express my opinion of the comments being made about Marybeth Wallick.

When we moved to Charlevoix three years ago, I was very impressed with the up-to-date and well organized library for a city the size of Charlevoix. The book lists are always being brought up-to-date, on-line computers are available, interlibrary loans have been expanded and everyone at the library (including Marybeth) are always willing to help and answer questions.

Because of my good feelings about the library, I volunteered to help on a weekly basis and was amazed at how busy the library is and how smoothly it runs, in spite of numerous activities going on at once (people asking reference and research questions, checking out books, computer questions and phone calls from other researchers).

My suggestion is that the board members come in and spend at least one day volunteering at the library (especially those board members who oppose Marybeth's style of leadership) and see for themselves how much must be done during a day, how smoothly the library runs with Marybeth's guidance. During my hours of volunteering and at other times during the week when I am a patron, I have never seen any of these board members who are most critical of the operation of the library volunteering their time.

It seems in this situation a few board members need to walk in the shoes of those they are criticizing.

Board did nothing wrong

Editor:
I am responding to the article "Librarian fears for her job" and opinion letters from the April 18, 2001 edition of the Charlevoix Courier.

First of all, the appointed board members — the ones I know — take their position seriously. They volunteer their personal time and energy to better the public library for its users. They want the Charlevoix Public Library to be a comfortable and resourceful place for all its users and future users.

Norwood Township may have violated wetlands act

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

A Norwood Township project to construct a pond which will service a dry hydrant for the village, may have violated the Michigan Department of Environmental Quality's (MDEQ) Wetlands Act, sparking an investigation by the environmental group.

"It wasn't their intent to cause harm. They (the board) just didn't realize the site was regulated," Charlevoix County Soil Erosion officer Wendy Armstrong said.

Armstrong explained that the project's goal is to service homes located along Lakeshore Drive in Norwood Township with emergency fire protection.

The project has been proposed for several years, but received board approval in the fall of 2000.

Construction at the site located off of Witmere Road got underway April 16, but four days later on April 20, MDEQ wetlands specialist John Arevalo walked the site and found Inwood Creek was within 350 feet of the pond.

The MDEQ Wetlands Act requires there to be a 500 foot buffer between a construction site and a creek unless proper permits are obtained.

Arevalo immediately stopped all further work at the site until proper permits are gathered.

Project supervisor, Al Veenstra of Drenth Brothers, a construction company out of Ellsworth, said that the permit process was the responsibility of the board, not Drenth Brothers.

However, Armstrong claims an individual from Drenth Brothers called her to see if a soil erosion permit was necessary. During the conversation, Armstrong said the Drenth representative told her that the site was not within 500 feet of a creek.

Armstrong referred to the oversight as, "a lack of knowledge as to where the creek stood in relation to the project."

If the proper permits are received and approved the project will service lakefront homes located along Lakeshore Drive.

Doris Pearl, township board secretary, said that in the wake of decreasing lake levels, counting on Lake Michigan as the primary fire protection source was, "not a smart way to try and get water," as cold winter months could mean frozen water.

Pearl said that it is a long trip to the city fire department, located on State Street in Charlevoix, to restock and the township is in need of another water source.

The board recently had public hearings on the issue of an emergency service millage which was approved. The approval will allow the township to conduct a special election to take place on July 17.

If approved by residents the millage will allow the township to collect .5 mills from township property owners for three years.

Pearl said that funds raised by the millage will help pay for the Witmere Road project.

National Multiple Sclerosis Society to have video conference Saturday

On Saturday the National Multiple Sclerosis Society's Annual Northern Michigan Video Conference will be videocast to seven northern Michigan hospital sites from Munson Medical Center in Traverse City.

Charlevoix Area Hospital will be one of the host sites for the conference.

This year's conference will feature Dr. Eric Eggenberger, neuro-ophthalmologist and co-director of the MS Clinic in East Lansing and Dr. Ward Gillett, a urologist at Bay Area Urology in Traverse City.

The program begins at 9:30 a.m. with Eggenberger discussing symptoms and issues related to optic-neuritis. Following a provided lunch, Gillett will present information about bladder problems and sexual dysfunction.

Each doctor will have time to answer questions following their presentation.

"This is fast becoming the most popular program in the region," said chapter programs manager, Renee Kaufman. "Just this year alone, the program has expanded from three to eight hospital sites making it extremely convenient for people to attend without having to drive hours to the nearest facility."

The registration fee is $5 per person with sites in Charlevoix, Alpena, Cadillac, Frankfort, Gaylord, Grayling, Kalkaska and Traverse City.

For more information or to register, please contact the National Multiple Sclerosis Society at (800) 243-5767.

New solid waste transfer station being planned

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

For many Charlevoix industries December marks the beginning of a lull in business innovation, but for Tom Rankl, president of Top Rank, a Charlevoix based solid waste collection business, December was the start of big business changes.

In December of 2000, after six years of patiently waiting for a new Charlevoix County Solid Waste Plan, Rankl's wish came true. Now he plans to own and operate an improved transfer station in Charlevoix Township.

Rankl is planning to consolidate the three Type B transfer stations he currently operates into one Type A station. He said that the upgrade from Type B stations, which are low capacity, to Type A, large-er capacity stations will increase the company's operating efficiency. The faster process will allow his hauler to transport larger loads.

"Now that the landfill (Cedar Ridge) is no longer open, garbage in this area has to be transported," Rankl explained.

Rankl described the former solid waste plan as "very site specific." He said that Type A transfer stations could only be located on Beaver Island, a landfill or Boyne Falls.

The new plan, approved by the State of Michigan in December, lifted these structured specifications. Transfer stations can now be located across the county as long as certain siting criteria are met and solid waste can be disposed of outside of county limits.

"Under the new plan

"We hope to dump the first load of garbage at the new site by September."

Tom Rankl,
President of Top Rank

Charlevoix County garbage can go anywhere in the State of Michigan which allows us to shop around as to where to transport it which helps to control my biggest expense, disposal costs," he said.

The planned site will be located on a 40 acre parcel of land off of Bell's Bay Road. The structure itself will be 8,000 square feet with ceilings 25 feet tall.

Garbage trucks will enter the building and dump their load on the concrete floor. A bucket loader will then pick up the refuse and dump it into a compactor. The compactor will push the trash into a trailer which will be brought to a Waste Management landfill in Waters for disposal.

Rankl also sees the new facility as an opportunity to step up the company's recycling efforts which he said they were unable to do in the past because of space constraints.

"I hope to be able to take garbage out of the waste stream and recycle it which will give us more options to keep costs in check," he added.

Rankl used the example of construction waste. It is common to see big dumpsters on construction sites that are full of recyclable materials like steel, wood and cement.

Rankl said that the wood can be pulled out and chipped, the cement can be crushed and reused and the steel can be transported to a scrap yard.

Rankl said that they are waiting on permits from the Department of Environmental Quality to start station construction. He hopes to have the proper permits by June when they will apply for an operator's license.

"We (Top Rank) opened June 1, 1995. Since then we have come a long way and we have truly outgrown this facility. We hope to dump the first load of garbage at the new site by September," he said.

Rankl plans to keep the office at its current location off of US-31 South, but the cans, trucks and operations will be moved over to the new site.

HEALTH

Do you have a problem with alcohol?

Melodie Brown, M.D.

'Your Health'

Two-thirds of American men and one-half of American women drink alcohol.

Although the majority of drinkers drink responsibly, there are serious consequences from alcohol abuse. Alcohol can cause illness such as cirrhosis of the liver and pancreatitis. It worsens symptoms in diabetes and other diseases.

Alcohol affects your judgment, energy level and work performance. It can be related to a number of psychological and social problems such as depression and anxiety, family conflict, job instability, arrests and injuries related to violence or accidents.

Many of these problems may be avoided with appropriate intervention. Perhaps the most difficult aspect to intervention and treatment is to identify that a "drinking problem" exists in the first place.

A "drinking problem" exists when drinking causes significant problems in one's health, relationships with others, work or school performance or the way one thinks or feels.

The problem usually starts with having a drink now and then, or drinking when feeling stressed. Alcohol may make you think that you will forget about your problems. But, in the long-run, you are still the same person with the same problems, and maybe a new one — needing alcohol.

Ask yourself the following questions:

- Have your friends ever complained about your drinking?
- Have you ever been late or absent from work because of hangovers?
- Have you ever driven after drinking?
- Have you had trouble with the law after drinking?
- Have you gotten into a fight after drinking?
- Do you drink even when you do not feel well?
- Has your doctor told you that you have health problems related to drinking?
- Have you ever tried to quit drinking? Have you ever had a blackout while drinking?
- Do you sometimes have a drink in the morning to stop your hands from trembling or to ease a hangover?
- Do you end up drinking more than you meant to drink?

• Have you stopped doing things you used to do because you would rather drink?

• Do you drink more than you used to drink?

If you said yes to any of these questions, drinking may be a problem for you.

Even small amounts of alcohol may be a problem if you: have any short or long-term health problems, are taking medications (even over-the-counter meds), have family members with alcohol problems, have had problems in your life or health because of alcohol, or feel down or depressed.

If you do not have any of the above risk factors, it's probably safe for you to drink a limited amount of alcohol without affecting your health.

"One drink" can be defined as: one 12 ounce can of beer or wine cooler, one five ounce glass of wine or 1.5 ounces of hard liquor. Each of these has about the same amount of pure alcohol.

A sensible limit is no more than two drinks per day for men and one drink per day for women and one drink per day for those over 65.

If you have any problems with alcohol, ask your doctor how much alcohol is safe for you.

Some people may be able to handle a problem with alcohol by drinking less. However, you will probably have to quit drinking completely if it's causing problems with your health or life.

If you try to quit but are having trouble, help is available. Your doctor can help you choose a program that is right for you.

Fight over Cedar Ridge Landfill continues

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

Even though both the Michigan Department of Environmental Quality (MDEQ) and the Charlevoix County Planning Department rejected Waste Management's expansion proposal for the Cedar Ridge Landfill in Ironton, Ingham County Circuit Court Judge James Giddings may give them the go ahead.

In a previous interview Charlevoix County planner Larry Sullivan explained the origin of the circuit court case.

"The philosophy at work is when the 40 acre site (Cedar Ridge) originally chosen was filled, the good area consumed, we (Charlevoix County) would draw the line at that 40 acres and stick to it," Sullivan said.

"Now, Waste Management is suing the DEQ for denying a construction permit to extend the landfill."

The suit was filed in July of 2000 and Giddings heard oral arguments on March 16.

David Domzal, the attorney representing Waste Management argued that the MDEQ's decision to reject the landfill expansion request was "capricious and arbitrary."

Domzal based his claim on maps used by the department during their review of the expansion request.

In the brief filed in the Ingham County Circuit Court, Domzal states, "It is interesting that MDEQ does not deny that it refused to look at hard evidence indicating that the maps the county relied upon were clearly in error."

Domzal is referring to the impact of set back requirements that he says are based on a nonexistent creek. The map in question, the MIRIS map, shows a creek running through the expansion area. However, Waste Management says this creek is not currently flowing and thus isn't a creek.

"The map they relied on was incorrect and they acknowledge that it is in error. It shows a stream as being a permanent flowing stream. However, the County Solid Waste Plan relies on the map, whether the maps are right or wrong they rely on them, a line is a line regardless," Domzal said.

However, according to Kathleen Kavanaugh, attorney for the MDEQ, she sees no reason for Giddings not to uphold the DEQ's decisions. She said that the expansion does not meet the site criteria.

"The Charlevoix County Solid Waste Management Plan requires landfills to be located 2,000 feet from permanent streams as depicted on a particular map (the MIRIS map). (Waste Management) sought a permit that did not meet this isolation distance. MDEQ is required to deny a permit for a landfill if it does not comply with the county plan," her brief states.

According to Nancy Ferguson, vice president of the Charlevoix based environmental group WATCH, the purpose of the set back requirement is to alleviate the threat of ridge water running downhill from the landfill into Lake Charlevoix.

Kavanaugh said that Giddings took the information presented by both Domzal and her under advisement.

As of April 24 the Ingham County Circuit Court showed no order had yet been issued in this case.

But Domzal is hopeful. "The question really is what is the court going to do? My client (WMM) is leaving all their options open. Our goal is to obtain a construction permit to expand the landfill," he said.

AAA offers some prom safety tips

The greatest danger facing young drivers during the upcoming prom and graduation season may be sitting right next to them — fellow passengers. According to summary of recent research conducted by the Insurance Institute for Highway Safety (IIHS), "The presence of passengers strongly increase crash risk for teenage drivers; the more passengers the greater the risk."

In one particular study, said IIHS, the presence of just one passenger almost doubled the fatal crash risk compared with driving alone.

"We're not suggesting the young drivers travel alone on prom night," Richard Miller, manager of Community Safety Services for AAA Michigan said.

"What we are suggesting is that young drivers are easily distracted by passengers, are more likely to engage in risk-taking behaviors, and should therefore focus on safe driving skills."

Miller said that in vehicles with young passengers there are numerous interactions taking place that can jeopardize traffic safety.

"Young drivers are inexperienced to begin with," he said.

"And passengers from the same peer group present many opportunities for distraction. Simply the act of turning around to talk to someone can cause unnecessary risk."

In Michigan, licensed drivers 16 years of age or older, may drive without supervision with no limits on the number and ages of passengers. It is estimated that 345 lives could be saved each year nationwide with the enactment of passenger restrictions for our least experienced young drivers.

AAA prom season safety tips include:

- Set ground rules with teens before an event.
- Never allow minors to have access to alcohol.
- Recognize the signs of alcohol and/or drug use.
- Verify with other parents that alcohol will not be served at their parties.
- Make a family pledge not to drink on prom night.
- Establish a time when teens are expected home.
- Urge teens never to ride with anyone who has been drinking.
- Focus on driving: The more passengers, the greater distraction.
- Be available if your teen and his or her friends need a ride home.

Author gives audience healthy ideas

People should remember one thing when they are cooking for themselves, "You are in charge," according to renowned cookbook author Deanna House.

"If you are using a recipe and it calls for something that you don't like, don't put it in," House told an enthusiastic audience of about 45 people at Charlevoix Area Hospital April 26.

The cooking demonstration and talk was sponsored by the Community Relations Committee of the hospital's Development Council, a group of 60 plus volunteers from the community who are helping the hospital to meet the financial challenge of its current expansion project, and to meet the community's health needs in the future.

House used humor to deliver her cooking demonstration on low-fat cooking suitable for diabetics. Tossing spatulas and napkins as gifts to audience participants, House kept her audience on their toes while whipping up three savory recipes, one fish, one soy and one with beans and an easy and low-fat dessert of angel food cake and pineapple.

"We need to keep three things in mind when we think about healthy, low-fat eating," House said. "First, we need to eat more fish, at least once a week, more if you can. Second, we need to eat dried beans. And third, soy, we've got to address ourselves to soy."

Incorporating soy in one's diets is becoming easier in recent years, House said, because we have more choices.

She recommends shopping in the frozen food section of your grocery store and purchasing vegetable protein products such as Garden Burgers or protein crumbles as a way to reduce the amount of fat in your diet.

"If you can't cook your own beans, canned beans are ok, but you should rinse them to get rid of the salt," House said.

Offering insider tips on cooking that even seasoned cooks didn't know, House entertained her audience for almost two hours, handing out recipes and kitchen gadget give-aways, as well as free Diabetic Calendar books.

At the end of her demonstration, the audience was able to sample the three recipes and dessert.

"Beans won't continue to get soft after you introduce them to acid, so cook your chili beans thoroughly, then add the tomatoes," House said.

House's favorite motto is, "Enthusiastic teaching makes learning fun."

Whether she is teaching an adult education class, presenting a workshop for 4-H members or speaking to community groups, she shares her positive living philosophy as she communicates through food.

The author of four cookbooks, House is a graduate of the University of Wisconsin-Stout and has taught junior high, senior high and adult home economics classes. She is a freelance food writer regularly read in the Kalamazoo Gazette and The Grand Rapids Press newspapers.

"Not everyone likes to cook, but we all have to eat, so it helps if you can cook something," House said. "These aren't bad people, they just don't enjoy cooking like we do."

House is a favorite speaker of the members of the Federated Garden Clubs of Michigan and has appeared at a number of conventions, most recently at last year's state convention in Kalamazoo.

Her first cookbook, "House Specialties," is now out-of-print after five printings, and her second cookbook, "More House Specialties," has been retired after three printings. House currently sells her third cookbook, "Even More House Specialties," and the final book of the series, "House Specialties Encore."

Her professional affiliations include memberships in the American Association of Family and Consumer Sciences, the Michigan Association of Family and Consumer Sciences, The National Press Women and

Michigan Press Women. House currently serves on the Stout University Foundation Board in Menomonie, Wisconsin.

A native of rural southern Wisconsin, House has spent most of her adult life in southwest Michigan. After living in Portage for 19 years, she and her husband, George, now live in Ada near Grand Rapids. They are the parents of two adult children.

Her presentation was underwritten in part by Novo Nordisk.

Society welcomes spring at dinner

The Charlevoix Historical Society is welcoming spring with a dinner beginning at 6 p.m. at the Knights of Columbus Hall on Bells Bay Road in Charlevoix.

Four door prizes will be awarded and music will be provided by the Northwest Academy Jazz All Star. And, for those who desire, swing dance instructions will be available.

Charlevoix pool will offer kayak safety class

The Charlevoix Area Community Pool will offer a Kayak Safety and Rescue Class from 7-10:00 p.m., May 23 at the pool.

Kayaking is a great way to enjoy Northern Michigan's waters. Given Michigan's ever changing weather and chilly water temperatures, paddling conditions can quickly become challenging. It is important to develop and practice your ability to rescue yourself and others when capsized.

The goal for this class is to develop solid kayak rescue skills in the "comfort" of the pool. By learning and practicing the rescues in the pool, you can refine your technique for the coming paddling season. During this three hour class, the following issues and skills will be covered: 1) safety concerns and preparedness, 2) safety equipment, 3) Eskimo bow rescue, 4) partner rescues, 5) self rescue with paddle float, 6) high and low bracing techniques, 7) introduction to towing techniques.

This class is for the beginner who wants to develop their rescue skills and will provide an excellent opportunity for advanced paddlers to refine their rescue techniques and bracing skills.

This course will be taught by Wil Cwikiel. His formal kayak instructor training has been through the British Canoe Union.

Cwikiel is also a water resource program director for the Tip of the Mitt Watershed Council and leads kayak trips throughout Northern Michigan.

The fee for this course will be $25. Those without their own kayaks can rent them for the evening for an additional $25.

To sign up or find out more, call the pool at 547-0982.

Baseball team finds tough conference start

By ALLEN TELGENHOF
Sports writer

With an 8-1 non-conference mark, Charlevoix moved into play in the Lake Michigan Conference last week and found the going a little rockier, splitting doubleheaders with East Jordan and Elk Rapids.

The Rayders opened their week with a resounding sweep over non-league foe Ellsworth. Charlevoix took the opener, 17-2 and the nightcap, 9-4. Sophomore Kreg Wager picked up his second varsity win in game one, throwing a two-hit, nine-strikeout gem.

Matt Kilkenny was the winning pitcher in game two with relief help from Matt Horon. Jeremiah Teuscher led the potent Rayder hitting attack with a triple and single in game one and a double in game two.

Charlevoix drew a tough assignment for the league opener last Thursday as previously undefeated East Jordan came to town.

In the first game, Horon supplied all the offense Chris Loper needed with a three-run homer in the first inning.

Loper silenced the Red Devil bats, yielding only one hit, walking two and striking out 10 for a 3-2 Rayder victory. Loper's record is now 3-1 on the year. Mike Kochanny had two hits for Charlevoix.

A bout of wildness for Jeremiah Teuscher in the second game led to a big second inning and an early 6-0 East Jordan lead.

The Rayders gamely scratched their way back in it, fighting off a lightning delay in the process, but came up just short, 8-4.

"We dug too deep of a hole too early in the game," coach Pete Scholten commented.

"I was real happy to see our bats wake up in the third inning. We showed we weren't willing to give up."

Those bats fell back into a slumber, though, when Charlevoix traveled to Elk Rapids on Monday. In the opener, Elks hurler Eric Miller stymied the Rayders, allowing only a Nick Cole double en route to a 5-0 victory.

In the nightcap it was a different story as the Rayder hitters backed the solid pitching of Dennis Avery and Horon with 13 hits, including a few long balls for a 13-5 win. Charlevoix broke open a tight 4-2 game with four runs in the fifth and five in the sixth.

Avery and Horon combined on a two-hitter. Horon connected for two home runs, a solo shot in the third and a two-run blast in the sixth. Matt Kilkenny hit a three-run homer and had a single as well. Rob Boss got things going with a two-run shot in the second. The Teuscher brothers combined for five hits and four RBI (Nate, three hits, one RBI; Jeremiah, two hits, three RBI).

After the game Scholten said, "I was real pleased to see our kids bounce back the second game. We really hit the ball well."

The Rayders (10-2 overall, 2-2 conference) will host conference rival Harbor Springs on Thursday.

Softball team wins one, but loses two

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

The Charlevoix Rayders Varsity Softball team traveled to Indian River on April 28 for the Indian River Invitational where they went one and three for the day.

"I thought they did real good seeing as how we had nine varsity players gone because of school trips, graduations and other family events," head coach Phil Butler said.

Tasha Morrison almost pitched a no hitter in the first game of the tournament against Rudyard. Morrison allowed one hit and struck out eight batters. Aside from a good defensive show the lady Rayders were also getting their bats around.

Contributing to the 16-1 win over Rudyard were Candace Boss who had three hits, Tasha Morrison with a pair of hits and three runs batted in and both Maggie Kantola and Natasha Kleiber with two hits.

In game two of the tournament, the Rayders were shut out by a tough Sault Ste. Marie team. Rayder pitcher Crystal Meredith allowed 13 runs to score. The Rayder bats were quiet, the only hits of the game came from Natasha Kleiber who made contact twice but was unable to find home plate for a score.

In game three the Rayders battled Onaway. Things looked bleak in the first couple of innings when the Rayder team found themselves down by five runs. But the girls rallied back to come within one. Time constraints ended the game with a final score of seven to six.

"If we had more time we could have ended up in second or third place out of five instead of fourth. We were mounting a strong comeback against Onaway when time ran out," Butler said.

son, Crystal Meredith and Kaylee Kughman all connected for hits.

In the final game of the tournament the Rayders were shut out by the host team, Indian River Inland Lakes who went undefeated for the day and took home first place. The only hits in the 15 to nothing loss came from Kelly Ward and Amanda Boss.

The Rayders took on Elk Rapids away April 30 and will face Harbor Springs on May 3 at home.

Track teams compete at Clare Invitational

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

Now that they have a few meets under their belts, Charlevoix boys' track coach Ken Plude thinks his team is looking pretty good.

"We are improving a lot. We had a really good showing at Clare," he said.

The event he refers to is the Clare Invitational April 27. The Clare meet was only a individual meet and did not count toward the team's total standings.

So far the team has a record of 10-2 in dual meets.

At the Clare meet, Plude said Rory Gnatkowski set a meet record in the pole vault with a height of 12 feet, 10 inches. He added Gordie Selph, who took second at the Clare meet, also is doing a great job running hurdles.

Plude also commended the freshman/sophomore relay team, who almost set a meet record at the Clare Invitational.

As for the girls' team, many of them made impressive showings at the meet.

Some individual results were: Lexi Wilson tied for first place in the pole vault with a height of 7 feet, 6 inches. Kati Swenor came in third in the 100 meter run with a time of 5 minutes, 41 seconds. Swenor also placed fourth in the 3,200 meter run with a time of 12 minutes, 24 seconds. Liz Ulrich placed sixth in the 100 meter run with a time of 5 minutes, 47 seconds. Ulrich was also just behind Swenor in the 3,200 meter run with a time of 12 minutes, 27.93 seconds.

The teams' 1,600 meter relay team also placed fourth in the meet with a time of 4 minutes, 46 seconds.

Soccer team splits matches

By ALLEN TELGENHOF
Sports writer

The Charlevoix girls' soccer team split two conference matches this week and lost two in a week-end tourney.

The Rayders opened the week with a 5-2 win over Roscommon.

Danielle Vogelheim led the attack with two goals and two assists. Kelly Dreyer, Kate Madison, Abby Schaperkotter scored one apiece. Schaperkotter, Madison and Elissa Wood also added assists. Jennifer Rowe had seven saves in goal.

Coach Carol Madison said, "It was a team win, by far our season's best effort. We had excellent play on the defensive side of the ball by Jayne Murray, Kelly Zimmerman, Marie Serrels, Allysia McDonough and Shayna Drost."

With key players out with injuries, the Rayders lost two hard-fought games in the Alpena Tournament, 3-0 to Harbor Springs and 1-0 to Cadillac.

Against the Vikings, an early defensive error led to the only goal of the match. Charlevoix controlled the action, outshooting Cadillac 15-7 but directed all their opportunities right at the keeper.

Zimmerman played well in her first experience in goal, making 19 saves on the day. Murray and Schaperkotter were named to the All-Tournament team.

Returning to conference play on Monday, the Rayders returned to their winning ways with a 2-1 victory at Houghton Lake.

Charlevoix scored early when a Schaperkotter cross was deflected by Dreyer to a strong left footed shot from 20 yards by Libby Withrow.

The Rayders controlled the action throughout the first half but were turned back on numerous occasions by strong goalkeeping. Houghton Lake knotted the score on a breakaway in the second half before Vogelheim put Charlevoix ahead to stay with a header off a corner kick by Serrels.

Charlevoix outshot Houghton Lake 16-9. Zimmerman (two saves) and Elissa Wood (seven saves) shared the win in goal.

Madison stated that McDonough, Katie Romig and Serrels continued their strong defensive play.

The Rayders are now 3-3 in the Northern Michigan Soccer League and 3-5 overall.

Charlevoix hosts Petoskey on Wednesday.

Parents warned to watch out for 'huffing' signs

Many parents worry about their children coming into contact with illegal drugs like cocaine, heroin and marijuana in school or even worse on the streets in their communities.

But what some parents don't know is there are other far more accessible and legal substances in their homes — right under the kitchen sink — that can be just as hazardous to a child's health as illegal drugs when they are used improperly.

Abuse of common household products such as paint thinners, spray paint, shoe polish, rubber cement, glue and typewriter correction fluid, often called "huffing" or inhalant abuse, has gradually increased among the teenage population since the 1980s.

According to a nationwide survey done by the American Academy of Pediatrics, teenagers say about one-quarter of their friends have used inhalants.

And because inhalants provide the same high as illegal drugs, but are far more accessible and inexpensive, they are more likely to be abused by children and teens, especially boys.

Further, the effects of that cheap high, even after one use, can cause serious side effects including brain damage and in some cases it can result in death.

To increase awareness about the potential dangers of inhalant abuse, the University of Michigan Health System's Teenager and Young Adult Program is working to inform parents and their children about its dangers and the signs to look for if they suspect their child or friends may be "huffing."

Since inhalants are volatile substances that work to stimulate, then depress the central nervous system, breathing and other body functions, "huffing" even once can be fatal, says David Rosen, M.D., M.P.H., director of the Teenage and Young Adult Program at the U-M Health System.

"Inhalant abuse is particularly frightening to physicians because we don't have to wait for kids to become addicts before we see the effects it can have — and it often happens the first time someone uses these substances," Rosen said.

"Huffing" involves saturating a piece of cloth with the product or pouring the product into a paper bag where it quickly evaporates. By doing this, explained Rosen, the abusers can

David Rosen, of The University of Michigan Health Systems

inhale the product's fumes to get high.

That high can often be a gateway to future drug use like marijuana, LSD, cocaine and heroin, even though inhalants are not being drunk, ingested or injected like many of these illegal substances.

"It's a well supported theory that boys who start using these drugs are certainly more likely than boys who don't use them to go on and use other drugs after inhalants," Rosen said.

But, before that potentially deadly shift occurs, there are warning signs and symptoms that parents can watch for and be aware of if they suspect their child might be using inhalants. If a teenager is "huffing" there is often a distinct odor from the inhalant substance on their clothing.

Many abusers also will develop a rash or sores around their mouth from using a paper bag saturated with the inhalant. Another warning sign is an unusual number of bottles or cans of inhalants in a teen's room.

"Kids may not feel as compelled to hide the evidence of what they're using as they would if they had marijuana, cocaine or some other illegal drugs," Rosen said. "Be suspicious when you start seeing changes in behavior, their relationship with you, school performance or in their peer groups. Whether it's inhalant abuse or some other drug, this behavior should prompt some evaluation and intervention."

Other behavior changes may include social isolation, withdrawn behavior, deteriorating school performance, an unusual insistence on privacy and new friends who do not visit your home.

If a parent suspects that a child or teen may be abusing inhalants, Rosen recommends that they consult a physician and attempt to confront their son or daughter about the problem, especially if professional assistance is needed immediately.

Possibly one of the best ways to prevent inhalant abuse, Rosen adds, is through parental supervision and on-going discussions about the effects of drugs.

Teenagers and preteens, especially those who have low self-esteem, poor judgment or little information about the potential consequences of using drugs, are most likely to become involved with inhalant abuse.

So, Rosen encourages all parents to begin discussing the dangers of inhalants and drugs with their children at a very early age.

"It's not too early to begin telling your kids about the dangers of drugs when they're 7, 8 or 9 years old," he said. "But certainly by the time they are in middle school, when these drugs may begin to be abused, there should be discussion about the specific dangers associated with these drugs."

Beaver trappin'

Since last month was the traditional beaver trapping season, Charlevoix resident Clayton Smith showed off some of the equipment he used to use in his old trapping days. Smith spent many years in the woods throughout northern Michigan trapping the furry critter. At left are some of the traps Smith would use to catch the animals. On one such trip, Smith recalls a time when he and a friend named Cal were on Deer Creek trapping a nuisance beaver for the Department of Natural Resources on Deer Creek. The two men paddled up the river in a canoe until they came to a trap staked deep into the water. Smith got on shore to steady the canoe as Cal pulled on the stake, but Cal pulled so hard he flipped the canoe and took a little dip.

According to Halverson, as of Monday night, the murder weapon has not been found, nor have any witnesses to the actual stabbing. State police dive teams searched the marina area Monday morning, without success.

They are looking for a hunting-type of knife with a wide blade. The length of the knife is unknown at this time.

According to an affidavit of probable cause filed with the district court, a boater in the group with Cook reported seeing someone walking by his boat on the dock around the time of the murder and heard the person in question apologizing as Cook got out of his boat and asked them to leave.

The affidavit further states the boaters then heard Cook screaming he had been stabbed and seeing someone dumping something out of a canister of some sort from the end of the dock. The witness described this person as a man who had been bothering the group earlier and had identified himself as "Tom."

As the witness got out of his boat to investigate, he stated he saw a man running down the street and chased him for a couple of blocks, the affidavit stated.

According to the affidavit, using identification provided by witnesses, police searched the area and eventually had a name for the suspect, which was Shulick, and went to the Antrim Street apartment the suspect lived in.

Upon searching his home, police found a bag of clothing that appeared to be bloody, a knife sheath in the front yard and a handwritten note signed "Love Tom," addressed to a "Dearest Nicki" and expressing regrets for "everything that happened last night" and for harming another person "even if it was in self defense," the affidavit stated.

The affidavit stated Shulick has a girlfriend named Nicole. Shulick was arraigned in district court Monday morning and charged with open murder. A preliminary hearing has been set for 3 p.m., May 14 and a bond of $1 million was set.

A not guilty plea was entered on his behalf. Shulick is lodged in the Charlevoix County Jail.

Charlevoix attorney Mark Muniak has been named as his attorney.

Halverson is asking anyone with any information on this crime to please contact city police at 547-3258.

Drug survey indicates use being overlooked

By JULIE MUSILEK

A survey conducted by Hazelden, a Minnesota-based group that specializes in substance use issues, found gender stereotyping in three Charlevoix County schools is a major factor directing patterns of student drug use.

Hazelden's findings may have shocked some — 60 percent of twelfth grade students surveyed from Charlevoix, East Jordan and Boyne City schools had drunk alcohol in the last month. But David Wilmes, the director of training and consultation for Hazelden, said, "The numbers aren't critical. What is, is the story behind the numbers."

Wilmes, presented his findings from the survey that was filled out by students in grades six to 12 at the three schools to a group of 30 parents and students who gathered at the American Legion in Charlevoix on May 2. During the presentation he revealed the sad story those numbers tell.

Wilmes said substance abuse in our community is overlooked way more than it should be.

Trends show that a strong family support system protects students from alcohol or other drug use problems. But, in Charlevoix County, the survey says this rule of thumb does not hold true for males and is accurate for females.

Almost 86 percent of males in the dependence-risk group reported having strong family support while only 26.7 percent of females reported strong family support.

"There is a difference in how females are responded to. You overlook male use, there is a built in denial, 'boys will be boys,'" he said.

Wilmes said that it is critical for Capital projects to start this year

"Major capital improvements" is the name of the game in the City of Charlevoix in 2001 — some are already underway, but just after Labor Day you can expect to see construction kick into high gear.

Of the 16 projects slated for 2001, 13 fit neatly into two categories: recreation renovations and utility construction and reconstruction.

Recreation changes you can expect to see include upgrades to Michigan and Depot beaches, Veteran's Park and the first step toward the East Park makeover.

Long awaited Depot Beach improvements will start after Labor Day. City Manager Mike Wiesner said the fix up will include installation of a new sprinkling system, new restroom facilities, landscaping and trails.

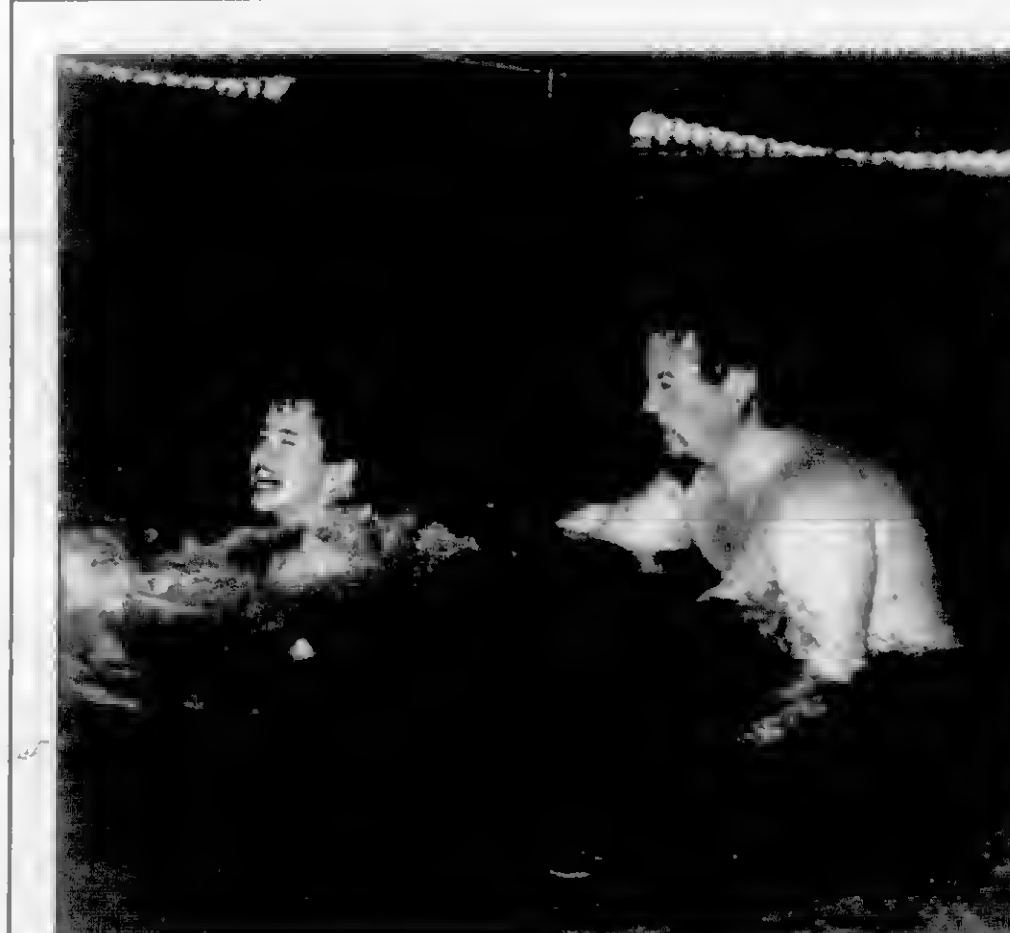

Bids for changes planned at Depot Beach will be packaged to include Lake Michigan Beach improvements.

Michigan Beach changes will start just after Labor Day. Wiesner said he doesn't think the beach will have to close for construction. For more information on the Michigan Beach changes see page 3.

First on the city's list of "to do's" to prepare to renovate East Park is the acquisition and demolition of the Wharfside building.

Wiesner said, "The city is in the middle of negotiations for an option agreement. I would like to think we would acquire the building some time this fall."

Police find murder weapon

The Charlevoix City Police have found the knife they believed was used in the murder of Scott Christopher Cook, 24, of Elk Rapids, April 29 at the Charlevoix Municipal Marina.

Police arrested Charlevoix resident Thomas Aryon Shulick, 21, for the crime.

According to a press release issued by Charlevoix Police Chief Dennis Halverson, acting on additional witness information, the Michigan State Police and Charlevoix police have determined the murder weapon was a kitchen knife with approximately an eight inch blade and black plastic handle.

It was originally found in Shulick's apartment, Halverson said. The knife has been sent to the Michigan State Police Crime Lab in Grayling for further forensic examination.

Police allege Shulick used the knife to stab Cook in the abdomen once after a confrontation around 2 a.m. April 29 in the marina. Cook died around 4:30 p.m. that day.

Shulick was charged with open murder and is being held in the Charlevoix County Jail. His preliminary examination is scheduled for 3 p.m. on May 14.

Correction

In last week's story about the April 29 murder in Charlevoix on page 1, the time of death for Scott Christopher Cook was incorrect. It should have stated Cook died at approximately 4:30 p.m.

Renovations to beach to start after Labor Day

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

Thanks to funding from the Department of Natural Resources (DNR) having fun in the sun at Michigan Beach Park, located off of Park Avenue, will soon mean more than sun bathing and swing sets.

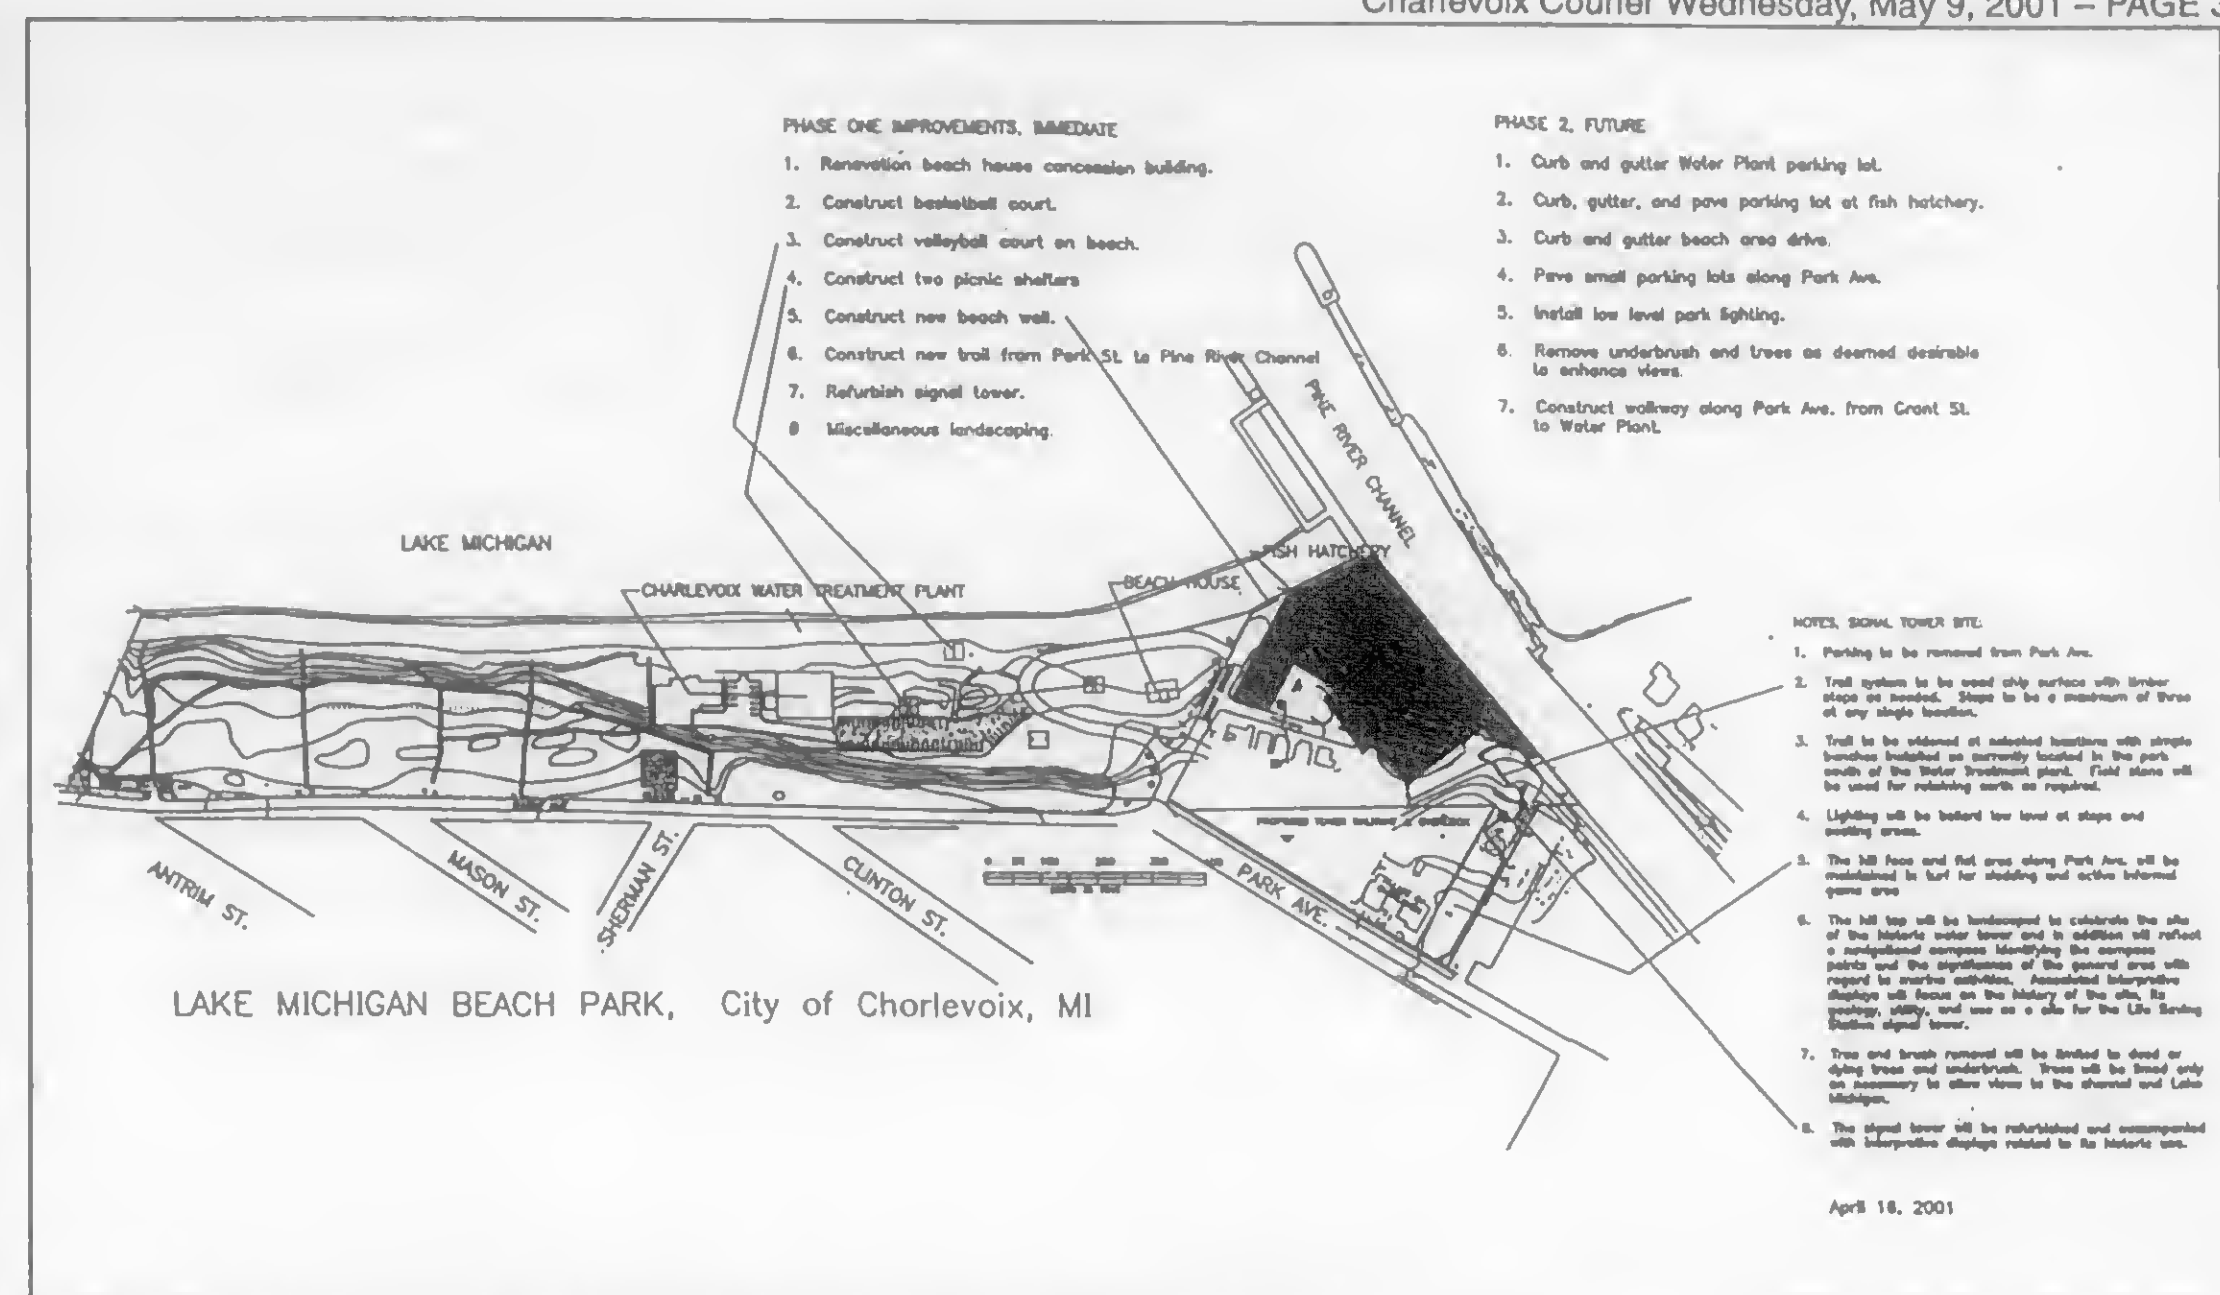

The DNR recently entered into a trust fund development project agreement with the city of Charlevoix that will fund, 64 percent ($270,100) of the beach renovation's expense.

City manager Mike Wiesner said that the city will fund $152,600 — the remaining cost.

Plans for renovations divide the project into two phases.

Phase one will include the addition of a picnic shelter, the removal and replacement of the beach wall, construction of a new trail from Park Street to the Pine River Channel, refurbishing of the old signal tower, new basketball and volleyball courts, reconstruction of the concession/restroom building and miscellaneous landscaping.

At the April 16 city council meeting Charlevoix resident and attorney Scott Beatty came forward on behalf of Park Avenue residents who opposed the construction of a viewing platform to be located off of Park as part of the renovations.

Beatty thanked the council on behalf of the residents for amending the plan to integrate wood chipped trails and benches as opposed to a platform. However, he also requested that the neighbors be included in the trail construction decision making process.

He explained part of the residents' continued concern surrounding the area where the trails will be, is due to the possible intrusion of lighting that will be installed at locations around the trail.

Plans for phase two of the project are less for recreational use and more for improving the park's infrastructure.

During phase two, the city plans to curb and gutter the water plant parking lot and the beach area drive; curb, gutter and pave the parking lot at the DNR fish hatchery; pave the small parking lots along Park Avenue; to install low level park lighting; and to construct a walkway along Park Avenue from Grant Street to the water plant.

Wiesner said phase one construction will begin at the park after Labor Day. He added that he doesn't believe the construction will close the beach at any point.

The city and DNR agreement states that the time period allotted for project completion is from Sept. 1, 2000 to Sept. 1, 2002.

DeVries leaving city council for move to Arizona

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

First ward city councilman and Charlevoix County native Bernie DeVries, 55, has decided to resign his seat on city council and trade in the great lakes for the desert.

On May 10, DeVries will leave his home in Michigan behind en route to Arizona where he'll meet up with his son, his grandchildren and "a great job."

"It's time for a change. I've thought about moving through the years and recently a job opportunity was offered that I couldn't pass up," he said.

Throughout his time in Charlevoix, DeVries was very politically active, serving on council (first and third wards) and the city planning commission — but leaving politics isn't what he'll miss the most.

"Charlevoix is always going to be my home. I'll miss the summer months the most," he said.

However, DeVries will be back. In fact, he said that his master plan would allow him to "have the best of both worlds," spending summers in Charlevoix and winters in Arizona.

"This is a time in my life where I am ready to make a change. I'm going to miss Charlevoix and miss serving on council," he said.

Charlevoix Mayor Alvin "Butch" Russell said that three people have showed interest in the first ward seat. Of the three possible replacements two are ex-councilmen and one is an ex-mayor.

"Bernie did a very good job, that is why he was re-appointed," Russell said.

He added that at the May 7 city council meeting it was decided that former councilman Bill Haggard would replace DeVries.

You can fight city hall, especially if you are on the inside.

We hear the complaints from citizens all the time. "They don't care about the city....they don't care about the voters....they all have an agenda.... they are all part of the 'Good Old Boy' network in Charlevoix," are commonly heard from the mouths of angry readers of the Charlevoix Courier when it comes to city government decisions.

Everyone seems to have an opinion on the decisions made by their local politicians and they are very willing to share it. But, doing something about it is a different matter.

"You can't fight city hall," they say. Well, we say, "Yes you can!"

How? By being a part of the action and getting a seat on the city council yourself.

what you will about our current city council, but they have one thing that many people don't have: The guts to run for a political office, to subject themselves to criticism and the desire to serve the community they live in.

For their participation in the political process we salute them and we encourage more people to participate in this process, especially those who complain about city government.

And now is your chance! This November, three council seats, and the city clerk seat, are up for re-election. To get in on this action, participants must turn in a petition with at least 25 signatures by May 15 to the Charlevoix City Hall.

So, it is time to quit your complaining and do something about it by participating in the democratic process.

Honor the trees by planting another one for the world

Roger Knutson
'Ear to the ground'

Among the holidays that help to give us structure to our year and remind us that a season has come around again, Arbor Day probably is not high on people's lists.

It may not even be on the radar screen for most. Arbor Day is coming around again and I plan an annual appeal until it gets the recognition it deserves. There could be Arbor Day sales downtown. With appropriate help, Arbor Day could be as commercial as many of the other holidays. I can only hope.

As a community, Charlevoix does manage an annual celebration of that day, set aside by hardy Nebraskans who knew how important a tree could be. The week of May 14 through May 19 is designated this year as Plant-a-Tree Week. There is even an official Mayoral Proclamation to that effect with an abundance of "Whereas" and "Be It Resolveds."

Mayor resolutions alone are not power enough however. We need a large number of personal resolutions about either planting or encouraging the planting of trees during that annual week. The last time I checked there were somewhere above a hundred nationally declared weeks for this or that cause, and it is easy to say, "Well, another official week." However, in Charlevoix, we only have the one designated week each year. Plan to celebrate Arbor Day and Plant-a-Tree Week with your friends and relatives. Have a tree planting potluck in your neighborhood. Have a telethon and have people call in with their pledges to plant so many trees. Maybe a 5K Run For the Trees is what we need.

Seriously folks, the city of Charlevoix is willing to help with your tree planting efforts. Trees are available from the city for planting on the streetside easement. If you have an appropriate site at the front of your property, the city will plant a tree of your choice on that spot. Not every kind of tree is available, of course, but there is a nice selection; first come, first served. Call the city manager's office at 547-3270 for further information. You need only pledge to care for the tree during those critical first years.

Planting and caring for a tree can be considered an act of genuine charity, providing cleaner air, cooler climate and enhanced property values, not for yourself but for someone possibly not yet born. When you plant a tree you have to take the long view. If cared for in its first years, the chances are good that the tree you planted will be around for a century or more, helping all of us for all of that time.

In less sophisticated times than ours, trees were commonly associated with deities. The Sycamore was sacred in ancient Egypt and the Date Palm in Babylonia. The Greek Zeus had a grove of Oaks and the Goddess Hera was to be found in Willows. Yggdrasil, the Great Ash of Norse mythology, was said to have given birth to the first Norsemen. Prince Siddhartha, who became Gautama Buddha, is forever linked to the Bo Tree. There is hardly a culture in the long march of human history that has not revered some tree as the source of life. Ecological research reinforces those ancient beliefs. We are not talking about oxygen and carbon dioxide, but we are saying much the same thing that those old cultures said about trees.

Plant a tree, participate in the history of humanity.

Column rebuttal

Editor:
I see that you are at it again — dumping on the public library board.

You accuse them of hiding their actions from the public. The truth is that the board conducts its business at monthly public meetings. It is at these meetings where the public can address the board and where the board hears reports from staff and others, discusses and debates library issues and takes official actions by majority vote. Minutes are taken at these meetings and are available to the public.

The library board meetings are probably too mundane to interest a rabid pit bull, muzzle chewing kind of guy like yourself. But, one would think that as a self-styled public watchdog, you would assign someone to cover these meetings.

Except for the president and secretary, who receive a token stipend for the extra work they do between meetings, members of the library board work without compensation. They do indeed work. They read all sorts of materials in preparation for meetings. They attend workshops held by the Library of Michigan and the Northland Library Cooperative. They visit other libraries to get ideas for improving ours. They attend Friends of the Library meetings. They spend time in our own library working and observing. Did I mention that they do all of this without getting paid?

I'm sorry that you are feeling left out of things because you have never bothered to attend a library board meeting or assign someone to attend. But that is no excuse for your hostile attitude toward these hard working, unpaid public servants.

Library board is wrong

Editor:
(An open letter to the Charlevoix Library Board:)

Dear Representatives of the People:

Although I will be unable to attend the meeting of May 10, I feel honor bound to express my dismay and disappointment at the actions of the Board. Our library has always been a place of peace and tranquility with the services found often only in larger populations.

You, as a board, have turned the library into a political football with personal agendas considered more important than serving as a representative of the people. Our librarians have served the needs of our community faithfully for over 25 years.

She has been fiscally responsible, yet kept our library at the cutting edge of technology, videos, books and tapes and special programs for all ages. The most valuable asset of Mary Beth Wallick is that she has changed with the times. Our library is well ready for the future. Over 19 years ago, I served on the library board and even then expansion of the library itself, as well as services for the next 20 years were of our paramount importance to this librarian.

To read of your secret papers for forced retirement is reprehensible. The library is a public entity and secret/under-the-table actions are a political nightmare. We the people have a right to the unabridged evaluations being public knowledge before you, as a board, decide that a forced retirement is in the public's best interest. Mary Beth has been a valuable director of the library for twenty-seven years. Her forced retirement is a travesty of justice and must be reconsidered in an open and timely fashion.

Keep Wallick

Editor:

I have used the Charlevoix Public Library for years. I began using the library where my bank now sits when it was the Carnegie Charlevoix Library. Mary Beth Wallick has always been helpful, gracious and accommodating. She would be a loss to the library and the community.

Joan Chodak

Support board

Editor:

You are barking up the wrong tree attacking the library board. Our library board members are not politicians, as the editor called them. They didn't campaign for these positions. They were sought out and asked to serve because of their knowledge and records of public service.

Already, as a result of the library board's efforts, there are positive changes underway at the library.

At last, there is a Friends of the Library. In their first year of existence, the Friends have made significant contributions. They cleaned up a cluttered basement area to provide space for a permanent used book sale which has already brought in nearly $6,000 for the children's section of the library. They provided funds for lockable display cabinets to secure the rare books in the Michigan Room.

The new extended library hours were a welcome change that we've needed for years. It is nice, finally, to be allowed to reserve books. These improvements were directives of the library board.

Why would the Courier print all of the libelous things that the librarian said about one of her board members? In your letters policy you state that you edit letters for libelous statements. You go on to say "We do not publish letters we judge are personal attacks." If you don't allow it in your letters to the editor section, why do you print the same kind of slander when it is spoken aloud to your reporter? It is no wonder that board members are reluctant to comment to a newspaper that will print something that someone says that someone else told her that someone overheard in a women's restroom. How can the victim of such slander possibly defend herself?

Why didn't you check out some of the librarian's claims which were easy to verify? For instance, she stated that Charlevoix is the "only" library in northern Michigan with a web-based, on-line, real-time card catalog."

An Internet search or a phone call to any of the libraries in surrounding towns would have told you that this is false. Most northern Michigan libraries have on-line card catalogs just like ours. She talks about her leadership in "deciding to make the move into e-books." If you had called other librarians, you would have learned that this service was recently offered to every public library in the state. The only leadership required was to return the form.

The Petoskey News-Review printed that the salary of the librarian is $49,000. How does this salary compare to that of other librarians in towns comparable to Charlevoix?

Our library board is working hard for the betterment of our library. We want them to know that they have our support.

Dismayed by board

Editor:

As long time homeowners in Charlevoix, we are dismayed to see the treatment being accorded librarian Marybeth Wallick. We have enjoyed the library for many years and find it a source of information and calm.

As a journalist, I, Suzy Farbmam, have used the Charlevoix library on numerous occasions and find its reference material and support staff to be helpful, courteous and professional. As private citizens, my husband and I have enjoyed reading materials in the library as well.

Marybeth Wallick has always treated us with respect and courtesy and has been unfailingly helpful. She brings an enthusiasm and professionalism to the library which should be rewarded.

We hope she will be treated with the dignity and respect she has earned.

New Miss Venetian to be crowned during festival

The Miss Charlevoix Venetian Scholarship Competition will once again be at this year's annual Venetian Festival.

Candidates for the competition must be between the ages of 16 and 22 as of the date of the competition and must either have a primary residence in the Charlevoix area or be a graduate of a Charlevoix area school. Entry forms will list other qualifications and entry requirements.

Dianne Phillips will chair the Queen's Scholarship Committee for the seventh consecutive year.

"The committee is very excited with the prospect for this year's competition, as the Venetian Board has once again increased the scholarship fund," said Phillips. "Major festival sponsors can really make the difference."

This year's winning candidate will be awarded a $2,500 scholarship, the first runner-up will receive a $1,200 scholarship, the second runner-up will receive a $600 scholarship and an additional $200 scholarship will be awarded for academic and extracurricular excellence.

Sponsorships of $200 per candidate will be required this year and must be submitted along with each application. Candidates are encouraged to contact a sponsor of their choice and local businesses are likewise encouraged to promptly select a candidate for sponsorship, as the application deadline is May 17.

Following the format established during the past few years, candidates will participate in interviews and perform speeches in front of a panel of judges from outside the Charlevoix area. The decision of the judges will be based upon the candidate's knowledge of Charlevoix and the Venetian Festival, poise and ability of candidates to express themselves and general presentation.

The coronation ceremony is tentatively scheduled for 7:30 p.m., July 27 at the Odmark Pavilion in Charlevoix's East Park.

Applications are available at the Charlevoix Area Chamber of Commerce office and must be returned no later than 5:30 p.m. May 17.

Book on Charlevoix hospital's history printed

Charlevoix Courier Wednesday, May 9, 2001 - PAGE 9

When did the new hospital open on the shores of Lake Michigan? How many people were employed at the hospital in 1930? When did the Intensive Coronary Care Unit open? Who was on the first board of directors at the hospital?

These and many other questions about the hospital are answered in a new book entitled, "Charlevoix Area Hospital, A History of Caring."

The book chronicles the hospital's illustrious history, from the very beginning in 1919 to the present, and even before the establishment of the institution with stories about the first physician in the area. Many photographs help to illustrate the stories that weave together the intricate history.

Charlevoix Area Hospital's rich history begins long before the doors of any facility were opened for the first time. It's a history that began many years before the first patient sought treatment in a wood frame home that was converted into Charlevoix's first hospital on Hurlbut Street.

Before the turn of the century, Charlevoix was a logging, fishing and farming community. Individual physicians, working out of their own homes, cared for these hard-working people. Doctors with names such as Armstrong, McMillan, Lewis, Duffy, Grate and Saltonstall provided the foundation on which the professional and exceptional reputation of the hospital was built and it proudly claims today.

To shed some light on what health care was like in those early years and to help gain understanding of the foundation on which the hospital's rich heritage was built, interviews were conducted with physicians, nurses, staff and volunteers from the hospital. Residents, family members of former physicians and friends also were interviewed to capture a glimpse of their past, and therefore, the hospital's past. By scouring the hospital's archives and researching through volumes of scrapbooks, the hospital's factual history also was compiled for the 72-page book.

Copies of this illustrated record of the hospital's history may be purchased in the hospital's Gift Shop, Bridge Street Books in Charlevoix, Boyne Country Book Store in Boyne City, Busy Bridge Antiques and Gifts in East Jordan, Horizon Bookstore in Petoskey and the Book Nook in Central Lake for $19.95.

Boy Scout Troop 11 selling elm trees for fund-raiser

Boy Scout Troop 11 of Charlevoix has started its annual elm tree sale.

These elm trees are part of the Johnny Elm Seed Program; a nationwide program to reintroduce the American elm tree to its former stature. This program is done in conjunction with the city of Charlevoix and the Shade Tree Council.

The scout troop takes care of the trees for the city and in return gets a portion to sell as a fund-raiser.

These elms have been planted along both sides of Elm Street in Charlevoix as part of service projects done by Troop 11 and many other places around the area.

Several trees have been purchased as a memorial or to commemorate a birth.

This species of the American Liberty Elm is resistant to Dutch Elm Disease and guaranteed for twenty years.

If you are interested in purchasing a tree or would like more information call Tim May at 547-0979.

Charlevoix couple to run 26 mile marathon

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

Ron and Theda Williams, of Charlevoix, will be celebrating their twenty-fifth wedding anniversary by running over 20 miles.

The couple will be taking part in a 26.2 mile marathon in San Diego, Calif. on June 3 to raise money to find a cure for leukemia and lymphoma.

Ron said, "My grandmother, Theda's father and sister all had leukemia. That was the genesis. And we are going to have our twenty-fifth wedding anniversary this year, so to celebrate we are going to do something crazy."

The husband and wife team also look at this as a unique way to try a new hobby.

"We get to do something we have never done before and raise money for (cancer research)," Theda said.

After talking with a friend that took part in the marathon last year, Ron and Theda decided this would be perfect.

But, in order to get ready for their anniversary celebration, Ron and Theda have been training every week with a coach assigned to them. They started out their first week early this spring running four miles.

This month they will be up to 20

"If I have to crawl on my hands and knees, I am going to get over that finish line."

Theda Williams,
Charlevoix resident taking part in marathon miles.

"The training has been far more grueling," Theda said.

Ron added, "This is the hardest thing, physically, I have ever done."

The course Ron and Theda will be running on June 3 will be open for eight hours. According to Ron, the fastest runners usually finish the 26.2 miles in "a couple of hours." Ron and Theda said they are just hoping to finish.

"If I have to crawl on my hands and knees, I am going to get over that finish line," Theda said.

There is no qualifying time for the marathon, but each runner must raise $3,600.

To raise this, Ron and Theda have sent letters to several people asking for donations. They currently have $5,300 between the two of them.

Ron and Theda will also be running in honor of leukemia patient Judith Scaloni, of Evart. The couple were given her name through the leukemia society hosting the fundraiser.

"We are serious about this purpose, but on June 4, I don't think I am going for a run," Theda said.

If you would like to help the Williams raise money for this marathon, please make a check out to the Leukemia/Lymphoma Society and send it to Ron and Theda Williams at 13322 Beechwood Road, Charlevoix, MI 49720.

Judge sentences teen Star vandals

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

The dust from a four man crime spree officially settled when on May 3, in the 33rd Circuit Court for the County of Charlevoix Judge Richard Pajtas delivered his orders.

"You have been involved in extensive criminal activity over a substantial amount of time. Home invasion has a devastating effect on a family that lasts a long time and getting a mailbox bombed can tear at a family," Pajtas said when he addressed defendant Scott Allen Reich, 18, prior to disclosing the details of his sentence.

In December of 2000 Reich, John Angus Graham, Daniel Lee Thomas and Rocky Lee Peters, all of East Jordan, made their way around parts of Charlevoix and Chippewa counties committing felonious acts.

According to testimony during the sentencing, members of the group bombed multiple mailboxes, broke into homes from where they stole personal belongings and vandalized the Star Community Building in Eveline Township.

All four lawyers representing the defendants claimed that their age in some way impaired their judgment. But when it came time for Pajtas to deliver sentences for Thomas and Reich, the severity of the crimes outweighed the defendant's immaturity.

He said that the defendant's age did show a need for rehabilitation in the sentence. But he added, "The sentence should also show other young people so inclined that there is a serious consequence for this type of behavior, that is it (the sentence) should be a deterrent."

Ultimately, Pajtas told both Reich and Thomas that the pattern of criminal activity they engaged in "My heart breaks for the families."

Gail Farley,
Representative for the Star Community Building

warranted a sentence to the Michigan Department of Corrections. Reich was charged with second degree home invasion, one count of malicious destruction of property, $1,000 or more but less than $20,000, one count of breaking and entering a building with intent to commit a felony.

Each count carries a hefty penalty. But, Pajtas ruled that the sentences would run concurrently, which means he won't have to serve each sentence individually. Reich will be in prison for a minimum of two and a half years and a maximum of 15 years and will undergo substance abuse treatment.

Prior to Thomas' sentencing, Charlevoix attorney Joe Hayes spoke on his behalf.

Hayes said, "If you sentence Daniel Thomas to the Department of Corrections you are going a long way toward throwing away any chance he has. The community, the prosecutor, his family, don't want to see this young man go to prison."

However, while on bond in this case, Thomas tested positive for marijuana and he has a prior criminal record for a larceny charge.

As Pajtas passed his sentence he told Thomas there are serious consequences for serious criminal behavior.

Thomas' face turned red, his arms were crossed and his head hung low. Pajtas levied the same punishment as Reich received.

The One You Can Recommend 24 Hour Emergency Service

MAY

What do you do if you find a stray dog?

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

You may hesitate to dial 9-1-1 to report a stray dog but those are the digits law enforcement officials ask you to dial.

In Charlevoix County 9-1-1 emergency dispatch fields canine related issues, whether it be a report of an attack or a stray. The emergency center then contacts Charlevoix County Animal Control Officer Julie Whitley who is on the job from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Whitley said every day she handles from four to five run-at-large and stray dogs. She picks the canines up and transports them to the Charlevoix County Stray Shelter, located next to the county humane society at 614 Beardsley Street in Boyne City.

Whitley said the reason behind the pick-ups is a 50/50 split — either the animals have been intentionally let loose by their owners or they are lost.

"99 percent of the time animals end up here because they have no collar and tags," Whitley said.

She said licensing your dog is easy. Pet owners can either stop by the county treasurer's office, on the bottom floor of the county building in Charlevoix or can pick up an application from a veterinarian and mail it in. All you need is proof of current rabies shots.

She said that a good way to remember to renew the license annually is every year around tax time, it's time to renew your tags.

The $10 licensing fee is low considering the fines you could face if Whitley gets a call.

Owners' animals without up-to-date licenses can be ticketed and face a $50 fine. If a dog is incarcerated at the shelter the owner is charged a boarding fee of $6 per day and for first timers, a $17 pick-up fee. Second time pick-ups have an increased fee to $20.

Leash laws are in effect in Charlevoix County city limits. In outlying townships what Whitley described as "owner control" is in effect.

"If you are out walking and you are comfortable enough with your dog to know that when a bike rides by your dog won't go after them, or won't run away from you into your neighbor's yard, then you may not need a leash," she said.

However, owner control may also be wrongly assumed by a pet owner. A testament to a dog owner's misinterpretation of their "control" are the eight to 13 calls Whitley receives each month in June and July after dogs have attacked a cyclist.

Volunteer day for Harbor

May 16 is Volunteer Day for Harbor Industries personnel at the Charlevoix Senior Center.

Over 20 employees have offered their time and efforts to rake leaves, wash windows, vacuum rugs and other spring cleaning tasks as a gift to the Charlevoix Community and the seniors.

In addition, Mike Hurchick will be the main cook for the evening fundraiser chicken dinner. The public is invited to come and enjoy this meal anytime between 5 and 7 p.m.

The schedule for activities and lunches will carry on as usual.

New Coast Guard chief takes over as Shull retires

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

After 20 years of service with the United States Coast Guard, Station Charlevoix Commander James Shull, 39, retired and handed the reins over to 35-year-old Detroit native John McLean.

"Three weeks shy of three years ago I stood here and accepted command and today I am relinquishing it," Shull said as he choked back tears while addressing the audience at the May 4 change of command and retirement ceremony.

Shull's career with the Coast Guard started in 1979 when he lived in Phoenix, Ariz.

Over his 20 years of service he worked with numerous stations including those in Duluth, Minn., Holland, Mich., Kenosha Wis., Sturgeon Bay, Wis. and Lorain, Ohio.

Shull met Dianna Miles while stationed in Holland and the two married on Sept. 14, 1985. The couple are the parents of three girls, Samantha, 12, Veronica, 9 and Rachel, 6.

Shull brought his family to Charlevoix from Ohio and assumed command of the local station on May 29, 1998. Shull said that he knew when he took the job that he intended to retire in three years and now he has.

However, as all who attended the retirement ceremony can attest to, Shull found that leaving the Coast Guard after 20 years was hard.

In an interview prior to the ceremony he said he'll miss the interaction with the people and highlighted major moments in his career like last summer's 100 year anniversary celebration and the Venetian festival's dual fireworks event.

"As I depart I can say that I have truly enjoyed serving the crew of Station Charlevoix as their officer in charge. It's good to know I'm leaving the station in good hands," he said.

"Charlevoix has grown on me so, I think I'll stick around."

Shull's retirement plans are to stay in Charlevoix and to work for the city. City manager Mike Wiesner said that Shull will act as a liaison between the city and the architect in charge of city hall renovations, monitoring the project.

As Shull steps out of uniform he leaves the crew of Station Charlevoix in the "good hands" of John McLean.

Commander McLean's Coast Guard service began in 1983. From 1983 to the present he has been stationed in Detroit, Port Huron, St. Clair Shores, Lorain, Ohio, and Cleveland, Ohio.

McLean moved to Charlevoix from Cleveland on April 23, 2001 after a January visit. He brings with him his wife, Cheryl, formerly of St. Clair Shores, and his two sons, Jake, 6 and Jared, 2.

At the ceremony McLean thanked Shull and the crew for a fantastic relief (welcome) week.

"I am very satisfied with the overall functioning of this unit," he said.

In an interview prior to the event McLean explained the breadth of his new responsibilities. "The commander is ultimately responsi-

He said he is looking forward to the camaraderie with the crew and getting involved with the Charlevoix community.

McLean will be closely involved in revamping the crew's living quarters at the station.

"If everything goes well I would like to retire right here also. We'll have to experience our first winter here first," he said.

Baseball team stays strong in conference

By ALLEN TELGENHOF
Sports writer

The Charlevoix Rayders kept pace in the Lake Michigan Conference baseball race with a double-header sweep over Harbor Springs last week, 10-4 and 4-1.

East Jordan leads the league with a 7-1 conference mark while Charlevoix is in second at 4-2 (12-3 overall). The Red Devils' only blemish is a loss to the Rayders.

Against the Rams, Charlevoix jumped out early scoring four runs in the first and four again in the second. Ryan Leitner clubbed his first career homer to go with a single and double.

Jeremiah Teuscher earned the win on the mound for the Rayders, going the distance, giving up only five hits, walking four and striking out six. Teuscher is 2-1 on the mound this season.

In the nightcap, Dennis Avery upped his record to 4-0, throwing four no-hit innings before his spell was broken in the fifth with a Harbor single to left.

Charlevoix again struck early, scoring two in the first before the Ram hurler settled down.

It was a pitchers' duel most of the way with neither side scoring again until the fourth when the Rayders plated one for a 3-0 lead.

In the fifth, Harbor broke up Avery's shutout and no-hit bids to cut the lead to 3-1 but Charlevoix scored an insurance run in the fifth.

Nate Teuscher shut out the Rams in the sixth to notch the save in relief.

For the doubleheader, Jeremiah Teuscher doubled in both games and drove in three runs. Matt Horon had a single and two doubles and three RBI.

The Rayders play at Traverse City St. Francis on Thursday, May 10.

Soccer team wins against Houghton

The Rayders returned to winning ways with a 2-1 conference victory at Houghton Lake on April 30.

Charlevoix scored early when a cross by Abby Schaperkotter was deflected by Kelly Dreyer to a strong left footed shot from 20 yards by Libby Withrow.

The Rayders controlled the action throughout the first half but were turned back on numerous scoring chances by the Houghton Lake keeper.

Houghton knotted the score on a breakaway in the second half before Danielle Vogelheim put the Rayders ahead for good with a header off a corner from Marie Serrels.

The Rayders outshot Houghton Lake 16 to 9.

Kelly Zimmerman (2 saves) and Elissa Wood (7 saves) shared the win in goal. Freshman Alicia McDonough, senior Katie Romig and junior Serrels continued their strong defensive play.

Charlevoix improved to 3-3 in the Northern Michigan Soccer League.

Tennis team looking good as tournament approaches

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

The Charlevoix High School tennis team is starting to come together.

While their game Monday night was canceled due to weather, the team, which is currently 2-5 overall, beat Grayling May 2, 4-3.

According to Coach Garth Miller, Jason Haas and Allen Brooks played very well in this match-up.

"They completely dominated all their flights," he said.

In the doubles, Miller said the team of Melissa McDonough and Molly Arnold are really playing strong. Miller said these two girls are really a great match.

Also having a good showing was the team of Michelle Martin and Bill Foster. Miller said this was their first time playing together, but they won 6-1 and 6-0.

Miller predicts the two will continue to play well into the upcoming tournaments.

Tournament play starts Friday at Boyne Mountain with the Lake Michigan Conference Championships.

Miller said the team, which came in last place during last year's tournament, is really looking to "come out of the cellar."

"We hope to break in the top three teams in the conference," he said.

Golf scholarship announced

Several lucky youngsters that participated in the Charlevoix County Junior Golf Association's 2000 summer program will be awarded scholarships to attend the prestigious golf camp at Ferris State University this summer.

Dean Davenport, executive director of the popular summer program, announced that the association's board members recently approved renewing the scholarship program with FSU and that upwards to six golfers will be selected by next week to receive the full scholarships for a week at the campus of Ferris State. Applicants must have participated in more than half of the past summer's sessions and be at least 12 years of age to be eligible. Application packets were mailed recently to nearly 50 youngsters that qualified for consideration.

Local PGA professional from the Belvedere, Steve Braun again added greatly to the camp "kitty" by raising over $4,100 by playing 100 holes in a single day and receiving pledges from local Junior Golf supporters.

Dennis LaCroix, board president said, "Steve's effort is greatly appreciated by all of us connected to the program. His dedication and interest in young golfers is typical of the excellent cooperation we get from everyone, including the courses that hosts our golfers' Dunmags, Antrim Dells, The Belvedere, Municipal and the Charlevoix Country Club."

Sam Supernaw, board treasurer said, "Our major fundraiser, the Supe Classic Golf Tournament has helped fund this project through the years and last year we again sent several area youngsters to a week's golf camp. It's been a great experience for them to learn more about the game and do so at a great setting like a college campus."

Softball action

Above, Tasha Morrison, of the Charlevoix High School varsity softball squad, winds up for a pitch in a recent game against Harbor Springs at home. The team faced Harbor Springs in a double-header last week, but lost both games 9-2 and 22-0. In the first game Natasha Killeber, Meghan Vogel and Krystal Meredith all hit singles. Katie Yager and Morrison hit a double each. In the second game, Morrison had a single and Meredith had a double. (Photo by Jeremy McBain)

City working hard on improving various areas

PROJECTS

East Park's neighbor, Veteran's Park, has also seen construction activity. The city's plans to bury utility lines and make the park more accessible are expected to be complete by Memorial Day.

The city had also planned to build a fishing pier off of Coast Guard Park located next to Bridge Park in downtown Charlevoix. However, Wiesner said the project estimate came in higher than expected and put the proposal on hold.

Aside from beefing up the parks the city also plans to better serve its visitors and residents by upgrading local utilities.

Garfield, Belvedere and Michigan avenues and the C & O Club will be getting major utility upgrades as part of one contract.

Michigan Avenue utility and street reconstruction is scheduled to begin in mid-August. The city is replacing the water main, installing a new storm sewer, reconstructing the street and adding new curbs and gutters.

Sewer and water line construction on Garfield Avenue will start in late July or early August. This project will coincide with both the Belvedere Avenue construction project and the C & O project.

Belvedere Avenue utility reconstruction will include rebuilding the water line that runs down Belvedere Avenue from Bridge Street to Alice. The project will construct a water line that will run from Alice Street to the entrance of the club, completing the water main loop. The plan also includes street resurfacing.

Wiesner said that a lack of side street access to Belvedere Avenue poses a challenge. He said the city currently has no plan to ensure access to businesses and homeowners but that one will be developed.

"We'll do our best to minimize the inconvenience," Wiesner said. He added that sewer, water and electrical system extensions at the C & O Club should also begin in late July or early August. This project will extend the sewer line down the railroad grade.

Wiesner said the C & O Club extension is part of an agreement the city made with Viatic. The company traded the city land off of Martin Road to be used for a new electrical substation in return for the sewer service. Wiesner said the water and electrical will also be run so the area only has to be dug up once.

City electrical superintendent Ed Whitley said construction of the substation at the Martin Road site will begin in June or early July.

You may have also recently seen Whitley working on Ferry Avenue. This is the start of miscellaneous system-wide electric line reconstruction. After power line work on Ferry Avenue is complete work on Mount McSaubia Avenue will begin.

Whitley said that after McSaubia and Ferry Avenues are done, power lines for the new sub-station will be built up Martin Road.

Whitley may also head up the reconstruction of power lines running from Hoskins, south, down M-66 in late summer. The city is currently conducting a study to gauge whether the run from Hoskins, south merits rebuilding the line.

Other major utility projects include the start of construction of the Marion Center Road sewer extension and Veteran's Park changes which will service the new high school. Wiesner said this extension will start by Labor Day and will be completed by Jan. 1, 2002.

"The plan is, the school will fund the construction and will be paid back a portion by fees charged to users," Wiesner said.

A major city construction effort that doesn't fit in the recreation and utility categories is an upcoming renovation to City Hall. As of now, the city has no established start date for the renovations. Wiesner said that he is hoping within a month to have more of a direction. He said that he anticipates city employees making the move to the old post office, located on Mason Street, sometime in the fall.

Other miscellaneous improvements include resurfacing of May Street which will be complete by Oct. 1 at the latest and a landscaping snow control effort along US-31 south, near the new Marion Center Road entrance, on the airport side.

The landscape is meant to replace the snow fence. The start of a path 10 feet wide has been built which will eventually be a walking/bike path that stretches to Fisherman's Island.

Teens sentenced for several crimes

JUDGE

Thomas' mother cried and hugged her son before he exited the courtroom.

However, John Graham's attorney, Bryan Graham, argued not to lump all the boys together. He characterized John as a follower, not an instigator and claimed that Reich and Thomas selected the mailboxes that would be bombed and the homes that were invaded.

Graham, 17, was ultimately sentenced to three years of probation and to serve 12 months in the Charlevoix County Jail.

The fourth of the boys, Rocky Peters, 18, also was characterized as a follower. Peters claimed he tried to contact the victims to apologize for his behavior but was unable to get their phone numbers.

Pajtas responded, "Understand that people who have had their mailbox blown up may not want a call from the culprit."

However, ultimately Pajtas accepted the follower argument and delivered the same sentence to Peters that he had to Graham.

The silence in the courtroom as the afternoon adjourned spoke volumes.

Even Gail Farley, representative for the Star Community Building the boys vandalized who attended the sentencing cried.

"My heart breaks for the families," she said.

SCRAPBOOK

The competitions between the city, township

Marilyn Boss

'Days gone by'

The Charlevoix area has always been a hot bed for debate. It has been said through the years by the people in Petoskey who put out the Petoskey News-Review, that as long as there was a Charlevoix in the area, they would never run out of news to print.

In remembering back over the past 50 years, it seems as though hardly a year goes by without a hot controversy of some kind taking place. It is either the Hatfields after the McCoys or the city after some township or vice versa. Each trying to outdo the other, usually resulting in something positive in one way or the other.

My memory takes me back to about 1964, when all the scuttlebutt was that Medusa was going to develop the 800 acres they owned on south point. The city fathers, seeing the possibility of a land grab, passed a resolution to try to annex Medusa's property to the city and they used the excuse that they would have more power to control the emissions from smoke and dust than the township would have. Their angle was to go through the County Board of Commissioners, as no one was living on the property and it adjoined the city on the tip of the airport runway, so that no one would have to vote on the issue.

My uncle, Clarence Rabach, was the township supervisor at the time and he accused the city of gerrymandering. He was also a county commissioner by virtue of being the supervisor and he had as good rapport with the other commissioners who were from various townships. He was considered one of the most influential members on the board because of his knowledge of the law.

In the Charlevoix Courier at the time, he said, "This is setting up a precedent that could end up with the city grabbing off a chunk now and a little later, and keep at it until there is nothing left of the township. If they want to do annexing, a planning commission should be appointed from both the city and township to work out a reasonable solution; and then it should be put to the people. After all, this is still a democracy, we thought, but when one unit of government can do this to another, is this democratic?"

When the Board of Commissioners voted on this, Clarence was successful in getting this land grab turned down by the commissioners.

Just a little more than three years went by and in November of 1967, the subject came up again. This time the city wanted to merge the whole township. The Charlevoix Regional Planning Commission was told that it should give top priority to merging the city and the township.

This was, of course, a hot issue again. Oscar Stroud, at the time, was a township trustee, and a member of the planning commission. He was quoted as saying, "The township may have to take the city in, if they (the city) don't get busy (on annexation)."

Knowing Oscar like we do, he knew good and well that the people in the township would in no way want to go into the city, but would probably vote to remain a separate entity. A lot of hot air was flying around town like there always is and when the vote was held, the township residents overwhelmingly voted to remain as they were. In the meantime, Clarence became county clerk and Oscar was elected supervisor and thanks to those two, we have a very progressive township that is the envy of others in the state.

In 1973, Oscar started putting in a township water system on the north side of town, which has since expanded to cover both sides of the township, without ever having to levy a dime's worth of taxes to pay for it. Also, in 1973, the city was going to up the fee they charged to cover the township for fire protection, so what did Oscar do? He contacted the City of Wyoming, who had two big four wheel drive fire engines and an old Ford engine, which he bought and started his own fire department.

Dale recalls riding down in Oscar's 1970 Cadillac to Wyoming to drive one of the engines back. He took three people to bring the three engines back in August of that year. The city of Charlevoix thought it was a joke and said they were going to continue to cover the township until at least the first of the year.

The Nazarene Church had a trailer for their minister to live in alongside the church and about two months after the township engines were stored in the garage, the trailer caught on fire and the city went to the fire. The township started their engine and it went forward only 80 feet and stopped in the middle of the road. To this day, the fire boys think someone turned off the gas line. The city department was making fun of them because their engine wouldn't go. Then they took a second engine, which made it to the fire. The two fire departments have been competitive ever since.

The township built bigger barns and bought more engines and the city built an engine house bigger than city hall and bought more engines, and so it goes. At least Charlevoix has enough fire protection to take care of the city of Grand Rapids and guess what? Charlevoix township now has a class 6 rating, which, if you live in the township, gives you a lesser fire insurance premium than if you live in the city, which has a class 7 rating.

The township engines are all bright yellow, loaded with lots of chrome trim and the city's engines are all bright red, loaded with lots of chrome trim. This goes to show what competition can do. Nowhere but Charlevoix the Beautiful.

Arnold: Librarian forced out Wallick retires from library at board meeting

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

After Marybeth Wallick, former director of the Charlevoix Public Library, accepted a retirement proposal offered to her by the library board, she walked into her office of almost 30 years and went "numb."

"If I wouldn't have signed it I would have walked away with nothing. It wasn't what I wanted or what my lawyer (Mark Williams of Traverse City) expected," she explained.

"I was told I had to take what they offered by the May 10 meeting or they would let my contract run out and I would get nothing."

The May 10 board meeting where the retirement proposal was finalized was animated as accusations were made and resignations were issued.

Almost 60 members of the Charlevoix community sat in the library basement. The group was a mix of board supporters and Wallick supporters. During public comment some demanded answers from the board and others defended their decision.

However, the board refused to respond to any questions posed by those in attendance. Board president Rick Brandt claims their silence was a reflection of part of the retirement agreement.

"Each individual referenced above (Wallick and board members) agrees not to make any statement to a third person, or in the presence of a third person who is not a party to this agreement, disparaging or defaming any other party to this agreement," the retirement agreement states.

When Williams, Wallick's attorney, was asked why the stipulation was included, he said, "It was beneficial to my client."

Historic area barn destroyed by fire

A twister in 1945 didn't take down the Parsons' Norwood township barn but a bolt of lightning on May 7 proved to be powerful enough to end its stay in Charlevoix County after over a century.

In 1945, a tornado shifted the barn off its foundation, but the Parsons family shifted it right back. Third generation Parsons family farmer, Dave Parsons said that he worked hard to maintain the structure.

He said the barn was somewhat of a landmark for several years, it sat proudly on a hill and was visible from US-31 South.

"It's a shame to see old barns fall by the wayside, they are part of our history. I've tried to keep it maintained and it ended up going down anyway," Parsons said.

Parsons grows and sells hay for animal feed on 170 acres of land in Norwood Township. He was working near the barn located off of Parsons Road on May 7 when he spotted billows of smoke.

Retirement contract clause keeps board silent

However, the relevance or existence of the stipulation was not explained to those who attended the meeting and many, including Marion Township resident Lonnie Jones, were unimpressed with their silence.

"I'm glad my representative (Linny Arnold) has the integrity to speak out on this issue. You (board members) are in a political position. We have the right to expect you to answer our questions," Jones said.

City of Charlevoix resident Virginia Olson asked, "On what grounds are you doing this?"

When Olson received no response from the board she said, "You have no grounds. I feel what we need is for the board to resign instead of letting them go on destroying our good library."

Arnold was the only board member that said she was considering resigning. If her decision is in fact to resign she will discuss the matter at the May 15 Marion Township Board meeting.

Charlevoix resident Connie Saltonstall disagreed with Olson's claim and said the board's actions were merited.

"Many of you haven't been at the meetings. There has been an agreement reached and that is where we are right now," Saltonstall said.

Norwood Township clerk Doris Pearl also spoke on behalf of the board and in support of Saltonstall's comments.

"I agree with Connie, a board is to set policy. This board has done an excellent job setting policy," she said.

During a five minute recess that followed public comment, five of the six board members in attendance refused to comment on their decision to issue Wallick a retirement proposal when questioned by the Charlevoix Courier.

But, when Eveline Township representative Anne Hansen was asked to comment on the outcome she deferred comments to board president Brandi and said, "I don't even know the truth of the matter."

However, moments earlier when a motion was made to accept the retirement proposal, Hansen voted in favor of the motion.

Arnold was the only board member who did not vote in favor of the motion to accept the retirement proposal. She said Wallick was "absolutely" forced out of her position.

Wallick was not the only library staff member out of work as a result of the actions taken by the board.

Jeanne McGhee who worked at the library for 16 years gave her two weeks notice at the meeting.

"I didn't know she was going to do that; she basically gave up her retirement," Arnold said.

Patty Brannon who said she has been a library user since she was 12 years old was also a staff member who quit.

"You can't work for people like that. I love this job. I don't want to quit, I love this library. They (the board) want to run the library and she (Wallick) is in their way. She does not want to leave and there is no reason why she should," Brannon said.

A third library staff member, Maxine Bergmann, also decided to turn over her position. According to Arnold, Bergmann has come in every Friday, but after the incident between the board and Wallick she decided May 11 would be her last day.

The two hour meeting adjourned at 5:30 p.m. and board members Mary Ann Chew, Betty Henne and Hansen spoke with the two remaining staff members, Shirley Kemp and Mardy Bohn.

Brandi said the board hopes to have an interim director for a month or two. When asked by a member of the audience if the public will ultimately play a role in choosing a new permanent director, the board did not respond.

Wallick will be taking time off. She said she would be of no use to another employer right now, since she is burnt out. So, for the next month she plans to tend to her garden.

However, once Wallick is ready to rejoin the work force she said she has been offered another position.

What does Wallick get in the contract?

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

On May 10, after almost three decades as library director, Marybeth Wallick signed a retirement proposal that ended her career at the Charlevoix Public Library.

She accepted the board's offer of five years of service toward her pension in the sum of $39,647 and payment of accrued unused sick time in the sum of $12,055.45.

Even after the struggle between Wallick, who wanted to continue at the library, and the board, who some claim railroaded her out of the job, board president Rick Brandi claims the retirement agreement is fair.

"I think it (the retirement contract) was fair. Fair for both sides. It recognizes the fact that Marybeth has worked there (the library) for 25 years," he said.

Brandi was willing to comment on the specifics of the contract, but was unwilling to discuss the board's rationale behind issuing the proposal.

He said that first of all the decision is a personnel issue and secondly the agreement itself has a clause that silences both parties.

Brandi said a discussion about the events leading up to the retirement is unnecessary.

"It's time to move forward and think positive and look at this as an opportunity to change directions for the library. Frankly, we have a lot of work to do. There is no time to look back, we need to move forward," he explained.

The library renovation or possible relocation is one such push forward the board is looking forward to but Brandi claims the project is temporarily on hold as a result of the conflict.

"There needs to be a healing period. I don't think we want to go to the community with a building proposal if there is conflict out there," he said.

Middle school band takes the state rating

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

The Charlevoix Middle School seventh and eighth grade band traveled to the State Band/Orchestra Festival in Big Rapids on May 5 and brought home top ratings.

Last year the band performed at the competition and returned with an "excellent" rating, after falling just short of the "superior" rating.

Middle school band director Ralph Rittenhouse said, "This year they would not be denied as they put together a challenging and varied program that showcased the abilities of each section in the band."

Rittenhouse added that the band worked diligently to prepare "Land of the Free" by Ed Harris, "Portrait of a Clown" by Frank Tichelli and "Mini-Suite" by Morton Gould. Rittenhouse said these pieces went well beyond the difficulty level required by festival rules and the judges noticed their efforts.

To kick off the competition the band performed for three performance room judges in the Big Rapids High School auditorium.

They then moved on to the Rittenhouse added that the band also received accolades from judges for their sound and balance.

The award winning band has scheduled local performances of their competition selections. For those interested in hearing the ensemble, concerts will take place at 1:30 p.m., May 17 at the Charlevoix Elementary School and at 7 p.m., May 24 at the Charlevoix High School.

A look back at the public meetings last week

Jeremy McBain

'Just a thought'

The week started out so hopeful for me.

Here it was, not only the week of my birthday, but a week where I thought I was going to actually see some moves toward totally open government in Charlevoix. On Monday night, I was informed that the Charlevoix City Council was going to discuss filling a vacant seat and on Thursday afternoon, the Charlevoix Library Board was going to finally face the public and tell us why they were going to force the librarian into retirement.

But, my hopes quickly faded. For the city council meeting, Courier staff writer Julie Musilek informed me that Charlevoix mayor Alvin "Butch" Russell not only had a person in mind for the vacant seat, he had a few people and council was going to discuss them. This was fantastic, because the last time someone was named to an open council seat, there was no discussion and no looking for a variety of candidates.

But, the next day I found myself shaking my head in disgust. It turned out, the mayor asked for suggestions for people to fill the seat and, instead of suggestions, council member Norman "Boogie" Carlson just went ahead and made a motion to place William Haggard on council. It was even quickly seconded by council member Bill Bellows.

No discussion, no looking for alternatives. But in this case, there was actually an alternative. Council member Gabe Campbell wanted Charlevoix citizen Bob Timms to fill the seat — Timms is a regular at all the council meetings, Haggard was not present for this meeting. But, Campbell was told he could not recommend Timms because Carlson had already made a motion — without discussion — for Haggard.

To make matters worse, we found out many of the council members already knew how they each were going to vote when it came to this open seat BEFORE THE MEETING! Yes, we had elected public officials discussing the public's business and how they were going to vote outside of a public meeting!

I can understand council picking a person for the seat in one meeting with little discussion, if there was only one candidate. But, in this case there were at least a couple of candidates and this vote took place without any discussion at all.

And all of the discussion on the matter seems to have taken place outside of the meeting.

I would like to salute Campbell and council member A. J. Witthoef for abstaining from voting on this premature motion.

Fresh from this disappointment, I accompanied Musilek to the Charlevoix Library Board meeting Thursday. For several weeks in this column, I have been demanding answers from the board for their actions against librarian Marybeth Wallick.

In several stories on the matter, the board would not discuss why they seemed to be trying to get rid of Wallick. They declined to answer questions on it and Wallick was even given a retirement proposal, that was not approved by the entire board.

Time and time again, the board and their supporters complained to me, "Let them have their meeting and let them discuss it in public at the meeting like a public body should."

So, here it was — the long-awaited public meeting.

Just as quickly as the meeting started, the board announced it had reached a retirement agreement with Wallick and they opened the floor for public comment. The board sat silently as members of the public demanded answers.

Then came the moment of the meeting set aside for board discussion on the Wallick matter.

But, no discussion came from the board. Wallick was forced into retirement that day, with no reason given in public.

It turns out, the retirement proposal had a stipulation that would not allow either the board or Wallick to make "disparaging" comments about the other. Brandi said that was part of the reason why board members did not comment.

I say, "Baloney!" The public was not looking for "disparaging" statements from the board that day, they were looking for answers. They did not get any.

All in all, open government did not occur last week.

Added to this is the attitude some public officials have toward this concept of open government. I have heard, since writing on this subject, several statements like, "This is the way it has always been done," usually followed by laughs. I even heard of one public official saying after the council meeting, "Boy, they really stuck it to Jeremy."

This is not a joke and if that is the way our public officials treat the concept of open government, then this is the sad time for democracy in Charlevoix.

But, maybe they joke out of nervousness as the light of public inquiry is being shined on city hall and all local governments. Maybe they realize the party is over, maybe they realize it is time to pay the piper.

Maybe there is still some hope.

Letters to the editor

Thank you

Editor:
Thank you.....I know the word has been used to the point of being trite, but for me, the word has recently taken on new meaning. As some of you may be aware, I have recently been removed as librarian for the Charlevoix Public Library. When all of this started to become public, I was quite sure that I would be "avoided" because of the controversy and conflict. The opposite has been the truth. I have been deeply moved at the amount of support and the number of well-wishers. Some are people that I thought did not know or care. People have driven by and given me a thumbs-up. Some have stopped their cars or trucks while I was walking down the sidewalk or across a parking lot to tell me that they support me. Some people have come in the library just to pat my hand or give me a hug and say that they support me and are praying for me. I have been walking down the sidewalk and people in the stores would give me a thumbs-up and a smile when I went by. The letters, notes and e-mails of support to me personally and to the paper have been put aside to be kept and reread on future occasions.

I am truly awed and humbled by the unflagging loyalty and support of my staff. They have been rock solid for me in all of this quagmire and I could not have lasted without them. I very much appreciate their patience with me as I have not always been "easy" to be around through this. They will always have a place deep in my heart.

There have been the professionals to help me go through this "process of being retired." It has been overwhelming. There are the "girls" in the school office, my lawyer and the other professionals who have handled this situation each in their own capacity, who were more concerned for me than using the situation to their own advantage. They have provided information and insight and support to get me through when my mind was not functioning at its best. When all else was said and done they were there with hugs and best wishes. The calls from other librarians who have called to ask if there was anything that they could do to help me meant very much.

My family, natural and adopted, brothers, sisters and nieces have been supportive to me with their phone calls, e-mails, presence and listening to me rattle on.

There are not adequate words to express how much a smile, a hand held for a minute, a hug, a thumbs-up, a quick question of "How are you holding up?" have meant to me. It makes me reflect on my life and how in the future I will be supportive to others. I have told myself in the past that a quick thumbs-up could not really matter to anyone. I was wrong — it does. All of you have kept my faith in people for me. Every day I ask God to give each of you a special blessing. He knows who you are. Thank you all very much.

Thoughts on the marina

Editor:

While there has been a lot of talk about getting public input via public hearings on the proposed city marina expansion, it seems a significant amount of "study money" and "consulting fees" are already being spent on a very specific project before any of those hearings are held. No wonder the community reaction has been so predictably negative.

Now, bear in mind many of us are still reeling from the decision made by our county elected officials to construct a massive multi-million dollar regional jail facility in the middle of a neighborhood with no public input whatsoever. And because there was plenty of taxpayer money already stockpiled, no vote was required. Now, of course, we will continue to shell out for ongoing operating costs that will be required to fund a facility three times the size of the previous jail. But that's another story; it just helps explain our lack of unquestioning enthusiasm.

Let's be realistic. Before any expansion plan will gain community support, it will have to be significantly scaled down to preserve and protect this community's most valuable asset. And frankly, I don't think adding a few dozen slips in Round Lake is the answer to Charlevoix's long term docking needs. What I think could be the answer is the addition of a well planned, new city marina located in the Depot Beach area. A facility which could be large enough to accommodate the needs of recreational and commercial boating interests 20 years from now. A facility which would take advantage of the amenities already there, such as parking, beach and playground areas, while are the same time helping alleviate an already congested yacht basin downtown, and, equally important, balancing growth in the community by directing at least some new development to the city's north side.

For the past several years, we have been able to rely on private marinas on Lake Charlevoix for much needed additional docking, both large and small. However, this year, demand for seasonal dockage is at an all time high; waiting lists have been created and there are no existing plans, let alone available property for any significant new private marinas to be constructed in the future. There will be very few, if any, docks available at those marinas for transient or short term use. And with that reality this year, you can well imagine the anticipated demand in a short 5 to 10 years from now. Think about it, what good will a mere 30 to 50 additional slips do for us in 2020?

I don't have a problem with spending money now on research, feasibility studies and the like, to properly channel the inevitable future growth in our community in a manner which is both functional, practical and aesthetically pleasing, while at the same time preserving the unique character of our community now and for many years to come. It is quite simply just a matter of focusing on the bigger picture. However, I do object to spending money without taxpayer input; to sacrificing our quality of life under the clever disguise of economic development; to new construction of public buildings and facilities, and the razing of existing buildings, simply because we have too many taxpayer dollars in the state, county or city coffers; and finally, to projects which strive to satisfy the dreams and schemes of a special interest few at the expense of serving the growing needs of the community at large.

Editor:

Right to Life is at it again, playing political games with the health care of Michigan's women and men.

H.B. 4655, drafted by Right to Life of Michigan lobbyists and introduced by an anti-choice representative, would prevent Planned Parenthood from receiving family planning funding because Planned Parenthood as an organization provides abortion services, refers clients to abortion providers and advocates for public policy which protects a woman's right to choose. Planned Parenthood does not use "family planning" funds for abortion services or advocacy. Federal audits ensure family planning funds prevent, not pay for abortions.

Economically disadvantaged residents will suffer from lack of health care, and all Michigan residents will pay the price in increased teen pregnancies, abortion and sexually transmitted infection rates if Planned Parenthood's funding is cut.

Let your legislators know you support all of Michigan's citizens' access to health care and that you oppose H.B. 4655.

Luepnitz retires as airport manager

By JEREMY MCBAIN
 Editor

After three-and-a-half years managing the municipal airport, Loraine Luepnitz retired from her post early this month.

Luepnitz's decision to retire comes at the same time as her husband's, Carl Luepnitz, retirement from his job as a veterinarian with Jensen's Animal Hospital.

Luepnitz said she has no plans for her retirement.

"We are looking forward to traveling and enjoying all the benefits of northern Michigan," she said.

The airport manager position is part time. According to Luepnitz, its duties include improving the image of the airport, improving the facilities and developing its assets to the community.

The position requires a license from the state, she added.

Luepnitz said her biggest achievement in the time she has been at the airport has been the building of a new airport terminal.

"It is probably the most significant thing the public can relate to," she said.

Upon her retirement, the city announced the hiring of her replacement, Karyn Brooks.

According to Charlevoix city manager Mike Wiesner, Brooks has some great managerial experience and should be able to learn the airport end of the job in a reasonable amount of time.

As for Luepnitz, Wiesner said, "She did a fine job for us."

Luepnitz did have one piece of advice for Brooks; be patient.

"I have found that it takes patience to accomplish things. You are always dealing with various levels of government," she said.

As a young boy he played and worked on the family farm along the shores of Susan Lake with his canine companion "Buster."

Among many happy memories Homer had of Charlevoix was fishing on Susan Lake. He would tie the fishing line around his big toe then row the boat around the lake until he had enough fish for dinner.

This practice stopped when he caught an unusually large pike by trolling this way and the soreness of the toe caused him to find other means of fishing.

In recent years he enjoyed renewing a friendship and communicated often with his cousin Ruth (Struthers) Berg and surely reminiscing about the "good old days" and growing up on Susan Lake.

Collection starting for Hospice Auction

The process of collecting hundreds of items for the June 8 Hospice Auction to fund hospice services in Charlevoix, Emmet and Antrim counties is well underway and some interesting things have already been donated.

For example, hospice director Margaret Lasater was able to obtain a certificate from the Mackinac Bridge Authority for two people to go up one of the bridge's towers — 552 feet above the water. Very few of these certificates are made available during the year and this one will go to the highest bidder.

Going up one of the towers is not for everyone. The bridge authority warns that one should be able to tolerate extreme heights, confined spaces and be physically capable of climbing a ladder of 40 feet.

An alternative item to bid on is a winter raft trip down the Jordan River, complete with a snowshoe hike. The raft trip is being donated by Jordan Valley Outfitters of East Jordan.

The auction will begin at 5 p.m., June 8 at the Boyne Mountain Convention Center.

A donation of $20 provides entry to the silent and live auctions, hors d'oeuvres and a $500 grand prize.

Auctioneers Jeff Macfarlane and Jim White will handle the live auction.

Auction tickets are available from Boyne Country Books in Boyne City, Busy Bridge Antiques in East Jordan, the Clothing Company in Charlevoix and at the door the night of the event.

5K Run/Walk for pool to be June 2 at country club

The Charlevoix Area Community Pool (CACP) will have its Seventh Annual 5K Run/Walk and 10K Run starting at 9 a.m., June 2 at the Charlevoix Country Club.

May 29 is the pre-entry deadline. The race entry fees are $10 and $12 on the day of the race. Registration on the day of the race will be open at 8 a.m.

All participants who are pre-registered will receive an official race

T-shirt.

Medals for first, second and third places will be awarded in each age group for both men and women. Medals will also be awarded to the top two finishers, male or female in both the 5K and 10K races.

Proceeds from the event will go to the pool.

For more information or to receive an entry form contact Al Gooch at the pool, 547-0982.

HEALTH

Some choices for anesthesia in the delivery room

Mike MacMillan, Charlevoix Area Hospital

'Your health'

Congratulations, you are having a baby! It is an exciting and probably a little frightening time in your life.

You will have many questions about what is happening to your body, how your baby is developing and, as the pregnancy progresses, how uncomfortable delivery will be. The best source to receive answers for these questions will be your obstetrical physician.

When it comes to using anesthesia in childbirth, most women will fall into one of three categories: those who are quite certain that they will want pain relief, those who are unsure of their pain relief options and those who prefer to give birth "naturally," without any pain relief.

No matter which category you fall into, it is important for you to know how anesthesia and pain relief is used in labor and delivery. Even if you fall into the last category, remember, it is a woman's privilege to change her mind. No two women experience childbirth in quite the same way, so it is important to keep your options open. Every woman should be prepared for the possibility of needing an anesthetic.

Obstetrical anesthesia is different from any other type of anesthesia in that there are two patients involved, you and the baby. It is important that both individuals be taken into account when discussing anesthesia options.

Another factor that we consider is that labor is unpredictable. It can range anywhere from relatively quick and easy to painful and exhausting. Everyone experiences pain differently. Only you will know the level of pain you are experiencing, you should never feel guilty for asking for pain relief.

The goal of an anesthetic in labor is to provide enough relief to allow you to deliver your baby with a minimal amount of pain and anxiety, leaving you free to fully participate in the experience. It is also important that you are able to push when the time comes. The anesthetic should not stop contractions or make your baby sleepy.

There are several different forms of anesthesia that are appropriate for childbirth. They may be used independently or in conjunction with one another. Let me stress that the decision to use a particular type of anesthetic must be decided upon between you and your obstetrical physician. Your obstetrical physician has the experience to assess the progress of labor, the condition of you and the baby, and make a recommendation for the appropriate method of pain relief.

Sedatives or narcotics administered as an injection or intravenously may be used during the early part of labor. These will help to reduce the pain of labor but will not eliminate the pain completely. They are also used to ease the anxiety that sometimes accompanies the delivery process.

Local anesthetics can be used to make you feel more comfortable for delivery and suture placement, if you need them.

Epidural anesthesia is a local anesthetic delivered through a tiny tube (catheter) placed in the small of your back, just outside the spinal canal. An advantage to the epidural is that it allows most women to fully participate in the birth experience (continue to feel touch and pressure) while relieving most of the labor pain. In most cases the epidural will be started when the cervical dilation is four to five centimeters.

Spinal anesthesia is administered with a needle into the spinal canal. Its effects are felt much faster. You will become numb and may need assistance in moving during delivery. Spinal anesthetics are often used for cesarean section.

Combined spinal-epidural anesthesia (CSE) for labor and delivery combines some of the best effects of both. The spinal injection allows quick pain relief lasting up to two hours. Because the anesthetic dose is "light" you will be able to move and even get out of bed, if it is appropriate. The epidural anesthetic can be continued as long as necessary to provide pain relief until delivery.

General anesthesia is administered by injecting anesthetic drugs intravenously and having the patient breath anesthetic gases. A general anesthetic is most often used when complications arise during labor and delivery and a cesarean section must be performed.

An anesthesia provider will be the individual administering the epidural, CSE, spinal or general anesthetic. Prior to administering the appropriate anesthetic they will discuss your health history, medications, allergies, explain the procedure and mention the risks involved with the chosen anesthetic.

The better prepared you are before labor and delivery, the more rewarding the entire birth experience will be for you. Please do not hesitate to discuss your options with your obstetrical physician or call one of the certified registered nurse anesthetists at Charlevoix Area Hospital if you have any questions.

Mike MacMillan, head of anesthesia at Charlevoix Area Hospital, can be contacted at the hospital at 547-4024.

Lack of council debate for open seat confuses

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

On May 7 Charlevoix City Council appointed former councilman William Haggard, 64, to a vacant first ward seat left open on April 25 when former city resident Bernie DeVries resigned.

However, the speedy appointment did not receive unanimous support from council — second ward representative, Gabe Campbell and third ward representative A.J. Witthoft abstained from the vote.

Campbell said that he didn't like the way the appointment went, claiming Mayor Alvin "Butch" Russell should have notified him of that evening's appointment prior to the meeting.

However, Campbell wasn't the only council member who was left in the dark. Prior to the May 7 meeting Russell said that the seat would remain vacant until the May 21 council meeting. But when he got to city hall he was notified that first ward councilman, Norman "Boogie" Carlson, was ready to make a motion to nominate Haggard to the seat.

Carlson said that Haggard's experience as a former councilman of six years played a part in his decision.

When motion time came around, the lack of inter-council communication showed. Prior to Carlson making the motion to appoint Haggard, council members did not discuss the qualifications of the three possible candidates for the open seat. "There should have been some discussion prior to that (the appointment)," Campbell said.

Instead, Carlson made a motion to appoint Haggard, second ward councilman Bill Bellows seconded the motion and the seat belonged to Haggard.

But, Campbell had former first ward councilman Bob Timms in mind for appointment. And, after the motion was seconded, by Bellows, he tried to make a second motion to appoint Timms.

But Russell told Campbell that after a motion has been seconded another motion pertaining to the same issue cannot be put on the table so the motion to appoint Haggard carried.

"I like Bill Haggard but, I have been on council for seven years and have never seen him at a meeting. He wasn't even there. If I was going to be appointed to council I think I would have been there," Campbell said.

Witthoft said that he also abstained on behalf of Timms who had contacted him prior to the meeting.

Carlson said that Timms had also contacted him in regards to the opening, but had done so after Haggard.

"It's council's prerogative to choose who they want. I would have liked to have been appointed," Timms said.

"It's one of those things I would think we would kick around the table a little bit before making a decision."

Timms added that as of now he isn't sure whether or not he will run for the first ward seat come election time.

Haggard who is co-partner in the Charlevoix based business, Haggard's Plumbing and Heating said he is looking forward to doing his part.

"I plan to go along with everyone else and see that we do a good job there. I'm not out to raise any commotion," he added.

Northwest Academy band stays busy throughout May

The Northwest Academy Advanced Band and Jazz Band spent the first week of May spreading music around northern Michigan.

On May 1 the bands performed at the East Jordan Grandvue Care Facility and the Bellaire Meadowbrook Care Facility.

On May 2 the bands traveled to Mackinac Island and performed for the Mackinac Island Public Schools.

On May 3 the bands traveled to Beaver Island and performed for the Beaver Island Public Schools and hosted an evening concert for the public. After the show, the Northwest students stayed in the gymnasium overnight and returned to Charlevoix on May 4.

Northwest band director Gary Stutzman said, "We are currently working on a plan to use the classroom satellite T.V. system to help the Beaver Island schools start a beginning band program for next fall."

During the evening on May 4 the Jazz All Stars finished their whirlwind tour with a fund-raising performance at the McCune Arts Center in Petoskey, where they had been invited to perform, by the Four Man Fishin' Tackle Choir.

The Petoskey performance helped to raise money for their national competition.

Stutzman said many audience members approached the band members after their performance with praise for their precision and authentic replication of the many tunes from the swing era.

He added, "I am very proud of the student's dedication and hard work that has brought them to such a high level of proficiency in such a short time."

Band concerts for auditorium

Charlevoix High School and Middle School bands will be having their spring concerts to benefit the "Reach for the Stars" campaign, which will help build a new auditorium for Charlevoix students.

The high school concert will begin at 7 p.m., May 17 in the high school gym. The jazz band will also be performing. A cookie and punch social will follow.

The middle school concert will begin at 7:30 p.m., May 24 in the high school gym. The seventh and eighth grade bands will be performing their state award winning musical pieces. The sixth grade band will also perform. A cookie and punch social will follow.

A $3 donation will be accepted at the door before the performances.

Learning lunches to be presented

We all have been told, "There's no such thing as a free lunch," but Charlevoix residents may be able to get the next best thing.

There has been local interest in combining a healthy lunch with learning something new and socializing. In early spring a questionnaire was circulated that generated responses used by planners to design a "Lunch, Laugh and Learn" series. May 30 will be the first of nine luncheon events that will cater to the requests of those surveyed.

The "Kick Off Series" will feature three lunches hosted by the Charlevoix Country Club. Local authors and artists including: Edith Gilbert, Roy Schallenberg, Norman Brumm and Russ and Sue Bolt will be present.

On June 13 the topic will be, "The Early Scoop on Venetian Festival 2001." Venetian board president Dan Barron and other board members will preview this year's upcoming expanding events line-up.

Plans are also completed for a summer series to take place July 18 and 25 and Aug. 1 and 15. Scheduled dates for the fall series include: Aug. 29, Sept. 5 and Oct. 3.

"Charlevoix's pool of artistic talent runs very deep and unfortunately too often goes unappreciated. Our local talent is as good as there is in any community in the country and their accomplishments and contributions are simply amazing. I've had the pleasure of working with them for many years and am proud to have them be from Charlevoix," Jacqueline Merta, executive director of the Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce, said.

The presentation is offered for free and the lunch will be provided at a charge.

For additional information on the lunch series contact Dean Davenport at 547-6433 or 547-9796.

Rayders baseball team splits two doubleheaders at home and away

BY ALLEN TELGENHOF
Sports writer

The Charlevoix Rayders split two doubleheaders last week in Lake Michigan Conference action.

At Traverse City St. Francis, the Rayders lost game one 9-4, but rebounded to take the nightcap, 7-2.

At home against Boyne City, Charlevoix won game one, 10-5 and lost a thriller in game two, 7-6.

In the opener, St. Francis scored one in the second and five in the third inning to open a 6-0 lead that the Rayders couldn't overcome.

The Gladiators' Jim Urban stroked a two-run homer and pitched a complete game for the win. Dennis Avery and Mike Kilkenny each had two hits for Charlevoix.

Jeremiah Teuscher got the Rayders back on track in the second game, striking out seven and yielding only four hits and one walk in a complete game victory. Chris Loper hit a solo homer and the Teuscher brothers, Jeremiah and Nate, each had two hits.

Avery starred for Charlevoix in game one against Boyne City, hitting a double and a two-run homer in support of his own fine pitching. Avery and Jeremiah Teuscher combined to give up only five hits and three walks, striking out eight.

Jeremiah Teuscher, Rob Boss and Matt Horon all singled and doubled for the Rayder cause. Nate Teuscher had two singles and Mike Kochanny belted a three-run blast in the second inning to get things started. Avery's record on the mound is now 5-0.

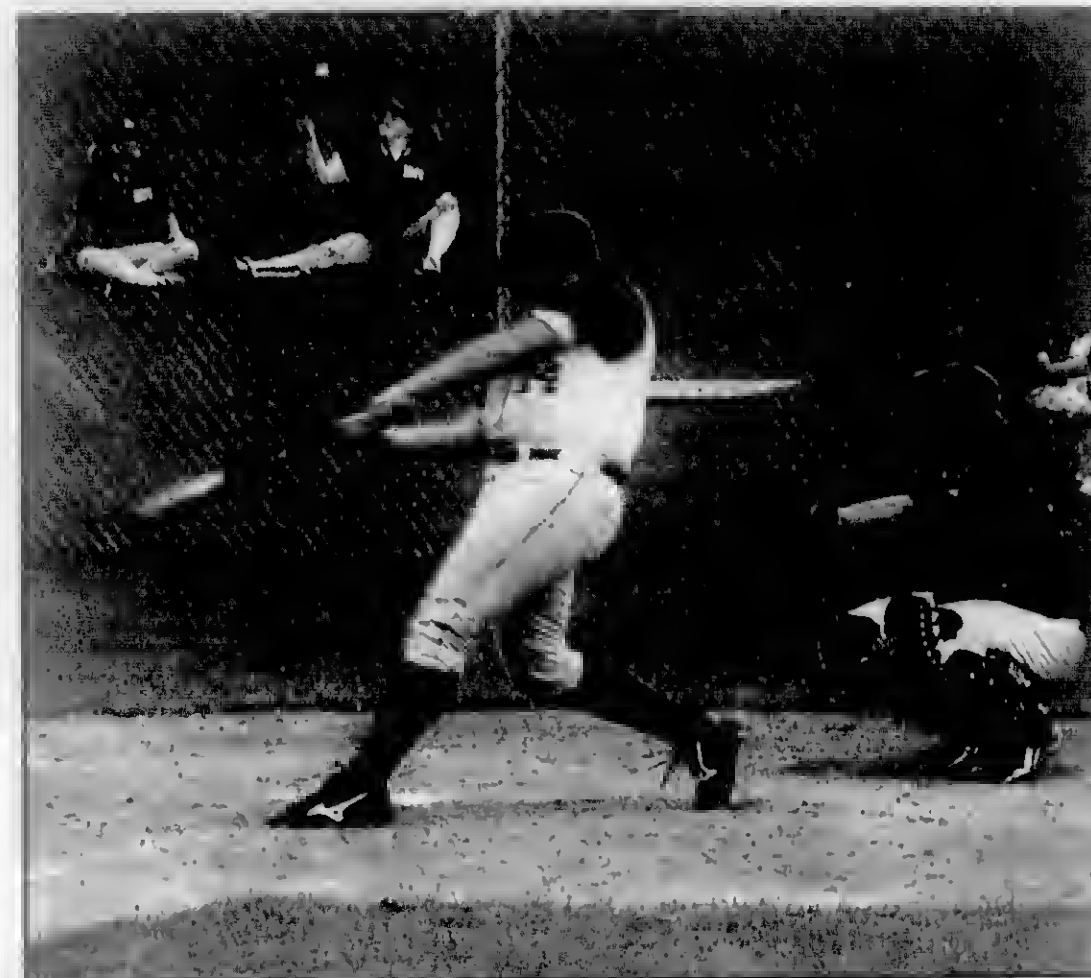

In the nightcap, the Rayders jumped out to a 4-1 lead on two-run home runs by Horon and Loper. In the fifth, Loper tired on the mound, giving up three Rambler runs to tie the game, 4-4.

But in the top of the seventh, the Rayders rallied with Avery hitting a leadoff single. Nate Teuscher reached on an error and following a wild pitch, Jeremiah Teuscher and Horon each hit sacrifice flies to put Charlevoix up, 6-4.

Following a strikeout and a hit batsman, Boyne had three straight hits to score three runs to pull out the dramatic 7-6 win.

The Rayders are now 14-5 overall and 6-4 in the conference. On Wednesday, they host Petoskey for a single game. Next Tuesday, Cheboygan visits Charlevoix for a double-header.

Softball team swept in doubleheaders last week

By ALLEN TELGENHOF
Sports writer

The Charlevoix Rayders were swept in two doubleheaders last week. They fell to Traverse City St. Francis, 13-0 and 16-5 and to Boyne City, 15-1 and 13-3.

Against conference powerhouse St. Francis, the Rayders opened with a bang as Meghan Vogel led off the game with a single.

She stole second and third but was left stranded.

Charlevoix could only manage one other hit, a third inning single by Katie Yager.

In the nightcap, Vogel again got on base to open the game, this time hit by a pitch. She stole second and third and scored on a Shawna Flowers single. She then stole second, moved to third on a groundout and stole home for a 2-0 Rayder lead.

St. Francis scored one in its half of the first and four more in the second to take a 5-1 lead.

Charlevoix answered with one in the third on singles by Vogel, Klieber and Melissa Fitzgerald.

The Gladiators broke loose in the fourth, scoring 11 times to put the game out of reach. Klieber tripled and scored on a Morrison single to close out the scoring.

Boyne City jumped out early in game one of the twinbill with Charlevoix, taking advantage of four Rayder errors to take a 7-0 lead in the first. The lone Charlevoix run scored in the third on singles by Krystal Meredith, Klieber and Yager.

Yager and Morrison each had two hits for the game.

Boyne scored two in the first in the second game but the Rayders tied it up in the third on singles by Meredith, Klieber and Yager. The Ramblers responded, however, with one in the third, four in the fourth and the coup de grace with six in the fifth for the victory.

Morrison's RBI double, plating Jessica Pettis closed the scoring for Charlevoix. Meredith had two hits for the Rayders.

Wednesday night sailboat races to kick off

A. Nony Mouse

'Yachting notes'

Thirteen early birds came out for the first Charlevoix Yacht Club (practice) races of 2001: the year that your beloved but misguided editor would call the first year of the Millennium.

Note the use of the plural "races"; contrary to the spring, summer and fall series tradition of just one race but with different starts for each class, three races all starting at the same times were sailed. All thus had a chance to improve their starting techniques and renew any rusty sailing skills.

At least a few skippers were making their first starts in a boat new to them. Bill Kenifick showed up in HOOTIE, a Peterson One-Ton that he started rebuilding sometime in the last century. Mark Pirie, of MY-JOY fame, is the proud new owner of a C&C 110, WINDRUNNER. Don Bowerman gave up the race committee slot to introduce his P-26 - is it ARTEMIS, Don? Peter Funck has switched from the Big Boat Fleet (KAMIKAZE) to the hot J-22 Fleet, but we don't yet know the name of the new one so let's just call it BLUE FUNCK.

Speaking of the J-22s, nine started. While we are not scoring this (or next week's) practice race, rumor has it that SUPERFLUOUS looked very fast but HUSSY, FIRST DATE, SWINE FLEW, TOO RECKLESS, HS MOISTURE MISSILE, THUNDERSTRUCK and BLUE FUNCK all look like contenders.

Given fair weather this Wednesday (A. Nony's forecast is for about 70 degrees with, perhaps, a sprinkle) should bring out close to 20 starters. If you enjoy watching a series of short races (better photo-ops than on longer races) expect the first start at about 6 p.m.

The following Wednesday, May 23, is the first race of the six race spring series.

Skippers, please remember that the race fee must be paid prior to the start or your finish will not be recorded! Of course, your full or sustaining membership must also be current prior to the start - a bald headed representative of the membership committee will be at the club this Friday evening, very willing to receive and process, in time for that start, your renewals or new memberships. After that, no guarantees!

The Sunday Sunfish Spring Series (say it fast, three times) consisting of four race days, often with more than one race per day, starts June 17. Some practice races will be June 10. If we can believe the local grapevine, the first race each Sunday will be for juniors and/or novices. We'll have more about time, start location(s) and other details later this month.

The Barnes Beach Marina is reported to be accumulating Sunfishes (the "es" is per Commodore Valerie) at an alarming rate so as to have one or two available for use by any member who would like to try just this "just plain fun" sailing.

Non-members are invited to visit and introduce themselves this Friday; Darsi Spencley will be the host and assist you in getting acquainted. While membership opens the door to opportunities to crew or be a consultant in the on the water Treasure Hunt and other, you're welcome even if you're scared to death of boats.

Come on down anytime after 6 p.m., we're at 209 Ferry, across from the Foster Boat Works Condos.

Yachting Notes is submitted each week during the "warm" months by the Charlevoix Yacht Club. To contact the club, see its website at www.charlevoixyachtclub.org or call 547-9170.

Track team has strong finishes

The Charlevoix boys' track team put on a strong performance May 12 in Houghton Lake.

According to coach Ken Plude, the team was trying to get some quality results as they get ready for regionals this Saturday in East Jordan.

They accomplished just that.

Plude was very happy with the team and specifically pointed out Rory Gnatkowski, Gordie Selph and Tim Daining.

Gnatkowski set a meet record in the pole vault with a 13 foot, 1 inch jump.

Selph came in second in the 300 meter hurdles with a time of 42.5 seconds and third in the 1600 meter with a time of 4 minutes and 41 seconds.

Daining came in fifth in the 800 meter run with a time of 2 minutes, 6 seconds.

Added to these fine finishes, was the two mile relay teams third place score. The team was composed of Selph, Daining, Josh Popenhagen and Peter Gorkiewicz.

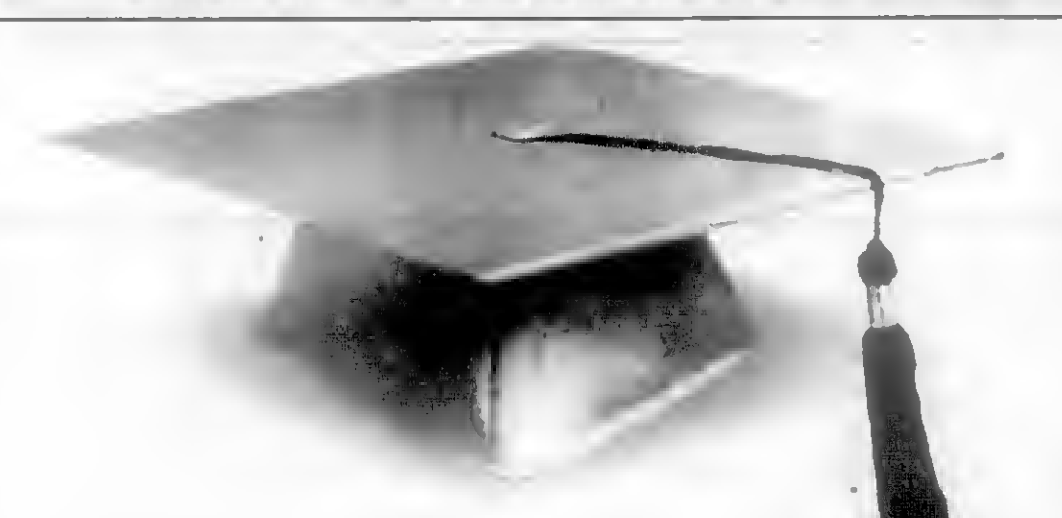

"We have done very well with what we have," Plude said. But, while he said the team is in a great position, it is still inexperienced as it gets ready for the regionals and even the conference. Especially as they face teams such as East Jordan, who have several all state runners.

The conference meet is May 26 in Kalkaska.

Barn destroyed by lightning

He rushed to call 911 and then headed for the barn to see if he could drag any of the family's belongings out.

"At that point there was no way of even getting close to the building," he said.

Parsons said about eight minutes after contacting 911, Banks Township firefighters arrived, but the roof of the historic building had already fallen to the floor level and the barn was consumed in flames.

Charlevoix city firefighters arrived a few minutes later and could do nothing.

Parsons said he felt fortunate for the steady rain that evening. It was wet around the flaming structure and a brush fire catching was not a safety risk.

In the wake of the fire, the possibility of his business starting on time depends on an insurance adjuster's decision after the two met on May 10.

Parsons said that regardless of whether or not they choose to reimburse him for the equipment he uses regularly, like the hay bind and rake that were destroyed, antique farming equipment stored in the barn including, a clover and alfalfa thrasher and old horse drawn equipment "with sentimental value," cannot be replaced.

"I can remember riding on the grain binder when I was a kid," he said of one of the machines recently destroyed.

Healthcare Comes Home

"Mom loves her independent life, but she needs some regular assistance. We tried to be with her every day, but our work schedules and the kids' activities made that almost impossible. I worried and felt guilty just about all of the time.

Then we learned that VitalCare could help. Mom went along with the idea of having a home health aide come over three days a week to help her with laundry and light housekeeping. I stopped by the other day, and the two of them were having a great time over lunch. I am so pleased; Mom has her independence, and I have peace of mind."

Land conservancy to have ninth annual spring walk

The Charlevoix County Land Conservancy and the St. Clair - Six Mile Lake Natural Area Committee invite the public to join them on May 19 for the Ninth Annual Spring "Walk for the Earth."

This year's theme, in cooperation with the Soil and Water Conservation Districts, is "Habitat for Life." The walk will begin at 1 p.m. at the Davis Preserve on the Ellsworth/East Jordan Road.

Participants will have a guided tour of the habitats, from lowlands to uplands, of the Davis Preserve on the Chain of Lakes.

Participants, led by Charlevoix, East Jordan and Ellsworth scouts, will also conduct a spring cleanup of the preserve and several White Pines will be planted. The Davis Preserve is located just three miles west of East Jordan and about 1 mile east of the Rowe Inn.

The St. Clair - Six Mile Lake Natural Area is a 203 acre natural area lying in South Arm Township on the Charlevoix/Antrim County Line. The SCL-SML Natural Area, sometimes called the Great Blue Heron Natural Area, is a cooperative project of Grand Traverse Regional Land Conservancy, Charlevoix County Land Conservancy and the Little Traverse Conservancy.

Seven years ago, the Charlevoix Class of 2001 presented a play as a fund-raiser that kicked off the successful acquisition of the first preserves of the now 11 preserve Blue Heron Natural Areas.

After the walk, participants will gather at the Banks Township Hall for sandwiches and cookies. Ellsworth students will share a presentation on the History of Ellsworth and the surrounding area.

Educational displays by conservation groups and local businesses will be set up at the Banks Township Hall for viewing.

Petunia planting time is just around the corner

Once again it's time for Charlevoix's annual Operation Petunia, a community-wide planting party that lines five miles of the city's main thoroughfare with colorful petunias each year.

The event begins at 5 p.m., May 24, when hundreds of volunteers are invited to help plant both sides of US-31, from the M-66 intersection north to Mercer Boulevard. Volunteers are encouraged to wear comfy clothes and gardening gloves, and to bring their trowels along.

Prior to the plant-in, the soil will be prepared and flats of petunias delivered, so volunteer planters can dig right in and get the job done quickly. Each block along the route has been assigned a Block Captain to help direct the planting, and the Charlevoix trolley will shuttle volunteers to various sites on US-31.

Now in its twentieth year, the event is so well organized, planting the five-mile stretch is expected to take only an hour or so.

Following the planting, volunteers are invited to gather at East Park downtown to celebrate their efforts and enjoy a community picnic. Planters will be treated to hot dogs and lots of other treats, courtesy of several area businesses. Local service clubs do the cooking and help organize the affair, while Charlevoix High School's marching band and the Northwest Academy's popular jazz ensemble will entertain picnickers.

This year, the petunias will be cared for with the help of a brand new watering truck. Thanks to generous donations from area businesses and individuals and expert leadership from "Operation Petunia Man" Dale Boss, Keep Charlevoix Beautiful acquired the truck in time for the 2001 season. As in years past, Dale and his wife Marilyn will make the rounds early every morning to water the petunias and keep them blooming brightly.

Donations help cover the costs for Operation Petunia. Keep Charlevoix Beautiful needs $10,000 to purchase plants, replenish soil, fertilize flowerers, and maintain the petunia watering truck. Contributions can be sent to Keep Charlevoix Beautiful, Inc., c/o Post Office Box 1, Charlevoix, Michigan 49720.

More information about Operation Petunia is available by calling Judy Corley, Keep Charlevoix Beautiful vice president, 547-1945.

Honor the veterans on May 28

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

For some people, Memorial Day means a long weekend but for many who served in a branch of the United States military during war-time, the holiday is sacred.

For 10 years, World War II veteran Charlie Butcher, 73, of Charlevoix has proudly marched with his fellow veterans from the American Legion, down Bridge Street on Memorial Day. And that is where you'll find him on May 28. "Memorial Day to me is about the veterans, those of us who survived and those ones who didn't, we all gave everything we had," he explained.

But Veteran's Affairs director Bob Drebenstedt claims patriotism like Butcher's is teetering on becoming part of the endangered species list.

Drebenstedt's claim is evidenced by two factors apparent in Charlevoix. The first indicator he says points to lackadaisical patriotism is the diminishing number of people who attend Memorial Day festivities and the second is declining membership in local veteran's clubs.

Butcher agrees with Drebenstedt and fears the possible impact of these issues. He claims, "There is declining membership; if we don't get members, eventually the club will fold up."

Currently, Charlevoix has about 100 members of the Veterans of Foreign Wars (VFW) and 130 members of the American Legion. Butcher estimated that the local groups see one or two new members a year.

But Butcher says low numbers may not be a result of declining veteran interest, it may be an aging veteran population. He said 3,000 World War II veterans are currently dying every month and that living World War II veterans are 73 years old and up.

Arnold resigns from board

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

The words resignation and retirement have plagued the Charlevoix Public Library four times in the last month and a fifth instance recently surfaced.

Linny Arnold has been the Marion Township library board representative since January of 1997 but on May 15 she threw in the towel.

In Arnold's letter of resignation that she wrote to Marion Township supervisor, Wilson "Bud" Boss, she states, "I find that I am no longer able to align myself in any way with the other (library) board members who have committed the cruel, despicable act of firing (former library director) Mary Beth Wallick."

In 1997 when Arnold accepted the position of library board secretary she said she was proud to serve with "people like that" (two teachers and a former superintendent). She said things were good for a long time, but then things got weird — the board began pursuing their personal agenda and being a board member wasn't enjoyable anymore.

Groups to combat student drug use in Charlevoix area

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

During an evening meeting on May 15 at BASES Teen Center in Charlevoix, a small marker board marked with a strong message stood quietly in the discussion circle of eight Charlevoix County residents.

The board clearly stated the meeting's purpose and also revealed the million dollar question that Scott Kelly, executive director of BASES, has dedicated his life to answering. It read, "Purpose: How can the community become more involved to assist schools and agencies in reducing teen alcohol and drug use?"

Even with seven parents from Boyne City, East Jordan and Charlevoix and an East Jordan teacher in attendance, no definite answer was discovered. But the seeds of a pro-active approach to preventing school age substance abuse were sown.

The group of eight rehearsed some of the data presented by David Wilmes of the Minnesota based Hazelden group who conducted a substance use survey of Boyne City, East Jordan and Charlevoix schools. The group concluded that the measures being taken across the county to help dependence-risk students, are missing their mark and it's time to find a program that will succeed.

Kathy Bradley of Charlevoix said that the Hazelden findings frightened her. Bradley said she fears that if the problem continues to grow, unattended by the community, a fatality will most likely result.

Kelly agreed and pointed to a source of conflict that isn't allowing these issues to be resolved.

"There is a lot of blaming that says, 'It's the school's fault, it's the family's fault.' The blame runs in a big circle with everyone pointing everywhere but at themselves," he explained.

In an attempt to stop a possible tragedy from happening, the volunteer group decided to stop pointing fingers and to start a grass roots effort to educate the community. They plan to arm themselves with information and to distribute the information throughout the county.

To attack the problem, the group that met last week will be the trunk of a community tree, they hope will bloom, branch out and most importantly spread its message of health and wellness.

Their message will encourage parents to take a strong no-use position with their children. To help parents understand the importance of the message, the group plans to host awareness seminars.

Ideas generated by group members as potential seminar topics include: club drugs, signs parents should look for that indicate use, where is the help, summer drug alert for parents and an in-depth look into women's issues.

Aside from the seminars, information will also be disseminated via media outlets. One plan Kelly discussed with the group was airing videos about the perils of substance abuse on the PACE network that now services Boyne City, East Jordan and Charlevoix.

To help kick off the group's growth, members are recruiting representatives from throughout the communities in Charlevoix County. Anyone interested in helping can attend the next meeting where more formal plans and a group name will be established.

The group's next meeting will begin at 7:30 p.m., May 24 at BASES, located at 208 West Lincoln Street in Charlevoix. For more information contact Scott Kelly at 547-1144.

Correction

In the May 9 edition of the Charlevoix Courier's "Oh Boix" section on page 7, a name of one of the Michigan State University graduates was misspelled. It should have been spelled, "David Roarke McKeown."

Also, in last week's edition, on page 2 in the box of library board members, it should be clarified that Rick Brandi is not a city council member. He was appointed to the library board by council to represent them.

What do you think of industrial parks

The results from this month's "What do you think?" question are in.

But, from the looks of things, people were not interested in the topic. The topic was, "What do you think about the economy?"

We received one response to it.

It was from Lou Hirschman of Saginaw. He wrote, "Greenspan made a blunder last May. Now he's playing Peter Pan to put it back together. Maybe if the Joneses (consumer) keeps spending, we may come out of it. We are not out of the woods, we are still walking a tightrope. It takes time, but we are on the way."

Thank you Mr. Hirschman for responding. On to this month's topic:

The city is currently searching for a place to create a new industrial park. The current industrial park, north of the bridge, is full and in order to attract more companies to Charlevoix, the city wants to build another one.

The city is not alone in saying this park is needed.

What do you think?

Several industry leaders and the director of the Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce has said a new industrial park is needed.

So, what do you think? Where should Charlevoix build another industrial park? Or should a new one be built at all?

Keep your comments to 250 words or less and remember to sign your name to it. Also, stay on the subject and leave the personal attacks to yourself.

Comments can be sent to the Charlevoix Courier at P.O. Box 117, Charlevoix, MI 49720; e-mailed to charlevoixcourier@charlevoixcourier.com; faxed to (231) 547-4992 or even dropped off to our office located at 112 Mason Street in downtown Charlevoix.

The results will be published in the June 20 edition of the Charlevoix Courier.

What do you think?

I think an industrial park should go:

Please mail this to the Charlevoix Courier at P.O. Box 117, Charlevoix, MI, 49720 or drop it off at our office located at 112 Mason Street in downtown Charlevoix. Answers can be e-mailed to charlevoixcourier@charlevoixcourier.com.

The sexy life of flowers that bloom in the forests

Roger Knutson

'Ear to the ground'

The season of flowers is certainly upon us.

The maple trees have bloomed and dropped the unsuccessful flowers all over my sidewalk. The woods are full of what the botanists call "prevernal blooms," those that manage flowering before the trees are completely leafed out and the forest gets dark.

My lawn, which does not closely resemble a golf green, has at least a dozen kinds of small blooming plants in full flower; plants that I did not put there. It's time to consider what flowers are really about and how dangerous it once was to be a botanist.

Beginning about the second century A.D., the concept of sex as sinful held sway for at least 1,700 years. The same sources that seemed to suggest that sex was sinful maintained that flowers were pure entities and free of the taint of such sin. The lilies of the field neither sow nor reap; they are present to beautify the world, no more, no less. Flowers could therefore not be involved in sex or reproduction. This was the thoughtful position of the greatest scholastic minds during that time; St. Augustine, St. Thomas, Galen and Aristotle among them. The suggestion that flowers might be involved in sex and reproduction became heresy and heretics were harshly treated during the years before about 1700. We burned witches after 1700, but seldom burned heretics.

Before 1700 the first fearless botanist had suggested gently in print that flowers might be serving some sexual purpose. Rudolph Jacob Camerarius wrote a book titled, "A letter on the Sex of Plants" in which he reported experiments that conclusively demonstrated sexual reproduction in plants. But he refused to draw the obvious conclusions out of fear that the church would brand him a heretic. More than a century later, Christian Sprengel, the schoolteacher son of a Protestant minister, published further experiments, but they too were ignored out of the still prevalent conviction that several saints and Aristotle had been right for almost 2,000 years. Examination of nature by schoolteachers and potential heretics could hardly overturn such certainty.

The idea of flowers as pure sexless beauty did not totally disappear until the Nineteenth Century, when religious conviction changed a bit and evidence from science became overwhelming. We now know that the sole purpose of flowers from the plant's point of view is the accomplishment of sexual reproduction. Flowery sex right out there in the open for all to see was still a bit difficult for the Victorians, but we have grown accustomed.

Enjoy the flowers of spring, but recall clearly that ideas that you now take for granted were once reason for summary execution. Freedom of thought is a great advance in human history. Even botanists rightly celebrate it.

If you seek more information about this subject, you could consult, "The Wonderful Life of Flowers" by P. Jaeger, published in 1961 and found at garage sales and in the basement of libraries.

Look at whole marina issue

Editor:

Regarding the Charlevoix marina issue, a committee has just completed interviews for a land site planner. Last year United Design Associates was hired for a preliminary study of the city's legal riparian rights and what might fit within those rights. When the appropriate people are hired, I am confident the city will give the citizens an opportunity to have input, not just on the water side of the project, but on the park side as well. This would be the appropriate time for the editor to ask the community what it thinks. In order to end up with the best result, I believe these areas need to be looked at as a whole since they are interconnected.

I believe the seawall should be straightened and the docks should be floating providing a safer environment especially for smaller boats' low water levels. The conditions of our bathroom facilities are an embarrassment to our community.

Regarding the bridge, it takes approximately 15 seconds for each boat to pass under assuming they are spaced appropriately. Everywhere else I have boated, the bridge tender communicates over a VHF radio. We could put the same amount of boats through the bridge in nearly half the time if the boats were told what to do and when. As an example, a small sailboat circling in Lake Michigan waiting for the bridge to open, does not make a move toward the bridge until they physically see it go up for fear of having to circle in a very tight area. Watch the distance between boats and you will see a time reduction.

Most transient boaters leave early in the morning and arrive in the late afternoon.

For the most part, bridge openings between those times are from local boaters. This issue is also only nine weeks, out of 52.

The assumption that more docks will bring more boats is croneous.

Many of these boats are already in our harbor, but are anchored out as a result of not being able to get a dock. Boats without tenders, assuming they were worth getting to. Instead they are dumping gray water into our lake, thus adding unnecessary pollution. Secondly, our merchants get nothing from these transient boaters as they pull the anchor the next morning and leave our port. To those that think additional docks are just another way for our local merchants to get richer, you need to take a closer look. It is a nine week season and the turnover in our downtown retail space shows it is not easy to cover that 52 week overhead. I believe in large part, the vitality of our community depends on the success of our downtown area. If we can help the merchants it helps us all.

How many slips are enough? I recognize that unlike some marinas built out in the Great Lakes, ours is within a natural harbor. Presently we have 17 slips accommodating 34 boats. Other marinas in our region have the following slips: Elk Rapids, 94; Harbor Springs, 77; Mackinac Island, 82; Mackinaw City, 105; Northport, 129; Petoskey, 100; Suttons Bay, 160; Traverse City, 114.

Currently, there will be marina additions to Mackinac Island and Traverse City and new marinas have been approved for Mackinaw City and St. Ignace.

Next to Mackinac Island, we have the second highest demand in all of northern Michigan. My family and I live on Round Lake and we want to make sure that the beauty of our harbor is protected. I don't think 111 slips is the number, however, I don't think 34 is the number either. Perhaps the right number is somewhere in between. I envision something much wider, such as Harbor Springs so that all residents can enjoy walking the main pier, not just the boaters.

Editor:

Northwest Academy in Charlevoix recently had our second annual Career Day for middle and high school students. The student committee responsible for planning the day would like to commend the following community members for giving up their morning to share information about their chosen careers: Alicia Byberg, Dr. Natalie Gonzales, Dr. David Holland, Tom Kachadurian, Trooper Jim Keller, Tech Sgt. Rik Rambo, Steven Seely and Paul Stripay. We would also like to thank John Murphy of Char/Em I.S.D. for assistance in obtaining a small transition grant to help fund the day.

School/community partnerships like this provide unequalled opportunities for young people to explore possibilities for their future. And, responses from students indicated that they were very appreciative and had a terrific morning.

Editor:

On May 16, 14 employees from Harbor Industries volunteered at the Charlevoix Senior Center and completed lots of spring cleaning chores, delivered meals to our home bound and cooked and served a chicken dinner for over one hundred people! Each month, center volunteers prepare and serve two fund-raiser dinners. This day, help from the Harbor Industries crew enabled our senior cooks to take the evening off.

We certainly appreciated all of your work. You are all welcome to come back anytime!

Courier subscription rates to be adjusted

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

Because of increases in the cost of publishing a newspaper, the Charlevoix Courier will be slightly changing its home delivery rates starting June 6.

"It's a modest adjustment that will hopefully reflect the cost of doing business," Ken Winter, Courier publisher, said.

The new rates will be: $43.40 for a local yearly subscription and $56.60 for a yearly out-of-area subscription; $21.70 for a local six month subscription and $28.30 for an out-of-area six month subscription; and $10.85 for a local three month subscription and $14.15 for an out-of-area three month subscription.

Additionally, the subscription rates for military persons, senior citizens and subscriptions sent outside of the United States will be slightly adjusted.

The military rate will be $37 for a yearly subscription only.

The senior citizen rates for local subscriptions will be: $37 for a yearly subscription, $18.50 for a six month subscription and $9.25 for a three month subscription.

The rate for subscriptions mailed outside of the United States will be: $108.60 for a yearly subscription, $54.30 for a six month subscription and $27.15 for a three month subscription.

If you currently have a subscription, the changes will take effect with your next subscription renewal notice after June 6.

According to Winter, the changes are due to two factors:

• The first is two postage increases in less than six months, raising the cost of home delivery. The first postage increase took effect early this winter and the second will be going into effect July 1.

• Secondly, the cost of newsprint and additions to the quality of the Charlevoix Courier's coverage has increased the newspaper's overall cost of doing business.

Healthcare Comes Home

"Mom loves her independent life, but she needs some regular assistance. We tried to be with her every day, but our work schedules and the kids' activities made that almost impossible. I worried and felt guilty just about all of the time.

Then we learned that VitalCare could help. Mom went along with the idea of having a home health aide come over three days a week to help her with laundry and light housekeeping. I stopped by the other day, and the two of them were having a great time over lunch. I am so pleased; Mom has her independence, and I have peace of mind."

Charles Clair Stevens: Jan. 24, 1920 - May 10, 2001

Charles Clair Stevens, 81, died May 10 at St. Luke's Regional Medical Center after a brief illness.

Clair was born Jan. 24, 1920 in Charlevoix, where he was raised on a large farm homesteaded by his grandfather. He was one of eight children born to Geneva Jackson Stevens and Charles Stevens.

Clair served in the U.S. Navy for four years during World War II on the USS Sperry, a submarine tender. His ship was engaged in most of the major battles of the South Pacific aiding wounded soldiers and damaged ships.

After the war, Clair became a master plumber. During his career he supervised hundreds of men on large construction projects. From 1970 until his retirement in 1985 he was chief mechanical inspector for the University of Michigan.

Clair had a lifelong love of fiddling. His uncle gave him an old fiddle when he was seven and by age 12 he had taught himself to play well enough to entertain at socials and dances.

Clair was a founding member of Original Michigan Fiddlers Association and served as its first president from 1975 to 1992. The OMFA wrote of him, "Clair Stevens did more to promote old-time fiddling around Michigan during his 17 years as president than any other person."

Clair moved to his wife, LaReine's, home state of Idaho in 1997, where he joined the Idaho Old-time Fiddlers Association.

He gave countless hours of service throughout his life, playing for school groups, nursing homes, charitable functions, fairs and other celebrations.

Survivors include Clair's wife, LaReine Dewey Stevens of Boise; two children from his first marriage, Rosemarie Clair Stevens of Oregon and Sidney Charles Stevens of Florida; sisters Josephine Wood, Phyllis Allison and Joan Graves; and brothers, Byard, Bill and Bruce Stevens, all from Michigan. He was preceded in death by his parents and his brother Don.

The family requests that in lieu of flowers, donations be made to the Idaho Old-time Fiddlers Association Scholarship Fund.

Lois Violet Vassoff: Dec. 6, 1903 - May 21, 2001

Lois Violet Vassoff, 97, died May 21, 2001 at Grandview Medical Care Facility in East Jordan.

A funeral will be at 1 p.m. today at Winchester Funeral Home in Charlevoix.

Lois' grandson, James W. Marshall III, will officiate. Burial will take place at 1 p.m. Friday at Forest Hill Cemetery in Ann Arbor.

Lois was born on Dec. 6, 1903 in Hamilton, Ind. the daughter of George and Sarah (Albright) Collins.

She was raised near Hamilton until 1922 when she moved to Ann Arbor.

Lois worked at University Hospital in Ann Arbor as a nurses aid and medical records clerk from 1922 until her retirement in 1966.

After she retired she continued as a volunteer at the hospital working with critical care patients.

She married Kouzman P. Vassoff June 11, 1924, in Ann Arbor. He preceded her in death on September 29, 1960.

Lois moved to Charlevoix in 1973. She continued her education there, graduating from Charlevoix High School Class of 1989, becoming the school's oldest graduate at the age of 86.

Yet, Lois' greatest accomplishment was the effect of her gentleness and faithfulness to her family modeling a faith in Christ through her steady love.

Lois was a member of the First Baptist Church of Charlevoix for over 25 years. Survivors include one son, George K. (Marlene) Vassoff of Manchester; one daughter, Mari (James) Marshall of Sanford Lake and Venice, Fla.; eight grandchildren; nine great-grandchildren; one great-great-grandchild and one sister, Nina Sowles on Indiana.

She was preceded in death by 5 brothers and 3 sisters.

Memorial contributions may be made to Grandview Medical Care Facility. Envelopes for contributions are available at Winchester Funeral Home.

City hires Pollack Design for East Park renovation

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

After wading through the credentials of four planning firms for the upcoming East Park renovation project, the city selection committee chose Pollack Design Associates of Ann Arbor.

Firm principal Peter Pollack will be heading up the East Park project. He said that the city outlined the objective his firm will be working toward. This objective is to design a park that will be responsive to the needs of the marina and the town and at the same time will relate to Veteran's Park and Bridge Park.

"This new park has to be conscious of everything around it. This is something for the residents of Charlevoix. The question we will ask is, 'What do residents want to live with 12 months out of the year,'" Pollack explained.

To conclude what will best serve Charlevoix residents, the firm plans to work closely with the city administration and staff and the community. He foresees community "visioning sessions" where residents will offer input and the planning firm will share project possibilities.

A proposed project timeline shows the first of these sessions may take place as soon as July.

During the meeting, Pollack said the community will have the opportunity to voice their feelings and impressions about what is being proposed.

"In any public arena it is very unlikely to have 100 percent satisfied, you don't want to disappoint anybody, but you have to be realistic," Pollack said.

The firm plans to pay close attention to the events and activities that are most appropriate for East Park. He said once they are able to pinpoint uses for the park they can put the "hard stuff," like benches and lights, in place.

The Pollack firm has been practicing in Michigan since 1974. They have dealt with numerous recreation and waterfront parks in both urban and rural areas. But as Pollack said, no project is the same as another and his firm custom fits everything they do.

He explained that in the places the firm works, their focus is on humanity — he plans to gather input from the people who live here.

The tentative timeline shows a project plan for the East Park renovation will be prepared by Pollack by November or December of 2001.

Man arrested for OUIL after crash

The Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department responded to a personal injury accident at 11:38 p.m. on May 19 on Boyne City-East Jordan Road near Deer Lake Road in Wilson Township.

A 36-year-old Elmira man was driving a 1999 Jeep Cherokee that left the roadway, rolled over and struck a utility pole, shearing the pole 7 1/2 feet off the ground. He was injured and refused medical treatment and was subsequently arrested for operating under the influence of alcohol and driving on a revoked license.

His passenger was a 35-year-old Elmira woman who was transported by the Boyne City Ambulance to Otsego Memorial Hospital where she was treated and released.

The sheriff's department was assisted by the Boyne City Ambulance and Boyne City Fire Dept. Crews from Great Lakes Energy were called in to replace the damaged pole.

Butcher, Drebenstedt worry about declining numbers

VETERANS

"At one time there were 16 million World War II veterans; never again will there be that size of a military that we can foresee. The consequence is that we don't have the number of people to draw from to establish veteran's organizations," he said.

Charlie Butcher

Butcher also stressed the importance of veterans who participated in more recent conflicts joining the organizations. He said their membership ensures the support of veteran's activities and benefits.

"All the younger guys are busy raising families and working," he said.

He added that the war a veteran served in does not determine their level of patriotism and involvement in organizations.

"Regardless of which war a veteran was involved in there has never been any question about the determination and the sacrifice made by the men who fought in those wars," he said.

Butcher said he joined the American Legion in 1950, three years after returning from World War II. He came back from Europe convinced that America would be involved in a conflict with the Russians because of the communist country's "aggressive" actions.

He also said he became involved because he believed in what the group was doing for veteran's affairs.

"There were thousands of men and women soldiers that needed support from an organization, to maintain hospitals. The main reason I joined was because the Legion was highly responsible for establishing the G.I. (Government Issue) Bill for returning G.I.s," he explained.

Butcher said the bill was a means of compensation for having served in the military. He referred to the bill as "the greatest piece of legislation passed by Congress since the Constitution, primarily responsible for making this country the great power that it is today."

"W.W. I veterans were determined that W.W. II G.I.s would come back to a better life than they did," he said.

Drebenstedt is also concerned that if these groups are abandoned, these services will no longer be accessible to the men and women who have earned them.

Drebenstedt said that during the Gulf War there was increased interest in Memorial Day, at least temporarily.

But he hopes to see an improvement in public support of veterans on Memorial Day.

"We could give a little back to those who went off to represent this country," he said.

He blames the decline in interest on a lack of information being passed on from generation to generation.

Drebenstedt said as a country we need to recognize the sacrifice of veterans.

"I am thankful for America fulfilling its promise to veterans of all branches that lived and made our history. On Memorial Day we are celebrating history from Valley Forge up to Bosnia," he said.

At 9:45 a.m., May 28, veterans from the VFW, the American Legion Color Guard and Rifle Guard, the color guard from the United States Coast Guard station Charlevoix and the Charlevoix High School band will meet at the American Legion Hall, located off of East Garfield Street, to get in formation for the parade which will begin at 10 a.m.

Services will be in East Park, at which time Charlevoix High School senior Ben Macks will deliver Lincoln's Gettysburg address.

Remember to honor the veterans this Memorial Day. (Photo by Jeremy McBain)

Charlevoix offers trees to residents for planting

By JULIE MUSHLEK
Staff Writer

In recognition of lush local foliage the National Arbor Day Foundation named Charlevoix a "Tree City USA" for the ninth time and gave the city the 2000 Growth Award for the third time.

Information distributed by the Charlevoix Shade Tree Commission states, "It's our trees without question, that are a large and necessary part of the beautiful in 'Charlevoix the Beautiful.'"

Commission member Roger Knutson said, "We encourage the care, planting and maintenance of the tree legacy in Charlevoix. The city has approximately 3,200 street side trees, some of the oldest of which were planted over a century ago. The tree commission members are the guardians of that legacy."

The health of the trees lining city streets is not just a chance happening. They are well manicured by city staff and citizens. Tree care efforts are directed by city street superintendent John Martin who takes charge of planting, trimming and removal of hazardous trees, and also directs efforts to collect and compost leaves and yard trimmings.

Martin said he continues his management of city trees, "because that is what makes Charlevoix, Charlevoix."

Shade Tree Commission secretary Robert Irving said that last year, the city removed 44 trees and planted 42, but this year they hope to double the number of trees planted.

However, the city also needs the help of business and home owners in watering the young trees during hot, dry periods and in making planting requests.

Linda Weller at the city manager's office will help residents fill a vacancy in the street side tree line on city property easement areas.

The city urges those interested to get a jump on their order because quantities are limited.

Tree varieties currently available for full planting include; the American Liberty Elm, Callery Pear, Green Ash, Littleleaf Linden, Crimson King Maple, Red Maple and the Sugar Maple.

Weller can be reached by calling 547-3270.

Qualifying for the "Tree City USA" award requires more than trimming and planting trees. Applicants must also have a tree care ordinance in effect, have a legal tree governing body (the shade tree commission), have a tree program and an Arbor Day observance.

Qualifying for the growth award that Charlevoix took home in 1995, 1997 and now again for 2000 is a whole other set of requirements. Growth Award applicants must be eligible for the Tree City USA award, the tree budget must exceed that of the previous year and tree related projects must be submitted to the foundation.

Club uses garden to remember loved ones

The Charlevoix Area Garden Club encourages you to remember your loved ones and friends by contributing to its "living" Memorial Garden. Established in 1977 and maintained since then by the Charlevoix Area Garden Club, this garden is located on the northern island at the end of East Dixon Avenue on Mercer Boulevard. It was included in the city park system by the Charlevoix City Council in 1978.

The garden includes such plantings as hosta, weeping mulberry, variegated dogwood, burning bush, junipers, yews and tamarix. The committee hopes to replace two purple-leaf plum trees lost to winterkill a year ago.

Memorial contributions made by members and friends throughout the year enable the club to plant and care for this garden. Spring is a nice time to view this garden that is in the process of being "spring cleaned." Club members hope that you will walk or drive by.

You need not be a garden club member to make a memorial gift as a living memory for a friend or a loved one. If interested in making a contribution, call or write Nancy Fowler, 409 East Dixon Avenue, Charlevoix. (231) 547-9314.

End the myths surrounding sexual assault

The words sexual assault bring to mind images of extreme violence, a brutal attack by a stranger. While that may be true in some circumstances, it is not what happens in the vast majority of sexual assaults.

During April, National Sexual Assault Awareness Month, the Women's Resource Center of Northern Michigan challenged society's image of sexual assault. Many myths surround the issue: The victim must have "asked for it" by being seductive, careless, drunk or high; if the victim did not physically struggle with the assailant, it wasn't really rape.

Most victims of rape do not fit the stereotype that society wants to place on them, said Tracy Skinner, MSW, CSW, and coordinator of the Women's Resource Center Sexual Assault Program.

"These myths often shift responsibility and blame from the rapist to the victim," Skinner said.

Understanding the myths surrounding sexual assault helps many during recovery. What happened was a crime and the victim is not to blame for the rapist's behavior, she noted.

"The voices of survivors have told me again and again, 'I didn't think what happened to me was rape. I was forced to have sex, but it didn't fit with what I thought rape was,'" Skinner said. "The awful truth is, what these survivors did go through was a sexual assault, even though it may not fit with what we typically — and often incorrectly — view as sexual assault or rape."

Shattering the myths society continues to believe about the crime of sexual assault in northern Michigan is an important role for the Women's Resource Center, explained Chris Krajewski, director of the Women's Resource Center Domestic Abuse and Sexual Assault Program.

"Northern Michigan is not immune from the crime of sexual assault," Krajewski said. "Many women I talk to about their experience never report to the police or go to the hospital for a variety of reasons — they're afraid word will get out in the small town they live in, they're worried they'll know the police officer involved in the investigation or the nurse or doctor at the emergency room."

"Women wonder: 'Does everyone need to know?' Will my name be in the paper?" Krajewski said.

Most women are assaulted by men they know, complicating the issue of reporting.

"They have a sense of shock that a man they knew and trusted would not accept no. He may be a long-time friend of the victim, or a good friend of the family and women are embarrassed to accuse someone who is known by friends and family," she said.

Again, Krajewski emphasizes, these issues or myths do not shift responsibility and blame. What happened was a crime and the rapist is responsible for his behavior.

Teens who are assaulted have additional concerns about their privacy and other issues surrounding reporting, Skinner noted.

For example, one teen was afraid that if she told her parents, they'd become angry. She and her friends had lied about where they were going one night. They'd been drinking and if the teen reported the assault, she didn't want everyone at the party to get in trouble for drinking. And besides, reporting wouldn't change what happened.

Women's Resource Center staff emphasize that society needs to see the complete picture of what sexual assault is. Sexual assault and rape are defined as any unwanted sexual act or contact that is attempted or completed by force, threat of force, or coercion. In Michigan, the legal term for this type of crime is criminal sexual conduct.

"We need to understand that a crime may have been committed even though there was no penetration, or there wasn't a struggle or clothing wasn't torn," Krajewski said. "There are many reasons why a person doesn't struggle; shock, being overpowered by the assailant. We need to open our eyes to the myths surrounding sexual assault and hold those accountable who commit this crime. We need to keep the rapist responsible for his behavior."

AAA gives some tips on saving gas money

Looking for a way to stretch those family vacation dollars this year? AAA Michigan suggests that the first place you should look is your vehicle.

"With fuel prices expected to be at or near record highs, making sure your vehicle is ready for the road will help increase your mileage on vacations this summer," Richard J. Miller, AAA Michigan Community Safety Services manager said.

Here are some common tips motorists can use to increase mileage:

- When times are cool, check your tire pressure monthly. It's normal for tires to lose pressure, and that can cut fuel economy by as much as two percent each pound below recommended levels. To find what is right for your vehicle, see the owner's manual or consult the label attached to the driver door pillar.

- Avoid fast starts and stops that waste fuel. Anticipate red lights.

- If vacationing with friends, carpool as much as possible. Plan your route to avoid construction delays and congestion. Plan meal stops when traffic is likely heaviest.

- Luggage inside the vehicle or trailer, rather than on the roof, will minimize wind resistance and increase your gas mileage.

- When you arrive, carefully plan day trips to avoid getting lost and wasting fuel.

Perform a do-it-yourself, 12-point engine inspection. The inspection should include:

- Keeping your vehicle's engine tuned. An engine out of tune can use up to 50 percent more fuel than the same engine that is well-maintained.

- Checking the oil level. Depending on where and how you drive, most manufacturers recommend an oil and filter change every 3,000 to 5,000 miles. Oil provides about 40 percent of an engine's cooling requirements, so it is crucial that it is clean and at the proper level. Proper lubrication reduces friction and in-

Soccer team wins two in a row, three straight at home

The Charlevoix girls' soccer team racked up two consecutive wins last week.

The team beat East Jordan Monday, 10-0 and Roscommon on May 17, 3-1. The Monday win was also their third consecutive victory at Shanahan Field.

On Monday, Abby Shaperkott and Danielle Vogelheim each tallied three goals and one assist. Other goals were scored by: Kelly Dreyer — also with four assists, Shayna Drost, Libby Withrow and Kelly Zimmerman.

Other assists went to Jayme Murray, Marcy Bennett and Taryn Drost.

In the May 17 game, Dreyer and Vogelheim continued their torrid offensive play and junior Murray controlled the defensive half to lead the Rayders to a conference victory.

The Bucks scored first when their all-state candidate Jennifer Gaylor beat two defenders and took the ball, scoring on a one-on-one versus the keeper. As is becoming their custom, the Rayders stormed back when Dreyer deflected the ball to Vogelheim who sent in a rocket from 20 yards out to end the first half.

The second half belonged to Charlevoix when the same combination connected to put the Rayders on top to stay. Charlevoix's final goal belonged to Dreyer, off a nice setup from junior midfielder Karlee Barnard.

Drost turned in another fine game at midfield, marking Roscommon's Gaylor and limiting her to the one tally. Keeper Zimmerman turned back eight chances to record another win in the net.

"We're coming together at the right time and taking our game to the opposition rather than waiting," Coach Carol Madison said.

The Rayders improved to 6-5 in the conference.

Tennis team closes out season, looks to next one

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

While its season has come to a close, Charlevoix High School tennis coach Garth Miller said the team has a lot to be proud of.

"It was a real joy to coach this group this year," he said. Charlevoix finished out its season with a conference meet on May 11, a dual meet with Boyne City on May 17 and finally the regional tournament on May 18.

Miller said the team was a bit disappointed after the conference meet, as they finished in last place out of five teams. They were edged out by Boyne City by one point.

However, Charlevoix got its revenge.

In a dual meet with Boyne City following the conference tournament, the Rayders won, 4-3.

"We were really excited that we were able to avenge our loss earlier," Miller said.

The Rayders were riding high with this victory as they went into the regional tournament against 11 teams.

While the team finished in eighth place, again Miller said he saw some strong play.

He specifically pointed to Haas in the singles, Lisa Miller in the singles, the team of Molly Arnold and Melissa McDonough in doubles and the team of Bill Foster and Michelle Martin in doubles.

"It was an exciting way for those seniors to go out," Miller added. "The two doubles teams just showed extraordinary improvement. I was proud of them."

While the season is over, Miller is already looking forward to getting on the court next year.

"We have a solid nucleus coming back, but we sure will miss the leadership of the seniors," he said.

Spring sailing getting underway on the lake

A. Nony Mouse
'Yachting notes'

This is not a Weather Forecast... After stating "A. Nony's forecast is for about 70 degrees with, perhaps, a sprinkle," this mouse has been advised to give up long range weather forecasting.

Sure it was near 70 earlier in the day and later precipitation could hardly be called a sprinkle, but by race time it was darn cold, still damp and virtually no wind. Despite all that, quite a few hardy souls turned out for this, the second and final practice race of the seasons.

Again, nine J-22s crossed the starting line, as did several of the big boys — SLAPSHOT was joined by Mark Pirie's new WINDRUNNER and Kenifect's new HOOTIE. It looks as though GOTCA may have some real competition for that fleet's honors. We heard that FLASH is now in the water (and floating!) and expect her out for the first Spring Series start today (May 23).

The first race was sailed in light and variable air as THUNDER-STUCK parlayed the shifts to nose out the very fast SUPERFLUOUS. That ended up being the only completed race of the evening as the gentle breeze became no breeze about halfway through the second race. Until it died, we had what promised to be interesting competition. MOISTURE MISSILE won the start, but FIRST DATE went over early; restarted and then ended up in the lead at the first mark. That's when both the wind and the sailors called it a night.

Many thanks to Tom Griffin and Mike Miller for organizing the practice races (and for towing several becalmed skippers and crews home)!

The power boaters had their planning meeting Friday evening, but the turnout was disappointing in terms of quantity of skippers attending (although the quality was outstanding). No report yet on what great events are now planned other than participation in the Charlevoix Venetian Boat Parade, the evening of July 28, and the Charlevoix Yacht Club Annual Fantastic On-the-Water Treasure Hunt, scheduled for August 26. More later — as soon as we have that schedule of events.

NAUTICAL TRIVIA #1 — (A new feature to be included in Yachting Notes when space permits.) The Plimsoll line is a mark painted on the side of merchant vessels showing the various draught levels to which the ship may be loaded. The Plimsoll line is a circle bisected by a horizontal line, indicating the summer freeboard of the ship. Vessels less than 100 meters in length include a lowest line marked "WNA." "WNA" is the acronym for? Answer: Next Week We'll start publishing Spring Series Wednesday Race results next week. Until then, have fun and get your boats and crews in racing form.

Auction to benefit resource center to be May 31

Fourteen years ago, 15 artists joined together at the first art auction to benefit the Women's Resource Center.

Total sales reached just over $2,500. Last year 60 artists had total sales of just over $11,000. Two artists, Jan Vandenbrink and Cat Bartreau, have been in all of the past shows and are scheduled to be in this one as well.

The fifteenth annual "Women's Work" art auction benefit for the Women's Resource Center (WRC) is scheduled for May 31.

The auction will be at Stafford's Bay View Inn in Petoskey. The silent auction runs from 5 p.m. to 7 p.m. The winning bids from the Silent Auction are announced at approximately 7:15 p.m., and the Live Auction then starts at 7:30 p.m.

The silent auction will also feature some wonderful golf packages and gift certificates to local retailers and restaurants.

"Certainly we always hope that one more artist will join the auction each year and that we'll make at least one dollar more, but the real reason we all enjoy this event so much is that it's fun!" says Deb Smith, WRC Assistant Director.

"The WRC depends on community support to be able to continue to provide services and to grow. This event allows the community to give, but they also get to take something home at the end of the evening."

All of the artists donate at least one piece, and then share in the proceeds from the sale of the other one or two pieces they put in. (Many artists donate all of the proceeds.)

Pieces are usually priced at much below what you would have to pay in a gallery or store to encourage quick, exciting bidding.

The WRC is expecting approximately 50 to 60 artists to show their work during this year's event. Mediums will include: pottery, jewelry, watercolors, stained glass, mixed media, fiber art, baskets, weaving, quilted items, wood furniture, clothing and dried flowers/herbs.

Hors d'oeuvres will be available.

The cost is $15 per person or $25 per couple and tickets may be purchased at the door.

Cash, check, Visa and MasterCard will be accepted for purchases. Purchases must be taken the night of the auction.

Call the WRC at (231) 347-0067 for additional information.

Learn to mind your manners with Gilbert

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

Charlevoix resident and author Edith Gilbert is working to buck the American trend toward, a "fast food mentality" that she thinks is threatening to make table manners a thing of the past.

"Parents are not sitting down to dinner together anymore. They are running off to soccer matches or music lessons and grandparents are not living in the same community where they can have sit-down meals because families are so scattered," Gilbert said.

"There are times in our lives when we will attend weddings or family gatherings and we need to know how to compose ourselves."

So, Gilbert has taken it upon herself to educate some northern Michigan students in the virtues of table manners. Her first stop was Northwest Academy, Charlevoix's charter school, where she taught high school students the art of fine dining.

Her most recent undertaking was to prepare two fifth grade classes from Central Lake Elementary School for a five course lunch at Murphy's Lamp Light Inn in Central Lake.

Gilbert, with the help of fifth grade teachers Jeff Kessler and Eric Nuffer, gave three presentations before 36 students.

The special project was part of a confidence building unit at the school.

Kessler had left education for 20 years and recently returned to teaching. He said he sees chaos in

The special dining unit was introduced to the students as a tool to help build their confidence, not specifically to teach manners. Confidence was defined as, "knowing what you are doing."

Kessler said the premise of the unit was to, "Convince fifth graders that they have the ability to conquer uncertainty with knowledge."

Gilbert kicked things off with an imaginary outing. She called the mind bender, "Imagine you are invited to eat at the White House and they served Cornish Game Hens. What do you do?"

Gilbert told the students that good manners reflected their confidence.

The White House unit was followed up by a video titled, "The Art of Dining for Tots and Teens," which outlined the intricacies of formal dining etiquette.

Kessler said that he has showed science videos that the students yawned at but they were mesmerized by the "stuffy" dining tell-all.

Some dining tips

Charlevoix resident and author Edith Gilbert offered students the Hotel Management Association's manners guide which includes these eight pointers:

- Keep an eye on your mom. Make sure ladies and older guests are seated before sitting down.
- Be nice to your napkin. Place your napkin in your lap and leave it there except when you use it to wipe your mouth.

- Know your silverware. The name of each piece of silverware usually tells you its use. Remember to use the proper piece of silverware with the food you are eating.

- Know your place setting. Knives are placed on the right side of the plate because most people hold them in their right hand. Forks go on the left because they are held in the left hand for cutting meat.

- Get ready, get set. Do not start eating until everyone at the table has been served. This is true for every course.

- Soup should be sipped, not slurped.

- Know your salads. Salads can look like a lot of things - from lettuce, to gelatins, to fruits, to slaws. A salad is usually served in a separate bowl or plate to the left of your dinner plate.

- Wait for the main event. The entree is why you're here. So, make sure you've saved enough room for it.

- Finger foods. Some foods are hard to eat with silverware so there's nothing wrong with using your fingers. These include: olives, pickles, radishes and corn on the cob.

- I'm done. There are polite ways to let others know you are finished with your main course. Make sure your butter knife is across your bread and butter plate, your salad fork across your salad plate and your dinner knife and fork across your dinner plate.

- Say "thank you" to everyone. Waiters and waitresses have a tough job, say "thanks" every chance you get.

Gilbert takes her dining etiquette lessons to school

Gilbert followed up with a second unit that was more hands on. The students used paper plates, plastic dinner ware and imaginary toasts. Using the props, Gilbert taught the children how to act in a restaurant from the time they step through the door until they were ready to leave.

The hard work came to a head on May 17 when it came time for the kids to show their stuff. As they sauntered into the restaurant donning their Sunday best they were excited but apprehensive.

Fifth grade student Clayton Shepard said, "This is kind of scary, I'm not used to doing this all the time." But he quickly adjusted and reached for his napkin, gently placing it in his lap.

He shared the table with three other fifth grade boys, two of whom said they learned a couple rules of dining they won't forget. Jason Barnett said he learned how to slice his food properly or in his words, "how not to saw at it" and Tyler Johnson said he won't forget it's improper to rest his elbows on the table.

After the meal Gilbert said, "They (the students) could be at any prep school in the east. They did 10 toasts at least, for me, the chef, their teachers. It was absolutely adorable, their reaction was far beyond anything I expected."

The first of the two channel swing bridges

By DAVID L. MILES
Charlevoix Historical Society

By the summer of 1878, Charlevoix was gazing in wonderment and awe at the first of its two swing bridges, a lovely, feminine, perfectly balanced addition to the cityscape, and a gala sight, it was clad in a fresh coat of brilliant, vermilion paint.

Two openwork girders upheld a delicate arch-like crosspiece in the center. On festive occasions, these uprights might be girded in white wrappings swirled by garlands, then capped by small pine trees both on top and on the walkway railings. Thin double cables stretched from the girder tops to either end on both sides, structurally necessary to support the weight of the roadbed. This made it both a suspension and swing bridge that pivoted atop a huge turntable that rested on a high circle of metal pilings located within a tapered protective framework island of thick timbers set precisely in the middle of the channel.

The turntable's worm-gear mechanism was activated by a giant "key" lowered into a hole in the roadbed. At least two men were required to turn this behemoth key whose steel peg was over four feet long and oak arms stretched to 16 feet, spanning the roadbed with only six inches to spare. Four men was the best number for the quickest turning, thus not really solving the problem of the previous bridge's requirement of multiple manpower (six to operate the former winch) to be on hand for every opening. But there never seemed to be a lack of volunteers ready to pitch in. The average turning time for a cycle was about eight minutes: four to open, four to close.

(This key also was used for a few months on the fourth bridge in 1901, then relegated to emergency status once that bridge became steam powered.) Several decades later, it came into the possession of nationally known author and local teacher Bill Ratigan, whose son and daughter-in-law Patsy and Alvin Ranger donated it to the Charlevoix Historical Society. Former society president John Gaskin, grandson of Charlevoix's first mayor, Harvey Lee Iddings, expertly restored this key and with the city's approval had it mounted for permanent display in Hoffman Park on Park Avenue near the bridge. The plank walkway into and surrounding the key echo the plank roadbeds of our two swing bridges.

Within four years the channel had been widened to the dimension it enjoys today. This definitely put the stamp on Charlevoix's eminence as the most important port in northwest lower Michigan, the greatest boom to the economy of the whole region.

The first big vessel to enter created quite a stir when July 9, 1882 saw the triumphant entry of the passenger steamer Fountain City into Round Lake. She had been calling here ever since 1866 when the great Fox and Rose dock was in place jutting into Lake Michigan, disembarking her passengers there. Now she was the first of hundreds to come and when she passed through, "a lusty cheer went up from hundreds of throats," (Charlevoix Sentinel) of those assembled to welcome her near the bridge.

All could now come in, that is, except one. The U.S. Revenue Cutter Andrew Johnson, the only federal vessel on the Great Lakes, had been calling here frequently to collect customs fees. Charlevoix actually had a customs collector as a civic office. She was a side-wheeler, and entered the channel always to pull up at the north revetment just west of the bridge because the draw was too narrow by two feet for her huge side appurtenances. The channel may have been widened, but not at the bridge, so the 1882 widening did the Johnson little good.

In September of 1881, the Sentinel reported that, "The captain...when here last week, told Deputy Commissioner Green that he would make this the headquarters of his steamer next summer if the bridge draw was wide enough to admit him into the harbor. As it only lacks two feet, Commissioner Nettleton is taking up the advisability of widening the draw." David C. Nettleton was very concerned that making the Johnson cool her heels every time she came into the channel, but not into port like every other ship, would not set well with the powers that be that oversaw important waterways in Washington. He worried how this might impact the town's future fortunes in the government's eyes.

A month later, the Sentinel reported that, "Commissioner Nettleton is about to make the bridge draw wider by putting four feet of the approach on hinges. It will never have to be used except in the case of the entrance of the U.S. Steamer Andy Johnson." This claim, however, must be taken with a huge grain of salt. The problem lay not at the road-way approach, but down below at the waterline, where the revetment made the draw even narrower by several inches. It may have been wishful thinking out loud, or more likely a tongue-in-cheek sop to the government that "yes, we are studying the problem, and we're on top of it. Don't worry, the problem is near solution." As far as is known, the roadbed approach was never hinged, it would have weighed an enormous amount and required the services of an inordinate number of men to be available at certain times to heave it up, and cost a fortune to engineer. On top of that, no captain of a vessel the size of the Johnson in his right mind would ever negotiate a draw that allowed him only one foot of clearance, that he could hardly see on either side.

So, for over 20 years, in all likelihood, the Andrew Johnson was like the poor relation who was welcome to visit as long as he stayed on the front porch, and when he gained respectability (in the boat's case, a new bridge and wider draw in 1901) he was welcome to step into the parlor.

Also in 1881, Officer James Martin, who had been pulling double duty as salaried officer of the law and bridge tender, thought he should be paid more for doing two jobs, so he offered to do all his duties for $1 per day, night duty included, and it was accepted. As my father, Bob Miles, put it so succinctly in his book on Charlevoix, "It seemed most logical that the policeman should be the tender, for it was argued that in this way he could keep one eye on the ships that could navigate in a proper manner and the other eye on a few human derelicts that under certain conditions couldn't navigate at all."

(A footnote to the history of this bridge: In October of 1879, work was being done on the south approach, when "A horse belonging to H.W. Beach of Banks (township), fell through the uncompleted approach...but fortunately was hurt but little." Beach was the father of Rex Beach, famed American author of adventure novels, several of them made into films such as "The Spoilers," who was born in Atwood.)

Arnold resigns, says she cannot work with board

LIBRARY

Arnold said that prior to the May 10 library board meeting, when Wallick decided to accept a retirement proposal, she was thinking about resigning but she said she stayed on to support Wallick.

"They (the board) haven't paid a lot of attention to me for months.

Maybe I can do more from this side anyway," Arnold said.

However, in the wake of her resignation and the retirement of Wallick, Arnold said she is grappling over whether or not she will attend library board meetings.

"It will be just as icy sitting in the audience as it was sitting on the board," she said.

In reaction to Arnold's resignation, library board president Rick Brandi said, "We need a new board member I guess. We need a full board to make good decisions. It's (the resignation) unfortunate. I just thank her for the time that she spent with the board."

He explained that since the board's inception in 1997 there has never been a vacancy and all the current representatives have retained their original positions.

Each board member is appointed by the township board or, in Brandi's case, the city of Charlevoix and in Mary Ann Chew's case, the school board. They then serve a three year term before being up for re-appointment.

Brandi's position and Norwood Township representative Ethel Coeling's seat are up for re-appointment, both terms expire June 30.

Brandi said that if the board is able to find an interim director for the library they may call a special meeting. He said that they have advertised the position at universities throughout the state with library programs.

If no interested person comes forward the regularly scheduled meeting will be the next to take place at 6:30 p.m. June 14 in the library basement.

Marion supervisor Boss said that he would like to hear from Marion Township residents who are interested in filling Arnold's vacant seat. Boss can be contacted by calling 547-5287.

Lunch, Laugh and Learn series schedule

The second and third of a 10 luncheon series, "Lunch, Laugh and Learn" is scheduled for back-to-back on June 6 and 13 at the Charlevoix Country Club.

The focus will be on bridge, the popular card game on June 6. Two outstanding players and instructors will share their thoughts with luncheon attendees.

Dan Clark of Central Lake, who has a regional master card and a life master; Mary Sue Hansen of Big Rapids, both recognized in the Midwest as excellent players, will divide the audience into non-players/beginners and those currently playing.

Fundamentals will be stressed and the experienced players will learn of new strategy and special situations.

The June 13 luncheon is entitled "Get the Scoop on 2001 Venetian Festival Plans" and again, will be at the country club.

It's actually a media conference with Venetian Board president Dan Barron and Venetian Games commissioner Dean Davenport sharing for the first time publicly, the new festival innovations, special features and expanded activities.

Television, radio and print media representatives will be invited to attend. In addition, "The Captain" will introduce the queen candidates and David Miles of the Historical Society will make a short presentation of past Venetian highlights.

There is no cost to attend any of the Lunch, Laugh, and Learn sessions. The cost of an optional lunch is $8.95 and the public is invited.

To assure you have a seat for either or both of these luncheons, call for reservations at 547-9796. Reservations, however, are not required and "walk up" attendees are welcome as long as space permits.

The luncheons begin at noon and will last approximately 1 hour.

Industrial site search continues for city

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

Locations for a possible Charlevoix industrial park are being discussed by city and township officials, but finding the perfect parcel hasn't been easy.

Recently, former first ward councilman Bob Timms asked city council to look into the viability of the 29 acre site where Hoskins Manufacturing in Marion Township is located.

Aug. 1 is the proposed shutdown date for Hoskins — the close of the company will leave almost 100 employees out of work and a 75,000 square foot building vacant.

City Manager Mike Wiesner said that for several years the city has been looking for a site to designate as an industrial park, but haven't been able to find what they are looking for and Hoskins isn't the answer.

The $3.5 million price tag on the parcel, which is not yet officially on the market, is too high for the city, he said.

Aside from the dollar figure, Wiesner said other features of the property make it ill-equipped for the city's use, like the site's lack of both sewer and water lines.

Beyond utilities and finances Wiesner said that 29 acres isn't as large of a site as they were hoping to acquire. He said the city is looking for at least a 40 acre parcel, "if not more."

Rain not expected to raise water levels

By JULIE MUSILEK

Recent high volumes of rainfall may have lake lovers breathing a sigh of relief but, this summer, the Army Corps of Engineers Detroit branch is predicting Lake Michigan water levels to remain below their long-term average.

As of May 23 Charlevoix was showered in 4.54 inches of precipitation, 2.3 inches more than the area received last year during the entire month of May and 3.02 inches more than what we saw during the month of May in 1996.

Charlevoix water and wastewater superintendent, Sam Cresswell said the high volumes of precipitation will help to boost low water levels, but as was forecasted by the engineering group, no major increases for Lake Michigan water levels are on the horizon.

Police department gets new bike for patrols

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

This summer, Charlevoix City Police officers will take to the streets in style.

A new Mercedes Benz has been added to their fleet of cruisers.

In the wake of continually rising gas prices, the best thing about this mover is not its plush seat and care-free handling but that it doesn't require gas.... it's pedal powered.

Just last week the city police station received a top of the line bike, free from Mercedes Benz U.S.A. located in Orlando, Fla.

City police chief Dennis Halverson said the bike is valued at $3,000.

"Obviously, another piece of equipment of this caliber is a nice addition. I'm optimistic that it will work out fine," he added.

The force already has two patrol bikes, but Halverson said they are more of a mountain bike style.

City officers use the mountain bikes to patrol areas like Mt. McSaub and the beaches. The Benz is more of a street bike.

Halverson foresees officer Jim Schlappi and officer Peter Shrift using the bike often to patrol downtown parks at night.

Halverson said three weeks ago he received a letter from Mercedes Benz U.S.A. offering the city their special police bike and he filled out the response.

After sending in the response Halverson called other police chiefs around the state. He said none of the chiefs he spoke with had heard of the free police cycle special offer.

"For whatever reason they picked us we're happy," Halverson said.

The bike, which arrived May 20, was put together by Charlevoix resident Todd Friedinger on May 23 and is ready to take to the roads.

Remember the rules of summer in Charlevoix

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

In order to keep people safe and ticket free, Charlevoix Police Chief Dennis Halverson is reminding readers to obey city ordinances that are seasonal in nature.

The three main ordinances that he says he finds more people forgetting in summer are: Prohibitions on bikes, skateboards and rollerblades on downtown sidewalks, people not picking up after their pets and people having alcohol in the parks after 9:30 p.m.

On the first ordinance, Halverson said people are always forgetting about that rule and riding their bikes or rollerblades downtown. This creates a safety problem for pedestrians and causes damage to city property, especially when it involves rollerblades and skateboards.

"They just play havoc with our rails and everything. They just really do a lot of damage to it," he said.

Halverson also said people must remember the city is not porta-potty for their pets.

"While people are walking their dogs, they must possess a device to pick up and carry away dung," he said.

As for the last least-known ordinance, Halverson simply said the rule only applies to parks within the city that allow alcohol. Since alcohol is prohibited from any park within 1,000 feet of a highway, that means you are only allowed to possess alcohol at Michigan Beach, Depot Beach and Ferry Beach.

In addition to these ordinances, Halverson said people should remember that parking is actively enforced in the summertime.

As of Memorial Day weekend, the parking meters in the downtown area have gone up and a person has been hired by the police department to check them. Also, there is a two hour parking limit on the side streets and there is no overnight parking without a permit.

"Parking is a high priority because the volume of cars and the people increases," Halverson said.

By having parking enforcement, he said the police are keeping people safe and helping the merchants by creating turnover.

Halverson also reminds people to keep a cool head in their vehicles while driving around the city in the congested summer traffic.

"That is probably our number one root cause of (traffic) problems. People get frustrated and get in a hurry," he said.

"You can't in Charlevoix." If you lose your cool in the city traffic, your chances of getting into an accident or getting a traffic ticket by a city police officer greatly increase.

"You have to put your mind in another gear in Charlevoix in the summer in regard to traffic and driving around," he said.

OPINIONS

Wind can provide great power supply

Electricity courses through every corner of this country.

The warm glows of our homes at night, the alarm clocks waking us up for another day, the computers in our offices and the televisions we use to unwind are just some of the many devices in our lives dependent on this force.

But, there are problems with this resource. Electricity does not just spontaneously appear in the lines leading to our homes, but it must be created by an electric company through such ways as the burning of coal or even messing with smaller-than-microscopic particles to create energy in a nuclear reactor.

However, this coal can produce pollution as it burns into the atmosphere or is mined from the ground and a nuclear reactor's by-product is toxic waste — a substance that will kill you outright.

Even with the messiness that results from producing electricity, we are a growing nation with even increasing energy needs.

Therefore it is vital that we find other ways of producing more electricity, but in environmentally friendly ways.

EDITORIAL

And one of the ways we can get electricity with minimal impact to the environment is by harnessing the power of the wind.

Here in Charlevoix County we have started looking into that very power source — capturing the power of the wind by using wind turbines — specifically in Bay Township.

But some people have complained that these turbines visually unappealing in rural landscapes and they are fighting the township to keep them out, all the while enjoying the benefits of electricity in their homes.

These wind turbines may look a little out of place in a rural environment, but so does smog, acid rain and coal mines.

It is time for us to start looking into other sources of energy and this is one way we can do it.

While a electricity producing wind turbine may look a little out of place in a farmer's field, it sure beats slowly losing our environment to pollution.

Young string musicians put on great performance

Edith Gilbert
'Behind the news'

dents lifted their little bows — some not much bigger than a ruler — while I held my breath. Could they really play a tune? You bet they could!

I recognized the opening melody, "Three Blind Mice," followed by other more spirited tunes, such as "Theme from the New World Symphony." The audience cheered, clapped and video-taped with such enthusiasm one would have thought they were listening to Isaac Stern himself.

As the evening progressed, the youngsters re-grouped, and more difficult pieces were performed, such as "Hoedown from Rodeo" by Aaron Copeland. The evening concluded with Beethoven's "Ode to Joy" arranged and conducted by Kary Johnson and performed by the Crooked Tree Youth Orchestra.

Everyone marveled at gutsy Kary Johnson! The logistics of arranging such a concert was formidable, but she pulled it off with great professionalism.

Thirteen area schools reaching from Central Lake to Pellston, covering a two county area participated in this project. Hired by the Crooked Tree Arts Center last August, Kary arrived here to begin this popular string program in 13 public and private schools, located in Charlevoix and Emmet County. These include Charlevoix Elementary, St. Mary's and Beaver Island Community School. Thirteen children from Beaver Island came over by boat for this special concert. That's nearly half of the school population!

Kary Johnson has been a long time public and private music teacher. She is a graduate of Western Michigan University and Arizona State University. She started the Kalamazoo Symphony Society and has taught for 22 years in Kalamazoo and Battle Creek Public Schools.

This summer, July 10 to Aug. 2, The Crooked Tree Arts Center is offering a mini summer camp for string instruments. Students will meet three mornings a week — Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday — from 10 a.m. to noon at the Art Center in Petoskey.

Johnson will be assisted by Bing Farrar as low strings instructor and John Van Patton, violin instructor. Fee enrollment for the mini camp is $90 for four weeks, $60 for two weeks.

Thank you

Editor:

On behalf of the Charlevoix Elementary Parent-Teacher Organization, I would like to thank all of the parents and teachers who volunteered their time to help with the Annual Spring Carnival. Again this year, we had school board members who helped with our concessions and games. We truly need each and every volunteer and your help is greatly appreciated — by the PTO and especially by the children who love this event!

This year we added three new games. Many boys and girls enjoyed one game in particular. The game was "Shoot with the Stars." Six of our very own Rayders came to shoot baskets with the kids. They were: Scott Parrish, Jim Shepherd, Dennis Avery, Jere Teuscher, Nate Teuscher and Patrick Gowell. Thanks guys, the kids loved it! The prizes for this game were 16" blow up basketballs — I think our boys played it 120 times!! They literally had a "ball"! You guys are the best! We also had many other high school volunteers who helped with games, the black light room and prizes! They were: Mandy Macks, Maggie Romig and Kim Miller. Thanks to Gayle Cherry for rounding them up! Our face painters were: Kaylee Kughman, Erika Loucks, Amy Drew, Jessica Dominic and Erin Buckner. Many thanks to you for your time! Also, many, many thanks to our great set up and take down crew!

As always, our raffle was a huge success!

Our raffle can only be a success because of the great prize donations from our area businesses. I sincerely thank all of you for your generosity. The money raised is used to do many great things for our kids and their school.

Another new game this year was "Ace in the hole." The kids enjoyed tossing birdies into a toilet for their chance to win a safety flasher!

If any of you would like to say "thank you" personally to the people who put in many hours working for "your" kids, they are Mary Kushner, Carrie Jelinek, Heather Kage and Sherry McCary.

Start school later

Editor:

I'm a student at Charlevoix Middle School. I think that school should start later in the day. When we come to school after waking up at 6 a.m., we are very tired. Sometimes kids even fall asleep in school. I don't see why we have to start so early. I feel we could have a better and stronger education if school just started two hours later. We would be more alert and aware of our assignments and what is going on in class. We would all succeed and go farther.

Kids get stressed out when they are exhausted and have an overload of work to do. When we get stressed out we often do things we shouldn't do. If school started two hours later, I think it would help in all areas of our education.

Make guns illegal

Editor:

Please help us have a better country by making guns illegal, so people can't have one in their possession. I think guns should be illegal so we can live in a better country and kids don't have to be scared when they walk to a park to play. From all the stories I hear on TV I get a little scared myself. After awhile it makes me wonder, why do we even invent guns. They're just plain old dangerous.

The first reason why I think guns should be illegal is because, a lot of people just lose their minds and shoot. For example, a person could drive past a play ground and pull out a gun and shoot. The person in the car could have not even known the little girl or boy. That can happen anytime and anywhere. It's all because, the person in the car was mad or lonely. It could have been any other reason too.

If we were to make guns illegal hunters would still be able to hunt. They could use bow and arrows, traps and many other things as well. Is it even really a sport to go out and shoot a poor defenseless baby deer, that never did anything to you? I sure hope not. For all the shootings we had, I am surprised there's this many people still living on earth. Thousands of people have died because of shootings. A lot of shooting took place last year. One of the biggest shootings was in Colorado. Two high school boys killed several kids and also themselves. This happened because they did not have many friends. If you can, or try, to make guns illegal, neither I or any other kid will have to worry about walking or playing by the road or anywhere else. When I watch the news at night I won't have to see anything on gun shootings. On less gun, one less worry. So please stop the violence.

Golf prices should be same

Editor:

I am a student at Charlevoix Middle School. We should make township prices and the prices for the people in town the same at the golf course.

First, you could make more money if you did this.

If you lower prices, more people can afford to come.

Second, some people can't pay $410 for a yearly pass.

Some of the people that do come might figure out a way to get their passes cheaper.

You may also lose business along with money if you don't do this.

Finally, people that live outside of town have to pay almost twice as much money.

There should be a mile radius for how far you can live outside of town to pay the in town rates.

Thank you for paying attention to this.

Legos cost too much

Editor:

I am a student in sixth grade. I think Lego's cost too much. Even though Legos are little plastic blocks, they are really expensive. Even a little box costs about $10. Poor families can't experience this educational toy. I am sure the Lego Company would make more money than they already are, by selling them for less. If the prices were lower more people would buy Legos. The company would make more money.

I also think you should lower the prices so families can get their kids good Christmas and birthday presents.

Why would they have the prices so high anyway? I mean, they are just little cheap plastic blocks. I don't understand why they should cost so much money. I think Lego should get their act together and lower the prices for their own sake and for the sake of children everywhere.

Last week the petunias were planted all along the main street of Charlevoix.

For months to come we will have the beauty of these flowers enhancing the attractiveness of our community. For some people, who only come to Charlevoix during the summer, the petunias are simply part of the reason for the name "Charlevoix the Beautiful."

The flowers are very noticeable and may even act to draw some new people to sample the life of our city.

I believe there is a parallel here to the spiritual life. As Christians, we are also called to grow things in our lives that are attractive. The "garden" that we are to cultivate is described in Galatians 5:22-23 where Paul, after putting forward the rather grim list known as the "works of the flesh," goes on to make a contrast with the "fruit of the Spirit": "But the fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, peace, patience, kindness, goodness, faithfulness, gentleness and self-control. Against such things there is no law."

The beauty and actual attractiveness of our lives is enhanced by the Fruit of the Spirit being in full bloom. People who see the Fruit tend to be drawn to it and, hence, are drawn to the kingdom of God.

A great deal could be said about each of these qualities, but I thought it would be sufficient to mention one short scripture for each, letting them be self explanatory (and then a sort of summary passage at the end).

LOVE (John 13:34-35): "A new command I give you: Love one another. As I have loved you, so you must love one another. By this all men will know that you are my disciples, if you love one another."

JOY (John 15:10-11): "If you obey my commands, you will remain in my love, just as I have obeyed my Father's commands and remain in his love. I have told you this so that my joy may be in you and that your joy may be complete."

PEACE (John 14:27): "Peace I leave with you; my peace I give you. I do not give to you as the world gives. Do not let your hearts be troubled and do not be afraid."

PATIENCE (Colossians 1:10-12): "And we pray this in order that you may live a life worthy of the Lord and may please him in every way; bearing fruit in every good work, growing in the knowledge of God, being strengthened with all power according to his glorious might so that you may have great endurance and patience, and joyfully giving thanks to the Father, who has qualified you to share in the inheritance of the saints in the kingdom of light."

KINDNESS (Colossians 3:12): "Therefore, as God's chosen people, holy and dearly loved, clothe yourselves with compassion, kindness, humilty, gentleness and patience." GOODNESS (Ephesians 5:8-10): "For you were once darkness, but now you are light in the Lord. Live as children of light (for the fruit of the light consists in all goodness, righteousness and truth) and find out what pleases the Lord."

FAITHFULNESS (3 John 1:3-4): "It gave me great joy to have some brothers come and tell about your faithfulness to the truth and how you continue to walk in the truth. I have no greater joy than to hear that my children are walking in the truth."

GENTLENESS (Philippians 4:4-6): "Rejoice in the Lord always. I will say it again: Rejoice! Let your gentleness be evident to all. The Lord is near. Do not be anxious about anything, but in everything, by prayer and petition, with thanksgiving, present your requests to God."

SELF-CONTROL (2 Timothy 1:7): "For God did not give us a spirit of timidity, but a spirit of power, of love and of self-discipline. (or self-control)"

By way of summary, I will leave you with 2 Peter 1:5-8 ... "For this very reason, make every effort to add to your faith goodness; and to goodness, knowledge; and to knowledge, self-control; and to self-control, perseverance; and to perseverance, godliness; and to godliness, brotherly kindness; and to brotherly kindness, love. For if you possess these qualities in increasing measure, they will keep you from being ineffective and unproductive in your knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ."

City to offer direct pay for utility customers

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

You can now have your city utility payments taken directly out of your checking account.

According to Charlevoix City treasurer Rick Brandi, starting next month, any Charlevoix resident that pays utilities bills to the city, has the option of having those bills paid directly from their personal checking accounts. This eliminates the need for them to send in or drop off checks to city hall.

Brandi said he tested the system out on himself and it worked perfectly.

"They can use whoever their regular bank is. It should simplify it," he added.

Payment for the utility bill will be taken out of the participating customer's accounts on the due date of the bill. Customers will still receive a bill in the mail, but it would say "direct pay" on it.

While making bill payments easier for the city utility customers, Brandi said the new system will also save the city money.

For each utility bill paid by check, the city must pay a transaction fee to the bank. However, by taking the money directly out of the customer's account, the bank does not count that as a transaction, thus there is no transaction fee.

Brandi added, utilities that are currently under this system generally have about 20 percent of their customers using the option. He is hoping to get 400-500 of the city's customers taking advantage of the direct pay option.

Forms for the new plan are being mailed to Charlevoix utility customers throughout the next few weeks.

For more information, contact the City Treasurers Office at 547-3259.

Bluewater Marine opens for business to the boaters

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

Boaters in the Charlevoix area have a new place to go for all their maintenance needs, Bluewater Marine Services.

Bluewater Marine Services opened for business on April 1 and is owned by Larry Nunemaker and Steve Tuttle, both of Charlevoix.

Their principle service is boat repair and upkeep, but they also offer a variety of specialty services. Some of those services are: varnishing, waxing, fiberglass repair, installations, lettering, gelcoat repairs and detailing services.

Nunemaker said he opened the business in the area because it is a great location for this type of company. Plus, he said it was a service he thinks is needed.

"I enjoy working on boats," Nunemaker said. And this is something he has enjoyed for 15 years, adding years of experience to his work.

Nunemaker added the company is very mobile, giving them the ability to perform most repairs and services on short notice. Plus, while they are located in Charlevoix, they can provide service to boaters in Petoskey, Bay Harbor, Boyne City and East Jordan.

"With the season fast approaching, we look forward to serving your boating needs," Nunemaker added.

Bluewater Marine Services is open Monday through Saturday, year-round. The business can be contacted by calling 547-1358 or (231) 409-1799.

Learning about the plush lifestyle

Students in Mrs. Vondra's class at Charlevoix Elementary School raised $190 during a three month popcorn sale they had every Friday at the school. The project was meant to teach the students money management skills. The students decided to use the money for a lunch outing to Nanny's Restaurant in Charlevoix. The outing took place May 14, but what the students didn't know was that they would be traveling to the restaurant and back in a limousine provided by Quality Limousine of Charlevoix. Rayders close conference season with 6-0, 7-3 wins

By ALLEN TELGENHOFF
Sports writer

The Rayders closed their conference schedule on a successful note with a doubleheader sweep over Kalkaska, 6-0 and 7-3. Earlier in the week, Charlevoix split with Cheboygan, winning the opener, 7-5 but dropping the nightcap, 10-2.

Against Cheboygan, the Rayders rode a big four-run fifth inning come-from-behind for the win. The Chiefs led 5-3 heading into the decisive frame. Matt Kilkenny hit a two run double to get Charlevoix close and Matt Kochanny followed with the game winning RBI single.

Defensive gems helped, as well as centerfielder Matt Horon threw a Cheboygan runner out at the plate in the fifth and the Rayder catcher threw a Chief runner attempting to steal second out to end the game.

Chris Loper picked up the win on the mound, overcoming four Rayder errors to give up only four hits, striking out six. Loper helped his own "Game one was a very exciting come-from-behind win for us."

Pete Scholten,
Charlevoix baseball coach cause with a two-run single in the first inning and a double in the fourth.

In the nightcap, Cheboygan used an eight-run second inning to blow the game open early for the win. The Chief's hurler had a no-hit bid broken up by singles by Horon and Jeremiah Teuscher in the sixth.

"(Game one) was a very exciting come-from-behind win for us," coach Pete Scholten said. "We had some key hits in the fifth inning and some big defensive plays in both the fifth and sixth inning that helped us pull it out."

The Rayders' sweep on the Blazers' upped their own conference mark to 8-4.

Dennis Avery (6-0 on the year) needed only 59 pitches to throw a four-hit, one-walk gem in the opener.

Registration for junior golf to be June 14 at city course

Registration will soon be opening for the sixth year of the Charlevoix County Junior Golf Association's program.

Official registration for this summer's junior golf program is June 14 at the Municipal Course.

Area youngsters must be at least 8 years of age and no older than 17 and must be accompanied by a parent or guardian.

Registration for interested participants 12 years old and older is at 9 a.m. and for those eight and younger is at 10 a.m.

There is a per-lesson fee of $4 or a $35 season plan option is also offered. The season plan pays for all scheduled lessons and includes accident insurance.

Pros from local courses that will make up this year's staff include: Steve Braun and Marty Joy from the Belvedere Club, Joan Waha from Dunmaglas, Steve Good, Jina Rapin and Shane Hollandsworth from the Charlevoix Country Club and Scott Blechel from the Municipal course.

The emphasis will again be on learning golf rules and procedures, proper fundamentals and techniques and course etiquette.

There will be two sessions each week at the Belvedere, the Charlevoix Country Club, Municipal, Antrim Dells and Dunmaglas. A couple of tournaments will also be spaced in during the program.

In addition, there will be a Sunday evening "fun" league for selected advanced players, with a variety of events scheduled for the Belvedere course. Plans are underway to allow juniors to participate in a pilot program with a fee-reducing element at the Municipal course on certain days.

Director Dean Davenport also reminds parents, "We will again have scholarships available based on need for families where the fee may be a hardship with details available at registration. We also will have loaner clubs available. Additional adult volunteers are needed to work in the mentor program so that whenever youngsters play a few holes they will have an adult monitoring them. Those interested should call 547-6433 or the city recreation department 547-3253.

State meet to be Saturday

TRACK

Miller said the relay teams are looking fantastic and have been seeded into the top eight of state.

As for individuals, Miller said Swenor and Ulrich are looking good. Both of these girls have broken the school record in distance running twice this year.

"They both have potential to medal," Miller said.

On the boys' team, Coach Ken Plude said this will be a great learning experience for them all. Of all the boys going to state, only one — Gnatkowski — has been to a state meet before.

"They are green, but this is the only way to get experience," Plude said.

Plude also said his relay teams have some great potential to medal at the state meet. As for individuals, he said Gnatkowski's experience will come in handy.

Great evening greets first spring sailing race

A. Nony
Mouse
'Yachting Notes'

An amazing evening! A fairly strong wind greeted the skippers at the start of this, the first race of the Charlevoix Yacht Club Spring Series and held for a while before shifting 180 degrees and diminishing.

The amazing part was seeing two boats, both with spinners full, each sailing downwind directly toward each other! That breeze then dropped to nothing for long enough to discourage all and cause a few to simply give up the ghost. Later, Mother Nature relented, the sunshine broke through and a four or five knot breeze carried the remainder of the fleet to the finish line. Another rather unusual event noted at the finish line as the P-26 CYGNUS took line honors, crossing at 7:33:39, with fleet mate ORIGINAL SIN only 20 seconds back.

In the Spinnaker Fleet it was GOTHCA; trailed 25 seconds later by HOOTIE. WINDRUNNER followed just over a minute later with SLAPSHOT back a bit. Looks like MINT JULEP must have dropped out.

In the P-26 fleet, LOST VERMONT and ARTEMIS distantly trailed the above-mentioned CYGNUS and ORIGINAL SIN.

BALD EAGLE nailed down first place in the JAM Fleet but also was last in that fleet as no others finished. (Good looking crew, skipper!)

Eleven J-22s made it to the finish line with first place II RECKLESS, almost 2 minutes ahead of HUSSY. Then we saw PALEFACE LITE, FIRST DATE and SWINE FLEW wrap up the top five in close order. A few minutes later THUNDERSTRUCK crossed ahead of CRAZY HORSE by only 10 seconds.

Just 12 seconds later HIGH MAINTENANCE crossed the line. In another minute, the rest of the J-22 Fleet followed: ROCK STEADY, SUPERFLUOUS (what on earth happened, Marty?) and BAN-ZAI.

NAUTICAL TRIVIA #2. An easy one, after last week's problem child. Navy personnel riding in their particular type of craft are the subjects of an old sea chantey. To win this week's contest, e-mail josh@northlink.net with the correct watercraft for each of the following: 1) Seamen, 2) Admiral, 3) Captain.

Tiebreaker 1: How does riding in his craft make the captain feel? Tiebreaker 2: What does riding in his craft give the admiral?

Summary of last week's question and the answer: The Plimsoll line on vessels less than 100 meters in length include a lowest line marked "WNA." The answer — "WNA" is an acronym for "Winter, North Atlantic."

HEY, THERE, SUNFISHERMEN (& WOMEN)! First practice races for the Sunday Sunfish Sailors will be June 10. We don't have official word on time or location — if you don't hear further before that day, sail to (or launch from) the foot of Eastern Avenue (Pine Point) in time for a 2 p.m. start, just offshore. If a member would like to borrow one to try out this fun sport, contact Josh at 547-2000. First come, first served. Hope to see you at the Club this Friday evening, June 1, as Noel and Lynn are the hosts.

Yachting Notes is submitted each week during the "warm" months by the Charlevoix Yacht Club. To contact the club, see its web site at www.charlevoixyachtclub.org or call 547-9170.

Water levels not expected to rise from recent rainfall

WATER

In fact, the group's web site (huron.lre.usace.army.mil/hmp/ghh.html) states, "Lakes Michigan, Huron, St. Clair and Erie are expected to experience less than average seasonal rises through the summer."

As of May 18 the engineering group said they expected Lake Michigan water levels to be 577.26 feet while the average level shown on their charts was 577.5 feet. The group's calculations prove the lake level is three inches below last year's mark.

Cresswell isn't worried. He believes the lake levels ebb and flow in naturally determined cycles.

His "the lake will rebound again" attitude may be shared with those who lived in Charlevoix in 1986 when the lake reached its all-time high.

In fact, current Lake Michigan water levels are 52 inches below their 1986 level.

Those whose time in Charlevoix dated back to 1964 may also remember a period when residents and visitors were sweating the low water levels: Lake Michigan hit its all-time low that year and current levels are eight inches above the 1964 dry-spell.

The group expects to see Lake Michigan's water level rise another two inches by June 18.

This graph shows the water levels and predicted water levels for 2000-2002. The lowest line is the lowest level, second is the current level, third is the average level and the fourth line is the highest level. (Courtesy graph)

Art auction to benefit Women's Resource Center

Fourteen years ago, 15 artists joined together at the first art auction to benefit the Women's Resource Center. Total sales reached just over $2,500. Last year, 60 artists had total sales of just over $11,000.

Two artists, Jan Vandenbrink and Cat Barteau have been in all of the past shows and are scheduled to be in this one as well.

The fifteenth annual "Women's Work" art auction benefit for the center is scheduled for May 31 at Stafford's Bay View Inn in Petoskey. The silent auction, featuring golf packages and gift certificates will take place from 5 p.m. to 7. The winning bids from the silent auction will be announced at 7:15 p.m. and the live auction will follow at 7:30 p.m.

"Certainly we always hope that one more artist will join the auction each year and that we'll make at least one more dollar, but the real reason we enjoy this event so much is that it's fun," Women's Resource Center assistant director, Deb Smith said.

"The WRC depends on community support to be able to continue to provide service and to grow. This event allows the community to give, but they also get to take something home at the end of the evening."

All of the artists donate at least one piece and then share in the proceeds from the sale of the other one or two pieces they put in. Many artists donate all of the proceeds. Pieces are usually priced below what you would have to pay in a gallery or a store.

The WRC is expecting 50 to 60 artists to show their work at this year's event. Assorted mediums will include: pottery, jewelry, watercolors, stained glass, mixed media, fiber art, baskets, weaving, quilted items, wood furniture, clothing and dried flowers/herbs.

Hors d'oeuvres will be served and a cash bar will be available.

Tickets may be purchased at the door. Cost for the event is $15 per person and $25 per couple.

Cash, check, Visa and MasterCard can be used to make auction purchases which must be taken the night of the auction.

For more information call the center at (231) 347-0067.

AAA gives tips on boating safety for summer

Boat owners must exercise extra caution on water, says AAA.

Whether you're out for an evening of fishing on your favorite lake, or paddling down a river in your new kayak, small boat owners should bring plenty of safety awareness with them when they shove off from the dock, says AAA Michigan.

"For the first time, Michigan's boat registrations have topped one million," states Richard J. Miller, AAA Michigan Community Safety Services manager.

"State figures show that pre-season boat registrations stand at more than 1,000,049, and will probably rise as the summer gets underway," he says. "There are many new boaters on the lakes, especially those using smaller craft, and the combination of inexperience, low water and other factors means boaters need to practice extra vigilance this summer."

Figures from 2000 show that boating fatalities overall are up, and nearly three of four of Michigan's boating deaths in 2000 occurred in small craft 16 feet and under. Thirty-three persons died while boating on Michigan waters last year, compared with 28 in 1999. Twenty-five of the 33 boating fatalities recorded last year, or 73 percent, occurred in vessels 16 feet and under, and 24 who died were not wearing a Personal Flotation Device, or PFD. Four deaths occurred in canoes, four in kayaks, four on personal watercraft, 14 motorboats, four in rowboats and three in sailboats.

Small boat operators are dealing with special circumstances that operators of larger craft don't face, so the need for PFDs is especially critical, AAA Michigan advises. Small craft, 16 feet and under, are most often used by anglers. Compared to larger craft, they are more vulnerable to swamping by waves from passing boats and are inherently more unstable.

The most common accident involving anglers is falling overboard and capsizing while trying to move around or land a fish. Twenty-one of the 33 fatalities in 2000 involved capsizing and falling overboard.

If you must move in a small boat, crouch down to lower your center of gravity, and move slowly.

Healthcare Comes Home

"Mom loves her independent life, but she needs some regular assistance. We tried to be with her every day, but our work schedules and the kids' activities made that almost impossible. I worried and felt guilty just about all of the time.

Then we learned that VitalCare could help. Mom went along with the idea of having a home health aide come over three days a week to help her with laundry and light housekeeping. I stopped by the other day, and the two of them were having a great time over lunch. I am so pleased; Mom has her independence, and I have peace of mind."

Search for site continues for city

INDUSTRIAL

"In the long-term, I question whether or not 40 would even be large enough," he said.

He said the Hoskins parcel is more practical for a company looking to move into a pre-existing facility.

"The city is looking to provide industrial lots for businesses that need to expand or move," Wiesner said.

While the building may be well-suited for a business to move in and set up shop, Marion Township zoning administrator, Bob Drebenstedt said that a broker out of Traverse City contacted him, before the impending shut-down was even announced, inquiring about a possible rezoning of the parcel from industrial to residential.

Drebenstedt said he told the individual they would have to speak with the Marion Township Planning Board. He said the broker's intention was not to relocate a business to Charlevoix but instead to build condominiums on the land.

"We all know it (the Hoskins land) is going to go condos," Drebenstedt said.

So, the search continues and the question of where the city will find land for industry remains. But, with the current rate of property acquisition in Charlevoix and as more residents move to outlying townships, the clock may be ticking.

Wiesner said township property purchasing is a concern for the city also. "As property develops it (the search for property) will get more and more difficult."

Drebenstedt said that the Hoskins site is only one of the city's choices.

"I know of another one out there they (city officials) are looking at too, but it is not an absolute. If it's a secret right now, I give the benefit of the doubt to the city because they are trying to keep the price down," he said.

Beaver Island graduates excited for future

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

For five of the six Beaver Island class of 2001 graduates the diploma they'll receive June 9 will symbolize more than four years of high school success. It means they'll soon make a move from the island to the mainland.

Class valedictorian Kyle Wojan, was born in Charlevoix and moved to the island when he wasn't even a week old. Now, 17 years later, he'll trade life on the island in — for at least a few years — to further his education.

"I'm looking forward to the move, in a way it will be weird. It's not too far of a drive home," Wojan said.

In August, Wojan will make the move to Mt. Pleasant where he is enrolled in Central Michigan University's Cad-Cam program that focuses on computer aided drafting.

Computer aided drafting sounds complicated, but Wojan's academic track record shows he's capable of success — he will graduate from the Beaver Island school with a 3.754 grade point average.

"Being valedictorian this year shows how hard I've worked over the years and I am being recognized for good grades," Wojan said.

Wojan is not only an academic star, but he also proved himself to be an asset on the court. He was named the Beaver Island basketball team's most valuable player in both his junior and senior years.

Courtney Moore, 18, is Wojan's neighbor on the island. Moore will also be joining him on the Central campus. She plans to start out with a focus on general studies and possibly make her way into photo journalism.

After looking at Moore's academic performance it is obvious that come August, Mt. Pleasant will have some hot competition on their hands. Moore came in with a 3.7, just a fraction below Wojan.

"We've been competing since we were young. But second best with high honors is not disappointing," she said.

Moore said that even with Wojan by her side, and a few other friends, the move to one of Michigan's largest campuses will be an adjustment.

"I think that smaller schools and smaller class sizes are better, you get more individual attention. It will be different not knowing everyone. Here you've known everyone since you were little," she said.

Moore and Wojan's classmate, Abigail Adams, 18, will be attending Olivet College located just outside of Battle Creek. Adams won't be an average student on campus, she will also be a member of the women's basketball team.

Adams was accepted into Olivet's HY-PERS program focused on health and sports. She said that her Sept. 2 move to the mainland won't be too overwhelming because Olivet's campus is small.

Like Adams, Wojan and Moore,

Erin Russell, 18, is excited about what will follow graduation day. Russell plans to attend Western Michigan University in Kalamazoo where she'll major in Health Education and minor in English.

She has her study plans mapped out but she's a little worried about her Aug. 23 move to Western's big campus.

"I think at first it will be a major culture shock. I'll have to deal with more people and less attention from my teachers," she said. But she isn't letting culture shock concerns get in the way, she said she is looking forward to diving into all the great things a big school has to offer.

"I am looking forward to my first football game and to being on my own and taking care of myself," she said.

While the others didn't mention the high cost of education these days, Andrea Keehn, 17, said without the Army National Guard she wouldn't be able to go to school at all. After graduation Keehn will be stationed at the National Guard's South Carolina post.

She said that after she completes her time in the service the guard has a number of colleges for her to choose from.

"I'm going to learn about mechanics at AIT in Maryland, I heard it is really fun there and you can learn a lot," Keehn said.

Charlevoix Val and Sal very involved

BY JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

The "unintelligent blond" stereotype commonly associated with having fair hair has been discredited by Charlevoix High School's class of 2001 valedictorian, Shannon Nystrom and salutatorian, Corey Bascom.

Throughout their academic careers this dynamic duo has excelled across the board. Whether it was math, science or English they worked diligently, received the grades and in the end took home the highest honors given to graduates.

Nystrom will graduate from Charlevoix High School with a flawless 4.0 grade point average. Her academic success has been recognized time and time again.

During her four years in high school, Nystrom was given her academic letter and four pins, in her sophomore and junior years she was chosen for the French award and during her freshman, junior and senior years she was given the career and technical education award.

She also defied the odds by being both right and left brained — Nystrom is both academically and artistically inclined. In fact, she was given the art award as both a freshman and a sophomore and lettered as a drum major with the high school band.

While Nystrom has been hailed for her academic and artistic inclination she also displayed some fancy footwork on the field and in the studio. She lettered her freshman and sophomore years with the varsity soccer team and has dedicated many years of her life to ballet, pointe and jazz dance.

When she's not busy dancing, studying or painting, Nystrom has been hard at work with school organizations including the National Honor Society, Student Council and the French Club.

So how does she do it all? "It's time management really. It's also self-discipline and the desire to accomplish all of these things," she explained.

After four years of excelling in multiple realms, her work was recognized by numerous universities. Nystrom received an academic merit scholarship from Belmont University located in Nashville, Tenn. where she will begin her collegiate studies in the fall of 2001. At Belmont, Nystrom plans to major in music business and minor in video production as part of the university's honor's program.

Her MEAP test scores also earned her the Michigan Merit Award and she was recognized with the Alma College Distinguished Trustee Honors Scholarship.

Bascom came in less than a tenth of a point away from Nystrom's perfect grade point, scoring a 3.931 overall.

"My hard work and dedication has paid off," he said.

And, like Nystrom he earned his academic letter and four academic pins and was awarded the career and technical education award.

The similar paths diverged when it came time to choose a foreign language. Bascom chose Spanish over French and made the most of bilingualism in his four year stint with the Spanish club.

While Nystrom was busy dancing Bascom kept in shape shooting hoops, running cross country and teeing off.

Now that it has come time for him to make a move in his academic career Bascom found his high MEAP test scores earned him the financial rewards associated with being a recipient of the Michigan Merit Award. The scholarship will help him out with tuition in the fall of 2001 when he'll step onto the Grand Valley State University campus.

Bascom was accepted to Grand Valley's prestigious Seidman School of Business where he will study either business finance or accounting.

Polluted industry site to be cleaned

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

Contamination cleanup efforts are underway at Charlevoix's DME Company, which is listed on the Michigan Department of Environmental Quality's (MDEQ) fiscal year 2000 project list.

On May 31 Technical Drilling Services dug 30 feet below the earth's surface to retrieve soil samples at the contaminated site of DME Company located at 06342 Ferry Road.

Bob Wagner, environmental manager with the Gaylord post of the MDEQ says that if Charlevoix's DME Company won't clean up the PCE (tetrachloroethylene) groundwater contamination they caused, then the MDEQ will.

"The contaminant has been discharging into the lake for some time and it's begun migrating to residents' homes," Wagner said.

Wagner explained that DME is currently pursuing a design of a system that will pump the contaminated water out of the ground, strip it of its contaminants and then re-inject it into the ground.

If the company is unwilling to follow through with the cleanup, Wagner's MDEQ team has a backup plan.

"One way or another there will be a cleanup of the groundwater. We will fund it if DME doesn't go forward," Wagner said.

Wagner explained that the MDEQ is in the process of designing a $300,000 treatment application that will release a hydrogen compound into the ground which will reformulate the chemical into a non-harmful state.

Side effects of PCE contamination include: liver and kidney damage and chronic skin disorders.

Graduation giddiness

Each graduate was also congratulated by school principal Gary Grundman with a hug, as is seen here (right) with graduate Nigel Martin. Middle School students discuss drug use

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

Everyone can agree that drugs and kids don't mix, so how and why are substances making their way into the hands of local students?

"There are a couple people in our grade who use drugs. A few people give us the reputation of 'druggies,'" Charlevoix Middle School seventh grade student Scott Barta said.

To try and make headway into this issue four seventh grade students from Charlevoix Middle School, were interviewed following a presentation about drugs made by Pam Allen from Listen America.

The students offered candid opinions about the issue of use in their schools and in their lives.

They said that Allen's focus on tobacco products was merited because after inhalants, alcohol and tobacco are the two most accessible substances to them.

The first slide Allen showed was a cartoon camel smoking a cigarette. She asked the students to name the character. A few giggles were heard throughout the crowd and students furiously scribbled their answers.

Allen said that cigarette companies are using the character to intentionally market their deadly product to younger kids. She said that in a survey, more kindergartners recognized Joe Camel than did Mickey Mouse.

She then showed the students cancer infected lungs and mouths. Comments like "gross," and "yuck" erupted from the students.

The next slide was a man who had his cancer infected voice box removed. He was smoking a cigarette through the round hole left after his surgery. The nicotine had a strong hold on the man even after it caused a potentially fatal illness.

Allen told the group nicotine is six to eight times more addictive than alcohol.

The next slide, a depiction of a tar ridden lung, evoked a, "that's sick," from a member of the seventh grade group. Allen told students that smokers who consume one pack per day for one year take one quart of tar into their lungs. If you smoke two packs for one year that number doubles to half a gallon. The tar is sticky and it makes it difficult for the lungs to work.

Middle school student-athlete

"I've got too much to do with my life."

Ryan Graham,

Middle school student on why he doesn't use drugs.

Caitlin Cole said that is part of the reason why she doesn't use.

"Ewe, I play sports. I don't want that nasty mouth," she said.

"I'm worried about the physical issues. You can't take cancer back, your mom will not forgive you."

But for Barta, pressure from his parents, not the physical issues, has been his driving force to steer clear of drugs.

"My dad has told me several times that if I do drugs I won't be allowed to live in his house anymore," he said.

The next stop in the presentation was chewing tobacco.

Allen informed the students chewing tobacco is just as addictive as cigarettes and that those who chew tobacco are more likely to develop gum disease.

She also informed students that chewing tobacco contains, sugar, molasses, salt, fiberglass, bugs and bug parts. She said that the manufacturer puts the glass in so it will cut the users cheek, the nicotine can be absorbed into the blood stream and "you get hooked."

Lastly, Allen reviewed the issues of marijuana making a comparison to cigarettes. She said while both can cause lung cancer, one marijuana joint has 10 times the tar of one cigarette.

What wasn't covered is the substance students said is most widely used, at the middle school, inhalants.

The four students interviewed all said that inhalants are the easiest to get their hands on and are the most widely used including, Redi-Whip and Glade.

They also agreed that during the 2000-2001 school year, drugs started to make their way deeper into the class.

Cole said media is at fault for school-age use.

"It's because we are growing up in such a connected world with T.V. and the internet. We see more ads," she explained.

Aside from pointing to media, Cole's classmate Kristin Dupuis also said age is a factor that explains drug experimentation. She said everyone wants to be rebellious and go against their parents.

In rebelling, Cole said users still aren't thought of as "cool." Dupuis agreed with Cole and commented that she doesn't feel pressure to use and that those who do, like Cole said, are looked down on.

All in all, this group of students said they have too much to lose to waste time with drugs.

Ryan Graham said, "I've got too much to do with my life."

However, they also said there are students at Charlevoix Middle School using inhalants, tobacco, marijuana and alcohol who need help.

Congratulations on a great school year

For many Charlevoix students, the beauty of summer brings not only time away from school, lazy hot afternoons at the beach or a chance to make some extra cash with a part-time job, it also means the start of a new life as a high school graduate.

Last weekend, parents and teachers of Charlevoix High School seniors watched as these students walked the aisle to receive their long-awaited diploma. These students worked hard during their time in the Charlevoix school district and Sunday they received their rewards.

This class was filled with students who set goals and achieved them. The high number of students in this class with very high grade point averages was plenty impressive, but they did more than that.

This class proved they were not only leaders in the academic field, but also leaders for the school. Many times we heard tales of the seniors taking the time to talk with the younger students about the many obstacles in life, such as drugs.

EDITORIAL

For their efforts we commend them.

But, the hard work is not over for them. Now they face a new life filled with many possibilities and many new challenges.

Some of them will go on to college and some will begin a life in the work force. But we know all of them will be successful in their own way if they keep up with the high standards they set in high school.

Since we see big things in the future for these students, we also wish them a safe summer. With all the graduation parties and last-chance "hurrahs" with friends situations can quickly become unsafe and someone can get hurt. Please stay safe this summer and don't do anything stupid, like drinking and driving or riding in a vehicle with a driver who has been drinking.

Congratulations graduates on a successful tenure in the Charlevoix school district. We hope you have a great summer and a successful life.

Leaves are nature's little wonders in the summer

Roger Knutson

'Ear to the ground'

Every tree in Charlevoix has put out its yearly flush of new leaves. Abundant as leaves are, we might tend to take them for granted. Don't do it. They are engineering marvels, complex chemical factories and pollution control devices of the highest order. They work without pay and make our world possible.

The genius of structural engineering is to make as much as possible out of as little as possible. The delicate tracery of the Mackinac Bridge provides a fine example. A bridge of solid steel might be just as strong, but would require thousands of times as much material. Most plant leaves, examined closely are largely air space. Some leaves are as much as 80 percent empty air and what is not air is mostly water.

The solid substance of a leaf makes up about 5 percent of the total weight, but that five percent provides a structure strong enough to survive 50 mile per hour winds and rigid enough to support itself horizontally against gravity. The majority of the solid substance in leaves is, pound-for-pound, structurally stronger than the finest steel.

The leaves are covered with the sort of wax we extract and use to waterproof our most valuable possessions. Read the label on the most expensive auto wax and you will find the word, "carnauba." The Carnauba is a kind of tropical palm with even more and better wax than our local leaves.

Chemically leaves manage a set of remarkable changes that we find impossible to duplicate with any of our chemical factories. Each leaf is able to take carbon dioxide from the air and water from the soil, and with those two simple materials it makes food for us and every other creature on earth. We don't eat maple leaves or most other tree leaves, but all the plant leaves on Earth are making the same astonishing changes in the air and water that surrounds them.

What the leaves make is sugar, fats and proteins that support all the animal life on Earth, including us. There is ultimately no other source of food for any creature.

The energy of sunlight makes this miracle of chemistry possible. On a world with less light, most plants could not survive and no other life would be possible. Plants in our climate live through the winter on what they have stored up during the sunniest times, just as we must.

How is it that leaves can be pollution control devices? A single example will suffice. Carbon monoxide is a serious air pollutant: a colorless, odorless poisonous gas produced by the incomplete combustion of motor fuels and charcoal, among other things. Plants find it difficult to distinguish between carbon dioxide, that they use to make food, and carbon monoxide. They take in carbon monoxide and use it.

No one should doubt that our public servants in these groups had any but the best intentions, but despite those good intentions they have opened themselves to the gravest suspicions of devious, malicious and evil intent.

The most elementary application of parliamentary procedure would avoid these accusations.

Thank you

It is with great pride that I thank the men and women who donated their time, talents, boundless energy, enthusiasm, smiles, a variety of yummy edibles and blood (the special reason for the gathering) to the American Red Cross bloodmobile on May 31, at the Community Reformed Church in Charlevoix.

The Red Cross collected 116 units of lifesaving blood that afternoon.

Congratulations for the great turnout goes to my first-class team of volunteers, the businesses displaying posters, all donors and volunteers. Great Job!

Thanks, also, to the very pleasant American Red Cross personnel and the Reformed Church for allowing us to use their beautiful facility.

Have a happy summer, everyone! I will be reminding you in early September of the next Charlevoix Community blood drive scheduled for Sept. 27.

Start school later

I'm a student at Charlevoix Middle School and I believe that we should start school later. First, because kids are so tired in class that their sleepiness distracts them.

For example, students are dozing off in class while doing work. Another reason you can tell students are tired for instance, they lay their heads down on their desks and doze off to sleep while the teacher is talking to the class.

Another reason is, they go to bed later than they should, such as not having a curfew or a time when they have to be home. Another is they are up watching television or movies because their parents don't care how late they stay up.

The most important detail of all is kids aren't getting the right amount of sleep at night. For example, children don't want to get up in the morning.

Then, the most important detail of all is doctors and pediatricians say for children's precious health they should get at least 10 to 12 hours of sleep! I feel very strongly about this.

Make school day shorter

Editor:
I am a student at the Charlevoix Middle School. I would like to have the people of Charlevoix help make the school days shorter. Right now we start at 7:45 a.m. and that is too early for us. We get up at 6 a.m. and go to bed at 10 p.m. So it is hard for kids to wake up in the morning.

First of all, I would like to make school days shorter because it's too hard to get schoolwork in on time, because we get out of school too late. We don't have enough time after school. Another reason is that I fall asleep in classes because I am so tired.

If you would, please try to make school days shorter. It would help a lot if you could and it will help your student's grades if there were shorter days.

Middle school seminar

Editor:
We need an hour of seminar in the middle school. First of all, homework puts stress on kids when they don't have enough time to finish it. For example, some of the middle school students are big procrastinators and save all their homework for the last day, but they could get it done easier if they had an extra hour to do it in school. Also kids don't have enough time to play with their friends because of homework.

Most importantly though, there are on the average four assignments turned in late every time a teacher gives an assignment in just one hour. I think that this is because seminar is a better work environment than home is. I think that if we had an extra hour of seminar that the number of late assignments would go down to one or zero. Parents also want to do activities with their kids, but can't because of homework.

So in conclusion, I think that kids need an hour of seminar.

I think we should stop littering because it might kill animals and it makes our town look messy. One of the things that we can do is to put more trashcans out on the docks and in the parks. We need to make sure we throw away the plastic rings from pop cans because it can get caught around bird's necks and choke them. Antifreeze should be kept in a closed container because it is deadly to animals.

COMMUNITY

Several honored in county sheriff's office

Several members of the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Office were recently honored for their conduct in various cases responded to or investigated by the department.

According to a letter written by Charlevoix County Sheriff George T. Lasater, "The officers receiving these awards have gone above and beyond the call of duty exceeding expectations of their peers and citizens they serve."

Those receiving honors, and the reason for these, were:

- Transport officers Barry Anderson and Shari Hofbauer. These officers were assigned to assist in the protection and safety of a crime victim who was traveling to Missouri to testify in a trial. According to Charlevoix Det./Sgt. Michael Wheat, they kept a 24 hour watch on the victim and kept the victim upbeat and in a positive attitude.

- Correction officer Judy Wheat. According to Det./Sgt. Wheat, Judy Wheat informed authorities that a person she was transporting to a mental hospital told her she had been the victim of a serious crime in Missouri. Det./Sgt. Wheat wrote in a letter of commendation, "I believe it was Judy Wheat's compassion and dedication to service that led her to take the information given (by the victim) seriously and pass that information on, so an investigation could bring the perpetrator of the crime to justice."

- Also receiving honors for the Missouri case was Det./Sgt. Michael Wheat. Wheat received the Sheriff's Star Award. According to Sheriff Lasater, Wheat pursued the case in a two year investigation, both in Michigan and Missouri. Since the crime occurred in Missouri, this presented many barriers for Wheat, but that did not stop him. Lasater wrote on the award, "Sgt. Wheat not only stood out for his enthusiastic spirit in his persistence to bring this investigation to a fruitful end, but his personal involvement in soliciting both his fellow officers and his family to assist him supporting a very fragile victim during her delicate period of testimony. Sgt. Wheat saved this young woman's life."

- Auxiliary Officer Richard Gallant and Sergeant Patrick Avery were both given a Departmental Citation Award and Sheriff's Life Saving Award for an incident that took place Nov. 30, 2000. According to Sheriff Lasater, both men put their own safety aside on that day by wading into the cold waters of Lake Michigan to rescue an intoxicated man.

- Deputy Roger Moses received a Humanitarian Commendation for an incident on Feb. 1, 2001. According to the sheriff, Moses was dispatched to a call for assistance in Wilson Township where the caller said he was going to end his life. Moses found the person in his home with a loaded gun pointed at his own head. Moses refused to leave when told to do so by this person and continued to talk to the individual with the "utmost compassion, concern and fear that he would harm himself."

- Seven members of the department were awarded Unit Commendations for Gallantry for an

Some council members question high costs

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

Charlevoix's signature petunia lined streets are adored by residents and visitors, but when the time came for Charlevoix city council members to decide how much from the community promotion budget would be used to weed the flowers, two councilmen said enough is enough.

Second ward councilmen Bill Bellows and Gabriel "Gabe" Campbell both said it's time to get out of the weeding business and $16,100 for weeding of the petunias and some area flower beds is too much.

"Not everyone is a millionaire. With this budget it (petunia weeding) is almost $40 per household. We have to say 'woe' somewhere," Campbell said when mayor Alvin "Butch" Russell called for a motion on the weeding issue.

But, first ward councilman Norman "Boogie" Carlson, third ward councilmen Sherm Chamberlain and August "A.J." Witthoef made the claim that last year, the first time professional gardeners were used, the flowers looked better than ever.

Chamberlain said he thinks the high quality weeding reflects the quality of Charlevoix.

"It all comes down to presenting the city in the best possible manner. I felt it was well worth the expenditure," he said.

In the end the three member majority vote ruled and council decided to give the go ahead to employ the services of Petoskey-based Peggy's Gardening.

The city agreed to pay $26 an hour for each Peggy's employee, $1 per hour more than what the same gardeners requested last summer. The professionals from Peggy's will both weed the flower beds and apply herbicide.

Campbell and Bellows suggested alternatives to paying a professional firm including; using prisoners from the corrections facility near Pellston and using community service workers.

But city street superintendent John Martin explained that in the past the city has gone that route and both the quality of the petunias and traffic flow suffered.

Martin, an advocate of the professional service, presented to council the flip-side of the high cost. He said that the flowers were thicker and better last year and the streets were rarely blocked when the services were being performed.

"Whenever you are anywhere and people mention Charlevoix, there are two things they talk about. The first thing is the petunias and the second is the parks," Martin said in a post-council meeting interview.

This year, more than the curbside flowers will decorate the downtown. The Downtown Development Authority (DDA) has also agreed to fund baskets of blooms that will hang from 60 city light poles.

Martin said that the baskets will most likely be hung during the week of June 11.

The local non-profit group Keep Charlevoix Beautiful provides both the curbside petunias and those that will be planted in the baskets. However, the baskets themselves and the brackets to anchor them will be funded by the DDA using city tax dollars.

Martin said that the brackets are $66 a piece and baskets are $36 each. The city plans to order 60 of each, at a total cost of $6,120.

Martin said that Peggy's will not be maintaining the baskets, rather, seasonal city workers will water and weed them.

According to city treasurer Rick Brandi there are 2,802 taxpayers in the city who are funding basket and curbside flower beautification efforts — if the maximum weeding funding for Peggy's ($16,100) is used then the cost to each taxpayer this year will be, $7.93.

HEALTH

The reasons for kidney stones may help stop them

Edward Newcomb, M.D.

'Your health'

One of the most excruciating pains a human can experience is the agony of passing a kidney stone. Woman patients, whom I have spoken with, tell me that passing a kidney stone is more painful than giving birth.

Kidney stones are quite common in both our society and in other western societies as well. Some studies have shown that by age 70, approximately 12 percent of men and 5 percent of women will have experienced at least one stone "event." Is there anything we can do to make it less likely to get a kidney stone or prevent a recurrence?

To answer that question, we need to look at what causes kidney stones in the first place. Is it what we eat, is it how we metabolize what we eat or is it hereditary? The answer is probably a combination of all three of these.

There are certain hereditary (genetic) and fortunately rare diseases that do have increased risk of stone formation. Cystinuria, primary hyperparathyroidism, primary hyperoxaluria and certain forms of hypercalcaemia (excess calcium in the urine) tend to run in families, suggesting a genetic link.

Evidence of a dietary link suggests when one compares the frequency of stones in different populations, people in non-Westernized societies pass very few stones when compared to more Western (modern, developed) countries. In England during World War II, when certain foods such as meat were in short supply, the number of people seeking treatment for kidney stone emergencies declined significantly.

Immigrants from non-western societies who adopt Western diets develop as many stones as US citizens.

Dietary factors seem to play a role in stone formation and if we can identify some of these factors we should be able to lower our risk.

Let us first look at dietary calcium. Most kidney stones are made up of calcium and logic would make one think that the more calcium one has in their diet, the more likely they are to form a stone. In reality this is not true and in fact the opposite may be more accurate. The key here is the source of dietary calcium. In both men and women, the risk of stone formation goes down as the intake of dietary calcium goes up. This calcium is from dietary sources such as dairy and vegetable products. Calcium supplements in pill form can increase stone risk in women, but does not seem to be a factor in men. This gets confusing because it is recommended that women increase their calcium intake of 1,000-1,500 mg a day to prevent osteoporosis and at the same time they may be increasing their risk of kidney stones. In women who have had kidney stones in the past it is a good idea for them to attempt to get a majority of their calcium from dietary sources and if supplements are needed, calcium citrate may be the least likely calcium supplement to cause stones.

Potassium is another mineral that seems to be related to stone formation. In both men and women, the more potassium (found in fresh fruits and vegetables) in the diet, the less likely it is to develop kidney stones. The opposite seems to be the case with sodium (salt) intake. In women especially, a high sodium intake is associated with more stones and the same relationship exists with sucrose (table sugar). In men the relationship between salt and sugar intake is not as strong.

There seems to be a relationship between certain beverages and stone formation. As noted earlier, milk consumption actually lowers risk and drinking extra water definitely can be helpful. Juices tend to vary considerably. Because of their high potassium content, orange juice and lemonade seem to lower stone risk. However, grapefruit and tomato juices increase stone formation. Caffeinated coffee and tea seem to have a mild protective effect as does moderate wine consumption in women.

In summary there is a connection between kidney stone formation and diet. We can lower our risk of this painful condition by drinking more water (two liters a day), increasing our intake of dietary calcium and potassium and by decreasing our consumption of sodium and sugar.

Library board names new interim director

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

Over the next 10 weeks Grand Rapids native Charlie Kregel, 48, will spend his weeknights camping at Fisherman's Island and weekdays working at the Charlevoix Public Library.

On June 4, at a special meeting of the Charlevoix Public Library Board, Kregel was interviewed and hired as the board voted unanimously in favor of him filling in as interim director.

"I'm looking forward to working in a small town public library. It's where I started," Kregel said.

Kregel earned his master's degree in both business and library science at the University of Chicago.

After completing his master's studies Kregel went on to work at the University of Kansas where he was the law school government documents librarian for two-and-a-half years.

He then made the move from Kansas to Chicago where he worked at the Kirkland and Ellis law firm. He said that when he came on board with the firm, "things were not up to snuff" and that he played an integral role in managing and maintaining the staff to accomplish the goals of the organization.

After 15 years with the firm, Kregel called it quits and dedicated his life to traveling.

"I became a full-time traveler and I got really good at it," he said.

Now, following almost seven nomadic years, he has stopped in northern Michigan where initially he was just visiting two close friends, Dale and Ruth Hull of Petoskey.

"It takes time to find a good person to do this."

Rick Brandi,
Charlevoix library board president

"I planned to stop for only two or three weeks, but then I saw the advertisement (for the interim director's position) in the paper and thought, 'That looks like fun, why not?'" he said.

During the interview process, board member Anne Hansen asked Kregel what he thinks his greatest strengths are.

He said he has a great understanding of different constituencies' interests. He sees himself as being good at understanding what motivates people. However he also openly admitted his weaknesses.

"Currently my skills are a bit out of date; being completely out of the work world for the last six-and-half years does have a cost," he said.

Betty Henne asked Kregel how he supports his travels. Kregel said he accepts a modest standard of living — while on the road, his least expensive accommodations have cost 35 cents a night and the most lavish had a $10 price tag.

Henne then asked how he plans to deal with community relations.

Kregel responded that he has no ties to the community of Charlevoix, no agenda and no intention of applying for the long-term director's position — three attributes he hopes will meet the needs of the interim position. Kregel said he plans to take direction from the board and the community with his first priority being to get new books ordered and the summer reading program prepared.

Board president Rick Brandi said that two other applications for the interim position came in on June 4. Bonnie Reed of South Borgman and Susan Straw of Kalkaska both applied, but Brandi said that the applicants weren't available until mid to late June and that Kregel's credentials were better.

Kregel will be paid $10,000 over the 10 week period.

For the long-term director's position the board is looking to hire an individual who is MLS certified and has at least three years of experience.

"It takes time to find a good person to do this," Brandi said.

Norwood gets permit for dry hydrant pond

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

The Michigan Department of Environmental Quality (MDEQ) recently issued an after-the-fact permit that allowed dredging of a dry hydrant pond off of Witmere Road in Norwood Township, that was once a violation, to continue.

On April 20, just a few days after the MDEQ received a confidential complaint about a wetlands disturbance at the pond digging site in Norwood Township, environmental quality analyst John Arevalo reviewed the area and found that the wetlands violation cited in the complaint wasn't valid.

"Given the amount of work that had already occurred, whether or not it was wetlands beforehand is impossible to establish...it's gone now," he said.

However, on April 20 Arevalo still brought the project to a halt because it violated section 301 of the MDEQ's Wetlands Act.

Section 301, the inland lakes and streams review, requires construction to be 500 feet from streams and inland lakes. The Witmere project was within 350 feet of Inwood Creek, so the township required a permit prior to starting work on the pond.

However, the township and the excavation company, Drenth Brothers of Ellsworth both claim they were unaware of Inwood Creek's proximity to the site and thus did not file for a permit with the MDEQ.

The Norwood Township board then filed a request with Charlevoix County Soil Erosion Officer, Wendy Armstrong, to obtain a soil erosion permit and with the MDEQ to get an after-the-fact permit.

Armstrong issued the soil erosion permit on April 30 and the MDEQ issued the after-the-fact permit on May 24.

"Digging a pond doesn't have much of an impact. Because of the minor impact, I saw fit to authorize the project with an after-the-fact permit," Arevalo said.

He died around 4:30 p.m. that afternoon.

An investigation revealed that Cook had boated to the Charlevoix marina with some friends that weekend. While there on Saturday, witnesses alleged Shulick came onto one of their boats and began harassing them. At one point, there was a physical altercation between one of the boaters and Shulick, police reports state.

Witnesses further said sometime around 2:30 a.m. April 30, a man came onto the dock who sounded like Shulick. Cook got out of his boat to talk to the man and was heard screaming shortly after.

One of the witnesses on the boat told police that he saw a man running from the scene and chased him, but could not catch him.

But before Cook died from his wounds, he was able to tell his friends that the man who stabbed him was the same man who had been bothering the group earlier named, "Tom."

Police said the two men did not know each other before that night.

Shulick was arrested after a 14 hour police investigation into the crime. A knife, believed to be the one used in the crime, was found in Shulick's residence by police.

Voters to decide school issues on June 11

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

On June 11, Charlevoix School District voters will decide whether or not two school board members will stay another term, what direction two millage proposals will take and who will be appointed to the Charlevoix-Emmet Intermediate School District (Char-Em ISD) board.

The first issue on the ballot that voters will face is which two community members will be elected to serve a four-year term with the school board.

As of June 4, incumbents, Kenneth "Scott" Boss and Mark "Barney" Way, both of Marion Township, were the only candidates running in the school board election.

However, individuals interested in the position have until 4 p.m. June 8 to file as write-ins at the Charlevoix Community School's Superintendent's office located at 208 Clinton Street in Charlevoix.

Way and Boss are finishing up their first four-year terms and both are hoping to be re-elected.

Boss said that when he was first elected to the board in 1997, one of the board's priorities was to make sure Charlevoix residents could be proud of Charlevoix schools.

"I think you can see we've got different leadership — on the board, at the superintendent level and with the teachers. Things have gone from not so good to darn good," he said.

Boss added that he plans to build on this pride by using his next term to follow through. Boss said continuity is the key to continued success across the district.

"We have a facility issue, taxpayers gave us the ok, now what is crucial is seeing things through. We have things to get done and I would like to help make sure we get a bigger bang out of the taxpayer's buck," he said.

Like Boss, Way joined the school board in 1997. In his first term Way said he hoped to see the ball get rolling on a new high school and that is exactly the direction the board and the community have moved in.

"One of our (the school board's) goals was to get the new high school built and to get the millage passed. Doing that took a lot of work," he said.

If re-elected Way said he plans to follow through with the facility issue the district is facing. However, with the high school in the process of being built he will concentrate on what will be done with the middle school.

After voters have chosen candidates for the Charlevoix School Board they'll be asked to decide whether or not to renew the district's operating millage.

The millage allows the school district to levy the statutory rate of 18 mills against non-homestead, those with a home in Charlevoix that is not their primary residence, and non-qualified agricultural property in 2001, 2002 and 2003. The ballot language states that if passed, the Headlee Amendment will be rolled back, raising the rate .75 mill.

The third item on the ballot is electing three people to the Char-Em ISD Board. Members of the Char-Em ISD Board of Education are elected to fill a six-year term that will expire in 2007. Can-dates for the position include Robert W. Anderson, Jay Essenberg, Mary P. Jason and write-ins.

The fourth subject voters will decide on will affect the entire Char-Em ISD. The proposal requests a millage renewal to fund vocational and technical education.

The millage will allow the ISD to continue levying .7243 mill and to restore the .0257 mill rolled back by the Headlee Amendment.

Charlevoix voters can cast their ballot from 7 a.m. to 8 p.m. June 11 at the Charlevoix Elementary School.

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

After almost two years of waiting patiently Charlevoix cyclists are breathing a sigh of relief.

The Michigan Department of Transportation (MDOT) has agreed to build a 7.8 mile non-motorized trail in Charlevoix County. Ambitious northern Michigan outdoor enthusiasts will now be able to travel from Waller Road in Charlevoix Township all the way to Harbor Springs without being sped along by automobiles.

"The grant will allow the development of a non-motorized trail from the City of Charlevoix to Bay Shore, connecting the trail with Petoskey and Harbor Springs," Charlevoix County planner Larry Sullivan explained.

Sullivan said the size of the project held things up. Instead of tackling the whole trail at once, the state decided to break it up into pieces.

Grant dollars totaling $1.4 million have already been received for the stretch that will run along US-31 North from Waller Road to Nine Mile Point. But MDOT hesitated to agree to fund the portion running from Nine Mile Point to Bay Shore, that they have now agreed to, because of the sensitive terrain.

"The grant will allow the development of a non-motorized trail from the City of Charlevoix to Bay Shore, connecting the trail with Petoskey and Harbor Springs."

Larry Sullivan,
Charlevoix County planner

Sullivan said that the path we are currently seeing take shape is the result of a commitment MDOT made to the county over 10 years ago when the local rail tracks were taken up. MDOT agreed to help work toward the development of a non-motorized trail between Petoskey and Charlevoix.

Sullivan said that initially the intention was to locate the trail on the rail corridor but they were unable to get agreement from nearby property owners so they started looking elsewhere. He added that the rail route would have reduced the cost of the project tremendously because the terrain where the trail will be located on US-31 north runs over slopes and wetland areas.

He said the highway route will be scenic, fully equipped with spectacular lake views. The trail will also tie into existing parks so public bathrooms will be easily accessible.

Sullivan sees this as the beginning of a larger trail system that will some day connect Charlevoix to Leelanau County. "I think it will spawn a lot of other trail development in the area," he said.

The county is looking at constructing the path over the course of 2002.

Church to present "Mercy Streets" movie

There will be a free showing of the new movie "Mercy Streets" at 7 p.m. Thursday at the Community Reformed Church.

The writer and director of this film is Jon Gunn, the son of Father Jim and Jan Gunn of Christ Episcopal Church in Charlevoix.

Mercy Streets has been nominated for Best Family Movie for 2000 by the Movie Guide Awards and is presently number 19 on the Billboard Top 100. It stars Eric Roberts, David White, Cynthia Watros, Lawrence Taylor and Stacy Keach.

White plays identical twin brothers who were separated as teenagers. One brother pursued a life in the church and the other brother received his direction from a con-man.

The movie is rated PG-13 for some violence, but has no foul language or gratuitous sex.

NEW PARK IS A CREDIT TO CITY BAND STAND AND WHARVES NEXT ON PROGRAM

Shrubby and Trees Set Out This Week Make Spot One of Great Beauty

Charlevoix's waterfront park on the former Legion lot at the corner of Bridge Street and Belvedere avenue and the recently acquired Carpenter property is being transformed into a spot of beauty, one which Charlevoix citizens can well be proud of.

During the past few weeks a crew of men have been working on the grounds, grading and leveling off the plot, laying water pipes and electric light wires. Two sets of cement stairs, one on the Bridge Street side and one on the Belvedere Avenue side, have been built leading down into the park. Four large electric lights will illuminate the entrance, one on each corner post of the stairs, and two large boulevard lights similar to those on State street will be used in the center of the park.

On Tuesday of this week, under the direction of George Hemingway and George McMullin of the Charlevoix County Nurseries, trees and shrubbery were set out. Three rows of French maple and birch trees run through the center of the park. On each corner has been placed groups of Colorado and white spruce and py-arb-votae. Along the outside border of the park are rows of spirea, hydranga and dogwood, along with several other varieties.

The same program is to be carried out on the former Carpenter property. The grounds will be graded and terraced off toward the lake and set out with shrubbery the same as the Legion lot. It is proposed to erect a band stand on this property, the floor of which will be on a level with Bridge Street, with the lower part to be used as a public toilet. Plans have been accepted for the new wharves on Round Lake at the foot of the park and the contract will be let as soon as bids are received.

In our opinion this is one of the most beneficial forward moves taken by the city for some time. To keep up our reputation as a resort city, we must furnish attractions for our visitors. Those who are prone to believe that the city is wasting money on the project will see their error during the coming summer.

CHICAGO GOLF COURSE OPENS

MANY NEW IMPROVEMENTS SINCE LAST SEASON

New Belvedere Course Will BE Ready for Play by First Week in August

The Chicago Golf Club of Charlevoix officially opened for the 1926 season on Monday morning of this week with a few changes in the office force and many important changes and improvements on the course.

Wm. Watson, who has acted in the capacity of professional for a number of years, will be here again this year. Cleveland Roe is caddy master again this season, and his brother George Roe, will patrol the course. Russell F. Blakeslee is bookkeeper with Miss Lila Heise as assistant. Billy Supemaw is the new assistant caddy master.

Among the many improvements started last fall and completed during this spring are new, modern trappings throughout the entire course. The location of the tee on hole number 3 has been changed, as has the lay and length, the hole now being 186 yards, running east and west. Number 4 now runs through a patch of woods which was cleared for that purpose. Number 4 is now number 5 and former number 5 has been eliminated and converged into number 6 adding over a hundred yards to the length of that hole.

A modern sprinkling system covering greens, fairways and tees has been installed. A motor driven pump with a capacity of 40,000 gallons daily will pump water to the tanks on the grounds. New, bright-colored flags with numbers in large black letters, take the place of the ones formerly used.

The course is in wonderful condition this season, numerous spring rains putting the fairway, greens and tees in first class shape.

C-G Will Raze Old Building

Thousands of memories recalling hardship, fun and comradeship linger within its old frame walls.

But it no longer serves the needs of the U.S. Coast Guard. So the old Charlevoix Lifeboat Station—behind the National Fish Hatchery on the Pine River channel—must go.

The Coast Guard has put the station building and utility building up for demolition bids. It is not selling the property.

Persons interested in purchasing the old buildings and removing them from the property should get their bid in by June 8 to the Contracting Officer, Ninth Coast Guard District, Main Post Office Bldg., Cleveland, O.

The two buildings are described as:

Frame, two-story, attic, including a basement and adjoining two bay boat house with steel tracks for launchway; floor area equals 3,975 square feet.

"2. Furnace and Laundry building—Frame, one-story, 300 square feet floor area."

"BOTH ITEMS 1 and 2 are in a state of deterioration, have old-fashioned fixtures, a considerable amount of cracking on the interior walls, and cracked and settling areas in the foundation."

The garage barracks building on the site will not be razed. It is a modern building.

The old station building became surplus when the new Charlevoix Coast Guard station was constructed in 1962 at the east end of the railroad bridge channel into Lake Charlevoix.

The Coast Guard received the old station site from the City of Charlevoix for $1 in 1899. The property transfer agreement may make it necessary for the Coast Guard to return the property to the City if it is no longer used.

HARVEY L. Idding, Charlevoix Village president in 1899, signed the property transfer agreement. It was also signed by William McCarty, village clerk.

Charlevoix Coast Guard Group executive officer CWO James Seidl reports no definite plans have been announced for the property's future use.

Mayor E. D. Hawley has said the city is interested in reclaiming the property if it is no longer needed by the Coast Guard.

MDEQ: DME site needs cleanup

But Wagner's biggest concern isn't the PCE — it's what it quickly becomes. The PCE degrades into vinyl chloride, a known carcinogen.

"Our biggest concern has been the discharge of vinyl chloride to Lake Charlevoix, at times it seeps along the beach. We haven't had issues with seepage along the beach recently but with the changing ground water and lake levels that could change," Wagner said.

Because of vinyl chloride's tendency to seep, the MDEQ is also in the process of evaluating indoor air. The chloride can vaporize and migrate through cracks into basements.

"We haven't found any evidence of homes or residences currently at risk (of vinyl chloride contamination) yet, it is still a concern (because of PCE's presence in the area.) The sooner it is removed the less of a threat we have," Wagner said.

Because of the toxicity of PCE and its transformer substance vinyl chloride, Wagner said PCE use has been discontinued in most businesses.

"Most (businesses) have had groundwater problems because of using and storing it," Wagner said.

Unlike most, DME started using PCE in 1955 as a degreaser to remove oil and other debris from the steel ejector pins they manufacture and continues to use the toxic substance.

Wagner said the MDEQ is not aware of any current releases of the substance that would add to the contamination problem.

Representatives for DME Company said they will not publicly comment on this issue.

The MDEQ plans to make sure either their plan or DME's is hard at work by the fall of 2001.

Millages denied, incumbents re-elected

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

At the June 11 biennial election Charlevoix School District voters said no to two millage proposals, but elected incumbents to both the local school board and to the Charlevoix-Emmet Intermediate School District board of education.

Voters shot down the .75 mill tax increase which asked for a rollback of the Headlee Amendment reduction. The rollback would have benefited the district's operating budget. The tax increase

"Nobody wants to lose money to operate on, but it's not the end of the world."

John Sturock,
Charlevoix schools superintendent applied only to commercial properties and non-homestead properties in the district.

Superintendent of Charlevoix Public Schools, John Sturock, said that the vote will result in a loss of $30,000 to the district's general operational fund.

"Nobody wants to lose money to operate on but it's not the end of the world," he said.

The decision to decline the rollback was made by a narrow margin — 396 people voted in favor of the increase and 479 votes were cast against it.

Sturock said that it is difficult to pass a millage with such low voter turnout. Of the 7,290 eligible voters in the district only 893 decided to come out and exercise their right — that is a 12 percent voter turnout.

A second decision made by Charlevoix School District voters surprised Mark Eckhardt, the superintendent of the Charlevoix-Emmet Intermediate School District (Char-Em ISD).

Charlevoix was the only district in the Char-Em ISD to ultimately decide against the area vocational technical education millage renewal. In Charlevoix 411 voters supported the renewal while 469 decided against it.

Venetian Festival announces this year's lineup for music and games

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

With musical acts from all over the country and a variety of games and activities to participate in or watch, this year's Charlevoix Venetian Festival has something for just about everyone in the family.

"It's kind of exciting. I think it is a thing the community has taken a lot of pride in," Dean Davenport, Venetian Games commissioner and director, said. The festival will start on July 22 and end on July 28 with the annual Grand Electrical Boat Parade on Round Lake.

This year's game lineup will include:

- July 22 — A three-on-three basketball tournament that may be at Michigan Beach — details are still pending — the Carey Cup for junior golfers and, a new addition, Disc Golf at Mount McSaubia. In disk golf, participants must throw a flying disk into various baskets set up in a course. Like golf, points are totaled up based on the number of tries.

- July 23 — A three-on-three soccer tournament at Shanahan Field.

- July 24 — The Keith Carey Venetian Cup Championship golf finals for adults at the municipal course and a croquet clinic and tournament in Bridge Park.

- July 25 — A co-ed beach volleyball tournament at Ferry Beach, the Venetian Cup Sailing Regatta on Lake Charlevoix, swimming championships at the Charlevoix Community Pool and bingo in East Park.

- July 26 — Cottage croquet in Bridge Park for "special challenges."

- July 27 — A co-ed softball tournament at the city diamond.

Senior prank goes too far for principal

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer
And by JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

"The school does not sanction senior pranks. But, they do happen."

Gary Grundman,
Charlevoix High School principal

A Memorial Day senior sleep-over at Charlevoix High School went awry when an unknown member of the class pulled out a building master key.

"It was kids having fun, in a building with no supervision, with keys that would open everything," senior class member Hal Evans III explained.

Evans said about 75 percent of the senior class spent the night in the building that weekend. But, some of them participated in a prank that went too far.

One of the students at the sleep-over had a master key that could open every door in the school. Evans said at this point, things got out of control.

Some of the pranks he described included: unplugging computers in the publications room; breaking into the cafeteria, stealing peanut butter and wiping it on the handles of every underclassmen's locker and removing desks from their rooms and putting them outside or rearranging them.

"I think it was in bad taste and pretty childish to have 15 pranks going on at the same time. Unlocking rooms and messing with things wasn't cool," Evans said.

Evans said about half of the students who attended started going into rooms, while the other half did not participate.

School principal Gary Grundman said he was very angry at the magnitude of this prank. Seniors at the school have traditionally committed a "senior prank" right before graduation, he said.

"The school does not sanction senior pranks. But, they do happen," Grundman said. While the prank created quite a mess and Grundman was very angry about it, he added the seniors redeemed themselves by cleaning it all up.

"I was really proud of the senior leadership. When I walked in (to school after the Memorial Day vacation) at 7:30 a.m., it was 95 percent clean," he said. "As usual, the real good kids took care of the other ones that didn't want to behave."

As far as the students spending the night at the school, he said they did not have permission, but he was not surprised they did. Many times throughout the years, he said, seniors spent the night in the school's courtyard right before final exams.

Grundman added the student who had the master key to the school was caught and the key was returned.

"If there is a bright side to it, I am in the process of planning security for the new building. The kids made me think of some things I didn't think of before," he said.

Grundman said no permanent damage was caused as a result of the prank, but Evans explained that because students tinkered with the bell system, it needs to be reprogrammed.

"It wasn't fair to slap him (Grundman) in the face," Evans said.

OPINIONS

Those little things that can cause a smile

Jeremy McBain

'Just a thought'

Sometimes it is the little things that make me smile.

These little things remind me that nothing is perfect and I shouldn't worry that I am not.

Recently I spent about 6 hours driving in my vehicle to the Lansing area and back for a newspaper workshop, thus giving me plenty of time to think about these little things that people do or say that are just so crazy they create a laugh.

I enjoy making my readers smile along with me, therefore I thought I would share a few of these with you.

Since I was driving down the road during this period of thought, the first one revolves around driving. It is amazing to me how we act when we drive. Even a rocket scientist will turn into an imbecile behind the steering wheel.

It seems when we drive we want to do anything but drive. I watched people talking on car phones, eating lunch, putting on makeup and arguing with their passengers, all while traveling down the road at more than 70 mph.

So much time was being spent on these other activities that driving skills suffered. These people would cut each other off, refuse to use blinkers, swerve in the lane and insist on driving two inches from the bumper of the car in front of them.

To ease my nerves I began to think about non-driving quirks that are humorous. The first one that came to my mind — since I write a lot — are the words that people use in their speech and writing.

In the many letters and meeting notes that are submitted to the Charlevoix Courier each week, there are two "words" that stick out in my mind: "signage" and "monies." People love to use these two terms when talking about official business. I guess they think it makes the information seem more official. Problem is, these are not real words.

Look them up in the dictionary and you will not find them. From what I am guessing from the writing I receive, the authors think "signage" means the signs in front of a business and "monies" means a collection of money. I have even seen these non-words on official city of Charlevoix memos.

Why do people insist on trying to make themselves sound smart by making up words? Why can't they just say, "money" instead of "monies" and "signs" instead of "signage?" Oh well, at least it gives me a giggle.

Another smile comes from my thoughts about the recent parking ticket "scandal." Recently a man paid his parking ticket with change, but the city police chief would not accept it. The chief sent the change back to the man, with a letter explaining they would not accept the change — specifically pennies — at a cost of $3.50 in postage. The original ticket was $2.

Now, I sort of understand both sides of this issue. The chief has a part-time office worker who doesn't need to spend all of her time counting out pennies sent in to pay parking tickets. However, the man paying the ticket did use legal tender to pay it and the chief probably should have accepted it.

This has caused quite a stir among some of the locals around town. Here is where the smile is: It is so nice to know that Charlevoix is such a small, peaceful town that the biggest police gripe is whether or not the chief should accept pennies for parking ticket payments.

I read reports in other newspapers from downstate about their police corruption and high crime rates, then listen to the local debate about pennies. It is so nice to live in a town with this as the big gripe.

The fun of teaching etiquette

Edith Gilbert

'Behind the News'

One has to be very careful when talking to 10-year-olds because they remember everything you say!

I recently was invited to be a "Confidence Consultant" to the fifth grade class in Central Lake. The subject was table manners. By the way of introduction I mentioned that there are two ways of handling a knife and fork, the Continental Way and the American Way.

As you know, with the latter you keep exchanging the knife and fork in a zig-zag manner. For emphasis I referred to the well-known espionage tale of the American spy, who was recognized as a foreigner, because he ate his food by constantly switching the fork from the left to the right hand, American style.

When I received 35 "Thank You" notes from the class, the first note said, "If I become a spy, I'll be sure to use the right kind of eating posture."

Another youngster said: "I found it easy to eat Continental style."

The fifth grade teacher, Jeff Kessler, having previously spent 16 years in the corporate world, is well aware how important it is to be able to handle oneself in unfamiliar situations. We were both glad to learn that our lesson took hold.

"I do feel ready to be invited to the White House," he said. "We had a blast learning manners and how to be classy in a fancy restaurant like the Lamplighter Inn. It was fantastic!"

The Detroit Free Press announced that Central Michigan University is offering a summer entrepreneurial institute for minorities, which will teach students, among other subjects, social skills and etiquette, "but because these issues are universal and cross racial and ethnic lines, the program is open to all students."

It's too bad to have to wait until one is in college to learn these skills.

"You are a good teacher. It was really nice of you, especially when you taught us how to cut meat. I used to do it totally wrong," another student stated.

Mr. and Mrs. Murphy, the owners of the Lamplighter Restaurant, were more than pleased to host the fifth grade, because among other things, this group was shown how to enter a restaurant and be seated. They were taught to follow the hostess to their table and wait until a parent told them where to sit.

Over the years, the Murphys confided, they have had the unfortunate experience of having some children running around the dining room without parents saying a word, nor have some parents prepared their children in advance to eat anything but a "Happy Meal" in a fast food restaurant.

"Thanks to you, I will always feel brave and confident when I go with my grandparents to a fancy restaurant like Mr. and Mrs. Murphy's," another student said. "My parents are very proud of me, because of your class."

Finally, not only did the children enjoy learning how to propose a toast in appreciation to the chef and to their hosts for the four course meal, but they learned how to write delightful "thank you" notes.

These I shall always treasure.

Letters to the editor

What is the accepted currency?

Editor:
As a follow-up to Ron Abfalter's letter in last week's Courier "are pennies money?"

At 10:40 a.m. June 6, I too received a parking meter violation for $2. Since I had loose change in the car I put it in the envelope provided and dropped it into the courtesy box. I then bought a Charlevoix Courier at Central Drug Store only to find out I had just repeated Ron's mistake!

So, I did some homework and timed myself counting out the pennies, nickels, dimes and quarters I sent in to pay the fine. Time — 11 seconds. I then timed myself to take an envelope, address it, put on the postage and deposit coins into it — 23 seconds.

Since the city is losing $1.50 on every $2 ticket when it returns money, I suggest a simple solution of common sense — print on the violation envelope what currency is and is not acceptable to pay your fines.

Editorial rebuttal

Editor:
The facts as presented in the recent editions of your paper give cause for me to write again. To begin with, I am rather interested in what was called in the Army

"selective enforcement" of your publication guidelines. When I first wrote, I was given a specific rule of "no letter more than 450 words or no publication." However, for more than a month I have noted letters much longer in content. Is this a new standard or do letters on subjects of interest to you have greater leeway?

The May 30 editorial concerning wind generators again fails to mention all the facts. I investigated the possibility of one for my farm and learned quite a bit of information from the County Zoning Commission. Wind generators are at least 300 feet tall. Their blades are in excess of 100 feet each. They require a counter balance of a 40 foot deep concrete foundation. The electricity which they generate is also not the cheapest for the consumer. May I suggest that those of us who remember Charlevoix B.C. (Before Condos) will tell you many homes, including the one on the "proposed" school site had windmills, which generated electricity, ran farm machinery and sold electricity back to the REA. They are sometimes still seen as older homes, they are much shorter, highly efficient, don't have 100 foot blades to take out passing flocks of birds and blend in to the scenery much better than a wind generator.

I was quite surprised to see the city is intending to construct a sewer to the "proposed" school site on Marion Center Road. I don't remember that as part of the millage question or construction proposal. How exactly is a sewer going to be laid down at Marion Center when there is hardly enough room for the current heavy traffic flow? Has this been mentioned to the Belvedere Club? I doubt they will be too happy when their golf course is trenched for sewer pipes. Why is it that the city is doing the work? Is it now implied that the area between what I thought was the city limit and the school has now been annexed by the city? Is it now that the school is going to become a sewer authority? More importantly are my school tax dollars now going to pay for a city sewer project?

There are 431 words on this page; I hope that meets today's requirement.

Joseph F. Seidel
U.S. Army Retired

(Editor's note: While we do have a 450 word limit on letters and like short letters over long ones, we will work with letter writers who exceed that number to edit their letters down. If the staff at the Courier is given the proper amount of time to work with the letter writer, we have been known to give about a 100 word leeway. This also depends on space available on the "letters page" that week.)

Remember those little things when stressed

Many times after I finish editing the paper, designing it and getting it printed, I am horrified to find an error in it. Sometimes I put off looking at the finished paper until the end of the day on Wednesday, that way I at least have one nice day not fretting over misspelled names or other errors.

Recently something caught my attention that reminded me perfection is a very hard goal to reach when publishing something. For the last three months I have noticed the word Charlevoix spelled "Charleviox" on my city electric bill.

After calling the city to inform them about the spelling error, I learned it was a typo that happened at the printer and the city has thousands of these pre-printed misspelled billing sheets.

The city was quite embarrassed about it. I think they really shouldn't be. Being in the business of printing words myself, I understand that mistakes like this do happen and are just reminders that we are not perfect. It's just nice to see it happen to someone other than me for a change.

My drive to Lansing and back in the midst of angry, aggressive drivers turned into a very pleasant day as I thought about these little things. I found myself laughing many times and not really worrying about the others around me.

On the plus side, I learned sometimes the best way to really annoy the drivers around you is to drive happy. It really makes a trip more interesting to watch the looks on the other drivers faces when you smile and wave at them.

Cruise coming to town

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

For the first time in about 50 years, a cruise ship will be visiting Charlevoix.

At around 9:30 a.m. on June 21, the Greek-flagged passenger-ship, Arcadia will drop anchor just off the pier at Michigan Beach or in Round Lake. Passengers from the ship will be ferried to mainland Charlevoix.

The ship is expected to depart the Charlevoix area around 4 a.m. the next day, bound for Detroit.

Kris Rassmussen, downtown coordinator for Charlevoix, said she has been working on bringing this ship to Charlevoix for about a year.

"Hopefully this will be just the first cruise ship of many other cruise ships coming in," she said. Rassmussen said other companies have expressed interest in cruising the Great Lakes and stopping in Charlevoix.

It is not known at this time if the Arcadia will actually come into Round Lake, Rassmussen said.

"It depends on the weather and other factors. They will decide on the day of arriving if it (the Arcadia) will come into Round Lake."

Charlevoix Harbor Master Hal Evans said he is not sure how long the bridge would be up if the cruise ship decides to drop-anchor in Round Lake for the night. He said the ship is about twice the size of the Coast Guard ship docked in Charlevoix and half the size of the Great Lake freighters that used to come in.

Regardless of where the ship stays for the night, a small ship will be used to bring the Arcadia's passengers to the mainland. It will be docking near the United States Coast Guard Ship Arcadia.

According to the Ralph Diehl, president of Great Lakes Cruises, Inc. — the cruise line bringing in the ship — the Arcadia will not actually dock in Charlevoix because the water is too shallow. Charlevoix and Traverse City are the only cities, out of the 28 the ship stops at, that the Arcadia must anchor outside of.

As for bringing the ship into Round Lake, Diehl was not optimistic.

"I am not sure if we are going to be able to make it into that little lake," he said.

The Arcadia was originally built in 1969 and completely rebuilt in 1989. Additionally, it had a $2 million refurbishment in February.

The ship is 367 feet long, has a 18-and-a-half foot draft, a 54-foot breadth and carries 224 passengers with 115 crew members.

The Arcadia flies under a Greek flag because it is owned by a Greek company and spends its winters in Greece. Great Lakes Cruises only charters the ship, Diehl said.

For the June 21 trip, Diehl said the passenger list is only at about 100.

Haske named new school principal

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

In August, after 16 years as Charlevoix Middle School principal, Dennis VanGuilder will officially hand over the reins to former Charlevoix High School assistant principal and athletic director Keith Haske.

In April, VanGuilder announced his resignation and a middle school principal selection committee got to work. The committee sifted through the credentials of 38 applicants and on May 30 they conducted interviews and narrowed the field to seven.

Round two came on June 5 and the deal was sealed for Haske — the committee decided to recommend him to the school board. At the board's meeting on June 11 they unanimously voted him in.

"I'm fired up. One of my career goals is to be a building principal. I was hoping when they (the school district) hired me four years ago that they would have enough faith in me to make me a building administrator," Haske said.

But, he isn't only excited to be able to cross one of his goals off his to do list, he is also looking forward to working with the students. He described middle schoolers as somewhat of a special student breed.

"They (middle school students) appreciate it (school.) Their energy level is different, it's refreshing," he said.

Some may be thinking Haske is excited, but is he ready to take on the hectic middle school halls? He certainly thinks so.

Haske has been in classrooms and school halls for 17 years and through his sixth grade son, he has even picked up insider's insight into the middle school mind.

Haske said his son was excited about him taking the new position at the middle school for about five seconds, but he understands that.

"My mom was a teacher and I avoided her as much as I could. In a couple of years I'll have my daughter too. I have compassion for them, having gone through that myself," he said.

In addition to Haske's administrative role at the high school, he is known as the coach who took the boys' Rayder basketball team to the state championship this year.

As for the coaching job, Haske said the district is currently hashing over the situation, but that he hopes to continue.

However, as of June 11 nothing was set in stone and Haske said, "At this point I can't comment on that."

Shooting sports starting to attract women

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

When you picture someone at the Charlevoix Rod and Gun Club, shooting clay skeet, what sex is the person you've imagined?

The person in the minds of many readers was most likely male. However, according to two Charlevoix women, the stereotype that nice girls don't shoot guns isn't true — women also enjoy guns for sport and/or hunting.

In fact, 45-year-old Charlevoix resident Nita Martin enjoys splitting clay at the end of the day.

"I want to get good at it; it's fun for me to do. It's a source of relaxation. When I'm shooting the rest of the world goes away," she said.

Martin started shooting a 410 and a 20 gauge two months ago and has since gone out five times and now she's hooked. She says she impacts clays with about 75 percent of her shots.

So why did this petite, fiery, local take up the sport?

Martin said she finds it "immensely gratifying."

In fact, gratification and the feeling of accomplishment are two of the same reasons Jean Musilek, 26, a Charlevoix resident, said she chose to shoot.

"I get a sense of accomplishment in succeeding at something I have never done before. It's also rewarding to succeed at what is generally considered to be a man's domain," Musilek explained.

But, in some instances the kick of the gun against your shoulder, the weight of the firearm and its inherent ability to inflict harm make people feel out of control and uncomfortable.

New clothing store is exclusive to Gear

Charlevoix is now the only place in the United States with an exclusive Gear for Sports clothing store.

The downtown area has this reputation thanks to the recent opening of Gear to Wear, a new business located next to Charlevoix Harbor Wear on Bridge Street.

According to co-owner of the store Kirby Dipert, Gear to Wear offers its customers "high quality sports clothing at a reasonable price." And the only brand of sports clothing you will find in Dipert's business is Gear for Sports.

"We carried the Gear product for a number of years. Gear wanted to offer a Gear-only store and we took advantage of that. We are not a factory store, but exclusive to Gear. We are the first in the country," Dipert said.

Dipert, along with his wife Jacqueline Mabec, had a store in the same location as Gear to Wear for many years, in addition to other businesses he owns in the downtown Charlevoix area.

The couple have been in the Charlevoix retail business for about 26 years. In addition to belonging to several organizations, they actively donate to the community and live in Charlevoix throughout the year.

Gear to Wear is open from 9 a.m. to 10 p.m. every day during the summer. It is closed during the winter season.

For more information on the business, call 547-3448.

Shooting competition for women offered

Not for these two. Martin and Musilek were naturals.

"It's a firearm, it's not a weapon — that helps you psychologically to overcome the fear," Martin explained.

She added that 20 years ago when she first shot, she was terrified. But just two months ago she picked up the hobby again and wasn't afraid.

Aside from being psychologically prepared her tools were better this time around. Her brother, Steve Martin, an avid shooter and Rod and Gun Club member, gave her step-by-step instructions that she said made all the difference.

Even though it was Musilek's first time out, she too didn't let fear get the best of her and was able to find the experience empowering.

"I felt very powerful and in control. I pull the trigger and I say when to pull the clay," she said.

Her comfort level and confidence shined as she made contact with 80 percent of the clays she fired at.

However, both women don't hunt and said that shooting animals isn't something they are as interested in as shooting for sport. Neither said they associate guns with aggression nor do they associate hunting with aggression.

Even though women like Martin and Musilek are beginning to hunt with firearms and are shooting for sport, men continue to dominate in both fields. Martin blames this gender split on manufactured social stereotypes.

She said that a male friend once told her to get out and shoot because she would be at less of a disadvantage. But some may claim there are stereotypes associated with being a woman and shooting, just as there are in not shooting.

Martin and Musilek's attitude is, "to each their own," do what makes you happy.

"To me there is no loss of femininity by being able to do something that society has conditioned us to think we can't do," Martin said.

Both agreed that guns aren't for everyone but that they have benefited in many ways from their experience.

Gun savvy women and those without a clue around a firearm are invited to join other women in an instructional environment from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m., June 16 for the National Rifle Association's first ever Charlevoix Ladies Day at the Range.

The event will take place at the Charlevoix Rod and Gun Club, three miles north of Charlevoix on US-31.

Shirley Crozier, event Chairwoman and local Rod and Gun Club member said, "The success of these all-women shoots seems to be ladies teaching ladies where they are not intimidated, but relaxed and allowed to make mistakes."

The day will include learning about and shooting shotguns, rifles and hand guns. Participants can also join in on trap, skeet and marksmanship.

Special guest instructor, Phil Krumm who is a former FBI handgun instructor from the Quantico FBI Academy, will be on-site to share information.

The cost for the day is $15 per person. Reservations can be made by mailing a check to Crozier at 720 West Crozier Road, Boyne City, MI 49712.

24 Hour Emergency Service

A day in the life of an EMT in Charlevoix

Julie Musilek
"Stepping out"

During an afternoon outing with Charlevoix emergency medical technician and firefighter Bob Roloff, his secret recipe for success was revealed.

With the help of three of his close friends — Diet Coke, pizza and adrenaline — fire station shift commander Roloff works three 24 hour shifts every week. But the craziest part about him isn't that he's fueled by health food, it's that he literally puts in a full day and does it with a smile.

Not only does he work long shifts, but he also spends all of his days off on ambulance call — so, when he isn't waiting to sound the sirens and douse a fire, you can find him nearby one of two emergency vehicles he calls "rigs."

Roloff's second title, EMT keeps him on his toes. In fact, during the typical year the local emergency medical service is called to between 800 and 1,000 scenes.

"I could have a day off, but I just like doing this. There is no better feeling than going to a scene with a guy in full cardiac arrest and then talking to him a week later," he explained.

Not only is Roloff a work horse, he also gives back. He used his own money when he equipped his personal rig, a white GMC Yukon, and his wife Audrey's white Ford pickup with defibrillators used to shock heart attack sufferers into a normal heart rhythm.

"If you don't have that piece of equipment and someone has a heart attack, they most likely aren't coming out of it," he said.

He explained the EMTs are given three minutes to get to the station. Once they jump in the ambulance, and make it to the scene, four to six minutes may have passed and "you have a problem."

During his 20 years in the life-saving business Roloff has saved six heart attack sufferers.

"It's nice to go out and help people. I don't think I'll ever get burned out, I just love the job," he said as he munched on pizza, five hours into his day-long shift.

Burnout for some comes after a strenuous afternoon, but for Roloff it's been 20 years of long days and apparently burnout is nowhere in sight.

His lifesaving, fire fighting whirlwind started back in 1981 when he decided to be a firefighter, but there wasn't a spot for him to fill. So, rather than wasting his ambition, current street superintendent John Martin who was fire chief at the time, suggested that he take EMT classes.

And so the story began. From that point forward, Charlevoix has been well served by Roloff.

Linda Weller, a former EMT who is currently the assistant to city manager Mike Wiesner said, "Being an EMT takes a very special person; you give your time and your life to the job. There's a lot at stake. Bob and the members of the crew here are exceptional men and women and I'm honored to know them, because they do make a difference in this town."

Currently there are 40 men and women working for both fire and ambulance, but Charlevoix could use volunteer firefighters and EMTs.

If you are looking to join the team, talk to Roloff or fire chief Doug Carver. If not, remember the law — these guys have an important job to do so get out of their way.

When you see their lights you must move to the right and come to a complete stop.

Hayes Township looking into sewers

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

Hayes Township residents who attended the June 4 Charlevoix City Council meeting may have gotten the impression that a sewer extension from the city to the township is in the works, but township supervisor Tim Boyko says the board is simply preparing for the future.

"The question was whether we would ever consider a sewer. This is not on the agenda or on the immediate horizon," Boyko said.

The Hayes Township Board told the city that the township would like to be on the City of Charlevoix's possible sewer extension list which means engineering a master plan.

City manager Mike Wiesner said, "It will be a master plan to guide us in sizing future sewer extensions."

Wiesner said he does not foresee running sewer to Hayes in the next two decades.

But, master plan engineering costs are being paid for through tap-in fees charged to those members in Charlevoix township that have tied into the city's line like residents of both North Point Woods and the Charlevoix Country Club.

John Adams and Associates Inc. of Ypsilanti are engineering the Hayes Township Sanitary Sewer Master plan on a budget not to exceed $21,000.

Currently, waste generated in Hayes is dealt with in private septic fields, but according to Boyko, the future may require a more advanced sewer system.

"In the future, with the aging septic fields there may be an environmental reason to do that (extend the sewer to Hayes), but it is not an immediate concern. To close the door indefinitely lacks foresight," he said.

Because the future may mean a sewer system is needed to service Hayes, the township board told the city they may be interested and are ready to engineer a master plan. Boyko referred to their decision as part of "generational planning."

HEALTH

Doctor answers common hearing aid questions

Marlene Bevan, Ph.D.

'Your health'

Hearing aid technology has come a long way in the past six years and digital hearing aids are changing the way people think about their hearing aids.

Using dual microphones, adaptive noise reduction, digital feedback suppression and software-based digital sound processors, many people are able to understand in situations of background noise when their old hearing aids were useless.

Dr. Marlene A. Bevan said, "As an audiologist and hearing instruments specialist I do more than improve my clients' hearing. I also help them to improve the quality of their lives." Below she answers some of the most common questions regarding this subject.

Q. Why do digital hearing aids sound different than your old hearing aids? What are the differences between traditional (non-programmable) hearing aids and digitally programmable hearing aids and 100 percent digital hearing aids?

A. Traditional hearing aids receive information on how to amplify sound from electronic circuitry that is within the instrument. Digitally programmable hearing aids receive that same information from a computer, but then amplify sound in the same manner as traditional hearing aids do. A digital hearing aid has both a computerized digital programmer and digital sound processors. Think of it as the differences between a tape deck and a CD player. The tape deck may even receive its instructions digitally, but the tape playing is processed in an analogue format and may sound noisy or even distorted. The CD player is receiving digital instructions and is producing the sound from the CD in a digital fashion. There is a marked difference in clarity.

Q. Why is digital processing better than analogue processing? Will this difference help you to understand conversation more clearly?

A. Digitizing a sound allows us to break sound down to the smallest possible parts and then to amplify those parts to make them more audible and more understandable. We can do this digitally without adding any noise to the signal and without degrading its clarity. The digital amplifying process actually can improve the signal for some people who have hearing loss by enhancing the speech signal to ensure optimum clarity in background noise.

Q. What if my hearing changes? Will I need new hearing aids?

A. Digital hearing aids can be reprogrammed to fit mild to severe hearing loss. Unless your hearing changes to the profound loss category, digital hearing can be reprogrammed to fit changes in your hearing sensitivity.

Q. Will tomorrow's digital hearing aid technologies surpass the digital hearing aid I purchase today?

A. Changes in digital technology are for the most part software based. It is like the programs on your computer. You may decide to purchase future upgrades for your Quicken checkbook program, but they will most likely run on the same computer you own today.

Q. How can I tell if digital hearing aids will be a worthwhile investment for me?

A. If you're experiencing difficulty hearing conversation in background noise, or if your hearing aids are over four years old, you need to hear the difference that Digital Hearing can make in your life. Find a qualified hearing professional and arrange a trial evaluation period. Hear for yourself how much more benefit digital hearing aids can give you. And inquire as to their "trade-in" programs when you trade up for a digital hearing solution.

Dr. Marlene A. Bevan can be contacted by calling (231) 547-3100 or visit her web site at www.audicare.com.

Vertigo therapy expanding in Boyne City rehab clinic

People suffering from chronic dizziness, light headedness, spinning, tilting, nausea, headaches, ringing in the ears and double vision may find relief from Vestibular Rehabilitation, or Vertigo Therapy.

Boyne Rehabilitation Center in Boyne City is expanding its Vestibular Rehabilitation Program. The center has been treating patients with vertigo problems or vestibular disorders since 1997. The program is so successful, and the need so great in the community, that now the entire staff at the center has been formally trained in Vestibular Rehabilitation.

"Recently, the entire staff has been formally trained in Vestibular Rehabilitation, allowing the center to provide the community with one of the finest Vertigo Rehabilitation programs in Michigan," said Cindy Banner, director of Boyne Rehabilitation Center.

Research shows that Physical Therapy has been very beneficial in treating patients suffering from problems including Benign Paroxysmal Positional Vertigo (BPPV), a common problem causing vertigo, and Labyrinthitis or Vestibular Neuritis, often experienced after a person has an inner ear infection, said Banner. Meniere's Syndrome and Perilymph Fistula are other common types of vestibular diagnoses that have responded well to Physical Therapy, Banner said.

"The common signs and symptoms of vestibular problems may interfere with your ability to perform daily activities or work," Banner said.

By undergoing Vestibular Rehabilitation, patients often feel complete, or nearly complete, relief of their dizzy symptoms.

"The average person experiencing vertigo problems is seen for two to three treatment sessions, which last about 30 to 60 minutes," Banner said. "Patients who demonstrate significant balance problems occasionally will require Physical Therapy two or three times a week for one month."

Rehabilitation often includes therapeutic exercises such as eye and head coordination, habituation, walking programs, balance retraining to improve motor coordination and sensory organization, and particle repositioning maneuvers.

Patients are given a home program, which includes three or four exercises and a walking regimen when appropriate, Banner said.

For more information about treatment to overcome vertigo, contact Cindy Banner at the Boyne Rehabilitation Center at 582-6365, or the Physical Rehabilitation Department at Charlevoix Area Hospital at 547-8630.

Belvedere rezoning faces some opposition

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

When it comes to rezoning requests, the Charlevoix City Council bases its decision on whether or not the benefits of the change will outweigh the cost.

Recently council approved a zoning change on the northside, but a second request left them stumped.

The first they considered was the Shadko/Country Day Inc. property, a 7.985 acre parcel located at 621 and 615 Petoskey Avenue, sandwiched between Petoskey Avenue and Division Street. Both the property and Country Day, are owned by Charlevoix resident and Realtor Ed Amick of Amick Lakeside Realtors.

Amick's site and all the abutting properties were originally zoned R-1, single family residential but council found just cause to change the zoning to R-2, single family residential. Each home in the R-2 zone must be built on a lot of a minimum 9,000 square feet.

In the staff report distributed to all councilmen it is stated that, "The purpose of the R-2 single family residential zoning district is to provide and encourage the development of a sound and stable medium density residential environment."

Lazer Construction of Petoskey is working with Country Day on the development of the property and will be doing the construction management of the project.

Council decided quickly and unanimously that Amick's request was one worth granting. However, when it came time to decide on a Belvedere Avenue rezoning request things didn't progress quite as smoothly.

Two Belvedere property owners, located at 103 Belvedere Avenue, Martha Soderberg/Lloyd Kirby and Robert Hoffman, would like to change their zoning from professional office, marine commercial to central business district in order to literally raise the roof.

In a letter written by Kirby to city planner, Gerry Harsch, Kirby states, "It is our intention to build a second story (son-in-law) living quarters over my mother-in-law's one-bedroom first-floor living quarters."

He went on to say that the property will remain as a family residence on both floors with a potential home office in Kirby's retirement years.

However, some residents living in the Wharf and behind the lot and those from the Ward Business spoke in opposition to the change, because while it is a residence now, in the future, the change may allow for unwanted uses, like a restaurant or a tavern. Other property owners said the change would substantially lower their property values because the height increase would diminish their view of Round Lake.

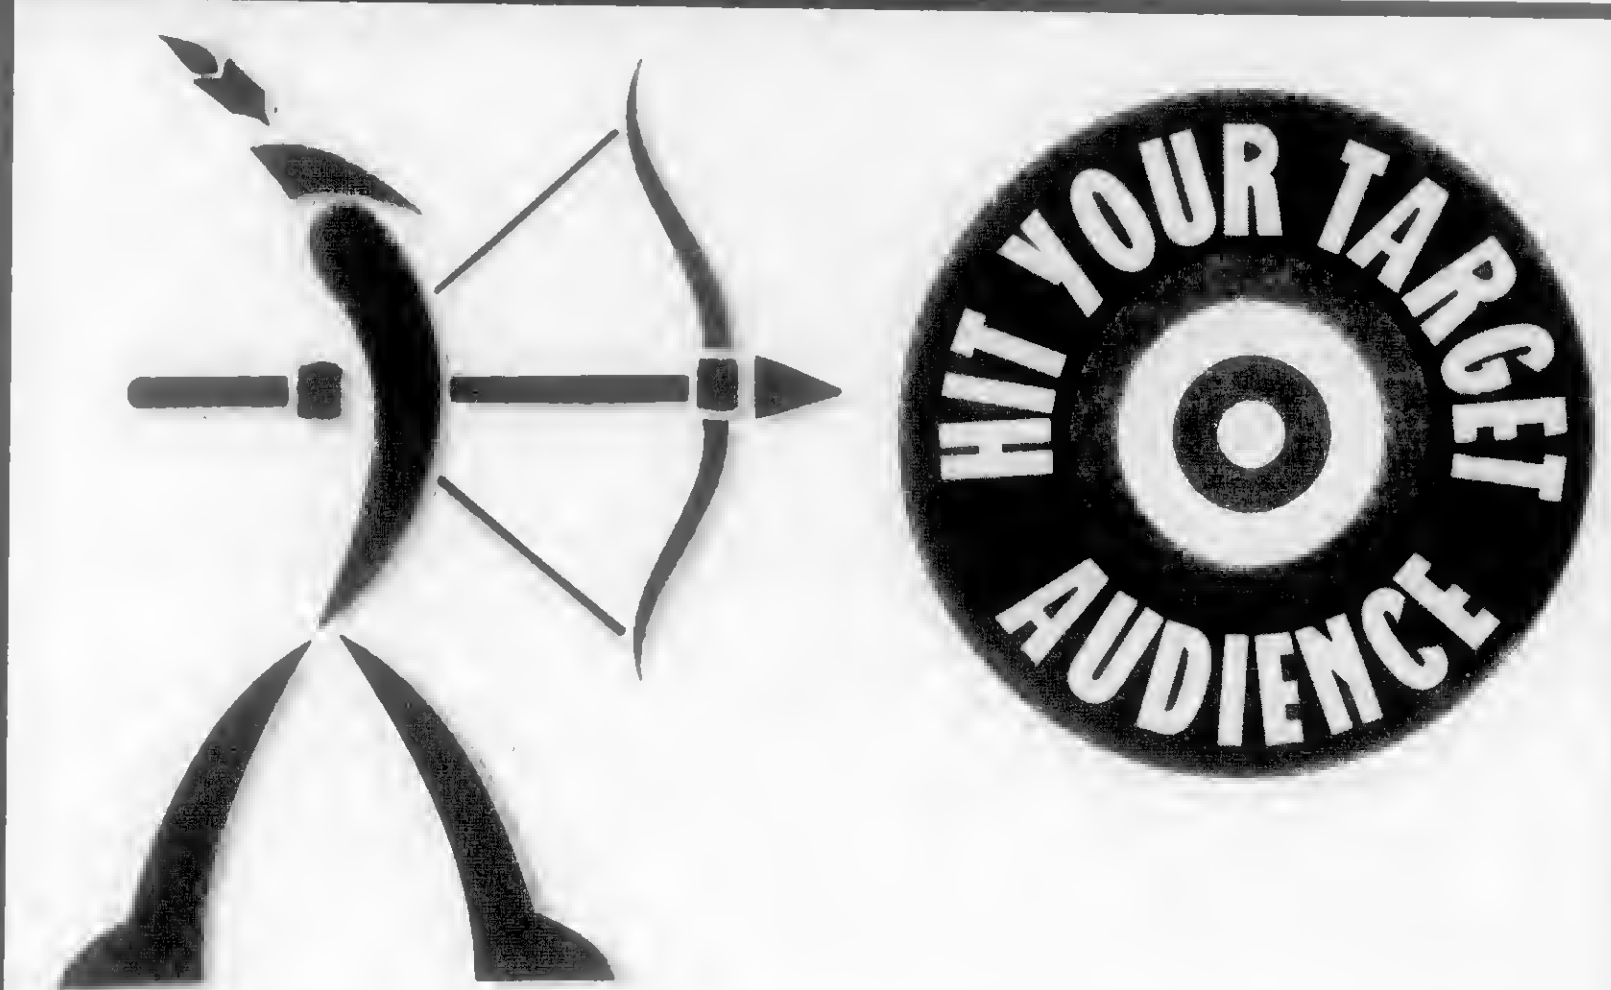

At the public hearing, members of council were not comfortable approving the rezoning but thought that maybe the property owners could achieve the changes by getting variances without re-zoning the property.

The variance question has to be answered by the city board of appeals who will look at Soderberg/Kirby and Hoffman's requests in the future.

Council then decided to table the issue until their September meeting. City planner Gerry Harsch said, "If the board of appeals approves the variances they request and allows them to build, my guess is council will turn down the rezoning."

A view of the property up for rezoning on Belvedere Avenue from the deck of one of its neighbors. Several residents living around the property have objected to the rezoning because the owner wants to add an additional story to the building. The residents say it will hurt their property values by limiting the view of Round Lake. (Photo by Julie Musilek)

AAA offers advice on staying healthy during travel

A recent AAA Michigan survey of state residents aged 45 and older confirms 44 percent have a health condition that impacts their ability to travel.

Twenty-six percent have avoided taking a trip in the past due to health concerns. Ranking high on the list of most frequently cited health conditions affecting travel were vision problems, bladder control, heart problems, headaches and digestive disorders.

"During this day and age of traffic congestion, flight delays and other factors that lengthen travel time, it is especially imperative that travelers with potential health problems, such as arthritis or overactive bladder, take steps to ensure continued health during an extended trip," said Stuart Stoller, D.O., a family-practice physician in Sterling Heights. "No one wants his or her dream vacation interrupted by illness that might have been avoided by taking some simple preventative measures."

To help spread awareness about key issues surrounding "healthy" travel, AAA Michigan and Pharmacia Corporation - leading global pharmaceutical company - have joined forces to launch a year-long, travel-health-education campaign.

The program, called Travel Healthy, Travel Happy, features a comprehensive brochure that helps consumers cope with common travel health issues such as motion sickness, arthritis, allergies, diarrhea and overactive bladder.

"It is our hope that his unique travel-health program will provide travelers with important information about how to think ahead and prepare for the everyday health concerns to better ensure a more pleasant travel experience," said Larry Dickens, director of Vendor Relations and Travel Support at AAA Travel.

PLAN AHEAD
Proper planning prevents many foreseeable health problems during a long trip said Dr. Stoller. First, consider your destination climate and pack accordingly. Don't forget your sunscreen, insect repellent and bottled water. Take along a small first-aid kit for bumps and bruises and remember to pack all prescription and over-the-counter medications in a waterproof container that is easily accessible in a carry-on bag.

Before leaving for a vacation, visit the family doctor to discuss any troubling symptoms of overactive bladder, a newly launched once-daily treatment called DETROL LA may prove helpful. Other "healthy travel" tips:

To avoid motion sickness - when traveling by car, try to sit in the front seat and avoid reading. By boat, sit as close to the middle of the vessel as possible. On a plane, sit near the wing.

For digestive problems such as diarrhea and/or irritable bowel syndrome, avoid stress, caffeine, and certain types of high-fat foods.

Those with allergies should take the same precautions on vacation that they do at home. Bring an antihistamine and pack your own pillowcase for use in hotels.

Pack appropriate medications for pain and inflammation associated with arthritis. Take frequent breaks to walk around and relieve stiff joints and muscles.

If you are subject to frequent urination (more than 8 times per day) or urgency (an overwhelming urge to urinate) you may have an overactive bladder.

See your doctor for treatment options that can make travel easier, or visit www.bladderinfo.com.

TRIP HEALTH INSURANCE?

Have you ever wondered what might happen if the perfectly planned and expensive vacation you prepared gets canceled due to illness?

"You don't have to suffer the financial loss of a nonrefundable plane ticket or tour," said Dickens. "Travel insurance is an excellent way to protect your investment."

Travel insurance is relatively inexpensive and can cover trip cancellation, baggage loss, and emergency medical assistance. Trip-cancellation coverage provides compensation for nonrefundable plane tickets, tour packages, or cruise vacations in the event of an illness or injury to you, your family member, a traveling companion, or a traveling companion's family member.

Emergency medical and dental benefits cover expenses, including hospitalization, that occur while you are on vacation. Some providers also offer translators at a 24-hour, emergency, multilingual hotline if you are in a foreign hospital. In addition, legal travel help is also available. Check with your local AAA travel agent for details.

"I was very surprised, if you look at the programs and services provided by the technical education millage, Charlevoix students are real benefactors," Eckhardt said.

However, the decision of Charlevoix voters was not the opinion of the majority across the ISD. In the end, the technical education millage passed by 67 percent.

Also on the ballot were two incumbent school board members with Charlevoix public schools who were re-elected to serve four year terms.

Kenneth "Scott" Boss received 572 votes, 50.4 percent and Mark "Barney" Way received 531 votes, 46.7 percent of the vote. There were 33 votes for a write-in candidate.

Three members of the Char-Em ISD board of education were also re-appointed to serve a six-year term. They are: Robert W. Anderson, Jay Es-senberger and Mary P. Jason.

- July 28 — The Jeff Drenth Memorial Foot Races at the Charlevoix Elementary School.

- July 29 — Tennis finals at Shanahan Field and, another new addition, a sporting clays shoot at the Charlevoix Rod and Gun Club.

According to Davenport, you must be a qualified shooter to take part in the clay shoot.

In addition to these events, there will be a kids day on July 26 in East Park. Children can watch a puppet show or make some crafts, in addition to many other activities.

There will also be a United States Coast Guard helicopter rescue demonstration around 7 p.m. July 22 in Round Lake. Additionally, the United States Coast Guard ship Arcadia will be open for public tours throughout the week.

There will also be a Venetian queen coronation on July 27 in East Park and a craft courtyard on July 27 and 28 near the Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce.

The week's musical events are just as diverse as the activities.

Dan Barron, Venetian Board president, said there will be two stages set up in the downtown area this year to provide a better musical variety to festival-goers. In addition to the stage in East Park, there will be a temporary stage set up in Bridge Park.

The musical acts will be heard throughout the festival from 7:30 to 10:30 p.m. each night of the festival.

Some of the highlights will be: The SHOP choir, an urban gospel group from Chicago, Ill. on July 22 in East Park; Jill Jack on July 23 in East Park; Lisa Haley and the Zydekats, a zydeco group from Louisiana, on July 24 in East Park; a symphonic youth orchestra from Belgium on July 25 in East Park and the Michigan State University Spartan Band on July 28 in East Park.

Barron said the MSU band will be performing in the Venetian parade, which starts at 11 a.m. on July 28. They will then be playing in East Park and afterwards will go to Ferry Beach for a special MSU alumni cookout.

"We hope this will prompt other universities to come up here (in the future)," Barron said.

Plus, on July 27, there will actually be musical groups playing at three locations in the Charlevoix area. In addition to stages in East Park and Bridge Park, Barron said the Up North Big Band will be playing at Ferry Beach.

To round out the entertainment, the festival will once again have two nights of fireworks displays.

At about 10:15 p.m. Friday, fireworks will be shot from the Venetian Barge just off of Depot Beach. And around the same time on July 28, low-level fireworks will be shot from the middle of Round Lake as part of the Grand Electrical Boat Parade.

Some great races at the Wednesday night series

A. Nony
Mouse

'Yachting
notes'

The "Big Boat" Spinnaker Fleet is really getting tough! WINDRUNNER was first across the finish line at 7:26:32 with nearly a six-minute lead over GOTCHA, but corrected times brought the fleet right together and really changed the final results.

SLAPSHOT's corrected elapsed time of 1:16:39 earned her the First Place honors with MINT JULEP close behind (1:17:17). Eight seconds further back was GOTCHA; fourteen seconds later, HOOTIE at 1:17:39 just six seconds ahead of WINDRUNNER (1:17:45). The top five all corrected within the span of one minute, six seconds. The Attee's new HOI POLLOI trailed, but still corrected only three minutes out of first place for a very nice initial race. (A warm welcome!)

With the big wind shift changing the course from the planned tacking and downwind duel to a boat parade, the Jib and Main Fleet didn't miss not having spinnakers.

FLASH crossed the line at 7:33:24, right up there with the Spinnaker Fleet and eight minutes ahead of BALD EAGLE, next to cross in the JAM Fleet. That was enough to save her time (1:25:00) over the EAGLE's corrected 1:28:57. APOTHECARY (1:30:56) and CHEEMAUN (1:32:01) were not far behind. Very fast times for all of the Jib and Main Fleet.

LOST VERMONTNER either had the 'chute up backwards or that darn cow was backing up like mad as it took the honors in the P-26 Fleet at 1:25:00. Unlike the other fleets, the P-26s were spread out a bit as CYGNUS trailed by two minutes followed by ORIGINAL SIN. ARTEMIS did not finish.

Thirteen J-22s theoretically started at 6 p.m. but more than half the fleet were over the line at 5:59:59, causing a general recall. They then killed time until the other fleets started and re-started at 6:20 with only the Charlevoix Yacht Club commodore being a bit premature. At the finish the Commodore Consort took the honors in HUSSY with SUPERFLUOUS and II RECKLESS less than a minute back. Then, all in close order, PALEFACE LITE,

FIRST DATE, HS MOISTURE MISSILE, SWINE FLEW, ROCK STEADY, THUNDER STRUCK and CRAZY HORSE rounded out the top ten. A couple minutes later, BANZAI and HIGH MAINTENANCE crossed, trailed another two minutes later by HOG TIDE.

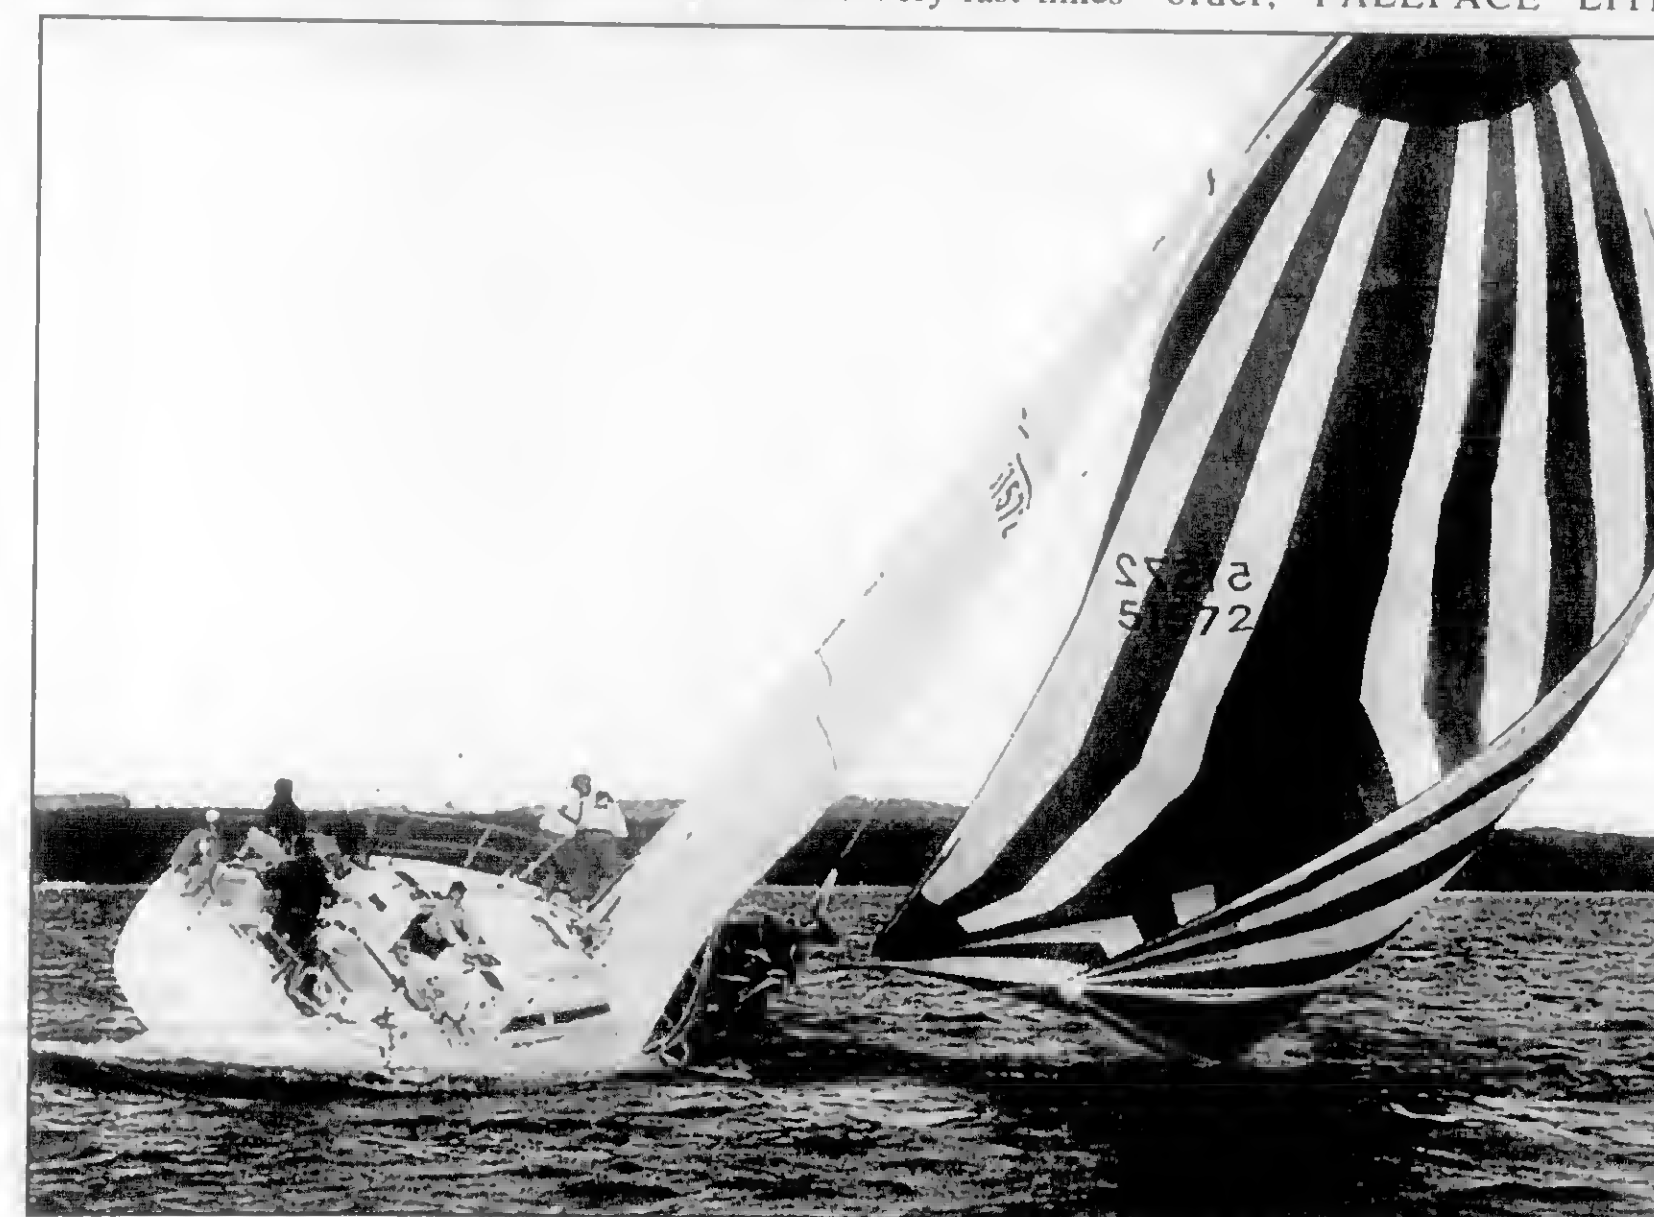

After three races, using no drops, the leaders, Big Boats: GOTCHA 5, SLAPSHOT 7 and HOOTIE 9. P-26s: VERMONTNER 5, CYGNUS 5, and O'SIN 8. JAM Fleet: BALDIE 6 and FLASH 7. J-22s: RECKLESS 5, HUSSY 7, FIRST DATE 12, SUPERFLUOUS 14 and PALEFACE 14.

Nautical Trivia #3: We believe there are at least five specific "ropes" that may be aboard watercraft of various types that, in normal nautical usage, are properly called "...rope(s)," not line, sheet, halyard, lanyard or whatever.

We hereby give you "bell rope" for your first. E-mail joshb@tm.net or leave word at 547-2000, before noon Saturday, with your list. (For water skiing, etc.) as purists claim that vessels only tow with lines (often "hawsers"). Winner(s) get nothing except recognition.

Racing Sailors — the Pine Lake Overnight is June 23-24! Call 547-2122 (Mark) for details. Sunfish, Spring Series #1, June 17, 1 p.m. (Juniors: 10:00 a.m.) Call 536-7975 (Don) for details. Frank and Laura (nicely recovered, neat scar) will host at Charlevoix Yacht Club this Friday evening; see you there?

Baseball team ends year with 19-9 record

By ALLEN TELGENHOF
Sports writer

The Charlevoix Rayders ended a successful baseball season with a 19-9 record despite being ousted in district play of the state tournament by conference champion East Jordan, 4-2.

A three-run homer by the Red Devils in the first inning was just too much for Charlevoix to overcome.

Earlier in the week, results were mixed for the Rayders in non-conference action as they swept St. Ignace, 5-4 and 11-3 but were swept by Class A Traverse City West, 9-4 and 10-7.

Against the Saints, Matt Horon led a potent Rayder hitting attack with four hits and three RBI. Matt Kochanny had three hits and two RBI.

Jeremiah Teuscher had two doubles and 2 RBI in the nightcap.

Nate Teuscher picked up the win in relief in game one with his brother Jeremiah earning the save.

Dennis Avery capped a perfect regular season on the hill in game two with his seventh win of the year.

Charlevoix held its own against Traverse City West, jumping out to a 2-0 lead in the first inning on a Chris Loper two-run double. The Rayders trailed only 3-2 after four innings in the opener until two three-run rallies broke the game open.

Nate Teuscher had two hits for Charlevoix. In the nightcap, the script was nearly the same as the game was scoreless after three innings. West exploded for four runs in the fourth and two in the fifth for a 6-0 advantage.

The Rayders came roaring back with six runs in the top of the sixth to knot the game, but West answered with four tallies of their own to put the game away.

Avery, Nate Teuscher, Matt Horon and Matt Kochanny all had two hits in the nightcap. Ryan Leitner had a key RBI single.

Results of the 5K and 10K races were:

5K
• 17 and under, male — Geoff Martin in first, Joe Dart in second and Trevor Koehler in third.
• 17 and under, female — Jayme Murray in first, Stephanie

The many changes in Charlevoix over time

Marilyn Boss
'Days gone by'

What great changes have been made in recent years in town.

I was thrilled to see the new drinking fountain on the corner of East Antrim and Bridge streets, at the entrance of the newly remodeled Veteran's Park. The new fountain is also very beautiful and wheelchair accessible.

As a child I remember all of the fountains we had downtown and I have wished through the years that they would replace them at various spots. This has always been a town for walking and cruising. Having water to drink for the public is as essential today as it ever was.

There used to be a fountain on the southwest corner of Bridge and Huribut streets where Re/Max is located today. Then there was a flowing mineral fountain at the foot of the hill by Ward Brothers, near their dock.

A little bit further east there was another flowing well by Ralph Washburn's machine shop, which would have been located on the east corner of the condominium which is there today. Another one was located on the northwest corner of Mason and Bridge streets and one in the middle of East Park, in the center of the sidewalk leading down to Round Lake. Another one was on the northwest corner of Clinton and Bridge streets by the old County bank. There was also one located where The Shop of the Gulls shop is now. Another one was located on the east side of the bridge on the sidewalk.

At that time we had eight fountains so we only need seven more to catch up with the way it used to be.

At the Lake Michigan Beach, which is scheduled to be renovated in the fall, there was a water fountain in front of the beach-house in the middle of the sidewalk.

When I was little, the beach had three slides; one small, one mid-sized and one large. There were baby swings for little ones across the sidewalk on the grass. They would sit in a wooden seat, and a crosspiece would come down in front of them to secure them in. There was also a wood merry-go-round, a monkey bar set, teeter totters and a maypole to play on.

After the war, in 1946, Laura

Heise operated the concession stand at the beach house. It was a busy place, used by both town kids and resorters. The Coast Guard station was located on the channel east of the big cement block building that currently houses the Department of Natural Resources.

One of the areas that has seen the most change is where the Ferry Avenue Beach complex is located today. My dad was the Standard Oil agent and distributor and I rode down the Eaton Street hill with him many times to fill the oil truck for deliveries around the Charlevoix area. Their bulk products came in by railroad tank car, and the bulk plant was between Ferry Avenue and the railroad track. The Belvedere Club purchased this land when it was abandoned a few years ago. Next to that boat plant was the Foster Boat Works, which was originally built for the Ferry Morris Seed Company, hence the name Ferry Avenue.

Next to that, to the south, was the DX terminal, later the City Service terminal which received most of their gasoline and oil products by huge tanker ships. The piping ran under the street and up to the top of the hill where the Marina Bluff condos are now located. There were huge above ground storage tanks which were filled with gasoline and fuel oil. When the big double-bottomed gas trucks would pull in next to the terminal building down on the shore, they would be gravity fed from the tanks on the hill. Through the years there were several spills, but no one worried about it.

Across the street from Foster Boat Works, was Zack White's night club, which was for the African-American summer help. Zack played the piano for Duke Ellington during his younger years and when he lived in Charlevoix he entertained the people who worked as chauffeurs and maids for the summer folks.

Next to the DX terminal, was a brushy, swampy area that had been the site of an old saw mill years before.

Directly south of that, right around where the basketball court is now, was A.J. Shelter's pickle factory, later sold to the H.J. Heinz pickle company. The pickle vats were wooden stave, silo type containers about 12 feet tall and 20 feet wide. They had stairs that led up to a walkway, four feet wide and you could walk around the open vats and look down at the pickles processing. This made it easy for the workers to put the cucumbers and various ingredients into the vats. The old Shelter dill pickle recipe produced the finest tasting pickle money could buy. Dale remembers his dad locating a quart of them at a grocery store in Atwood, 5 years after Mr. Shelter died and felt he had really stumbled on a prize.

Charlevoix Coal and Ice Company had coal storage sheds on the west side of the street, where coal was unloaded from the freight cars. The City of Charlevoix has their electric generating plant located right next door to what is now Nanny's. The cooling water from the diesel engines used to run down to the lake and kids enjoyed putting their feet in it because it was nice and warm.

The Charlevoix Co-operative company was located where Nanny's is today. It was a big feed and grain mill. Directly to the south, where Irish's Charlevoix headquarters is located were the remains of a three story reinforced, poured concrete building that had been abandoned. It was known as the old sugar beet factory. The roof and windows were all gone, and kids used to run and play inside it. Several different contractors tried to pull it down, but were unable to do so.

In 1947, a very eccentric man by the name of John Loskot came to town. He had a full, red beard. He bought a new, two ton red Dodge flat rack truck and he had "The Good Neighbor Foundation," painted on the door. He bought several full-page ads in the newspaper telling about being a good neighbor. He built a tar paper house, approximately 20 by 35 feet on top of some of the abandoned foundations of the old sugar beet factory.

There was no Ferry Beach when I was little. My mom would drive us down a grassy trail where the boat launching ramp is today.

I loved the sound of the tall grass hitting on the bottom of the car as we went down to swim. We would take a bar of Packers Pine Tar soap with us to wash our hair in the water.

Memories are wonderful, but our park and beach on Ferry Avenue and the proposed renovating of the Lake Michigan beach area and Depot Beach are a credit to those who are working to make Charlevoix even more beautiful. Thank you.

District has $3 million surplus

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

In the wake of the national economic downturn, some state governors are cutting back on school programs, which means most schools may be able to offer their students less, but the Charlevoix Public School District is sitting pretty.

As we reach the end of the 2001 fiscal year, the district's accounting manager Judy Boss drafted a budget revealing both a balanced budget for next year and that the district's conservative spending over the past couple of years has paid off. This year's budget shows a $3,701,992 fund balance.

Superintendent of Charlevoix Public Schools, John Sturrock said that the fund balance allows the district to be flexible. If Michigan Governor John Engler decides to pull dollars out of a given program, the Charlevoix School District has the ability to independently sustain that program.

County commission plan appealed

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

Charlevoix County may have new County Commission districts due to its adoption in May by the County Apportionment Committee, but that has been appealed.

Committee member and county Republican chair John Haggard, along with fellow committee member Joan Balch, county commissioners Shirley Roloff and Donald Smith and Charlevoix Township supervisor Oscar Stroud appealed the redistricting of the county to the Fourth District Court of Appeals June 14.

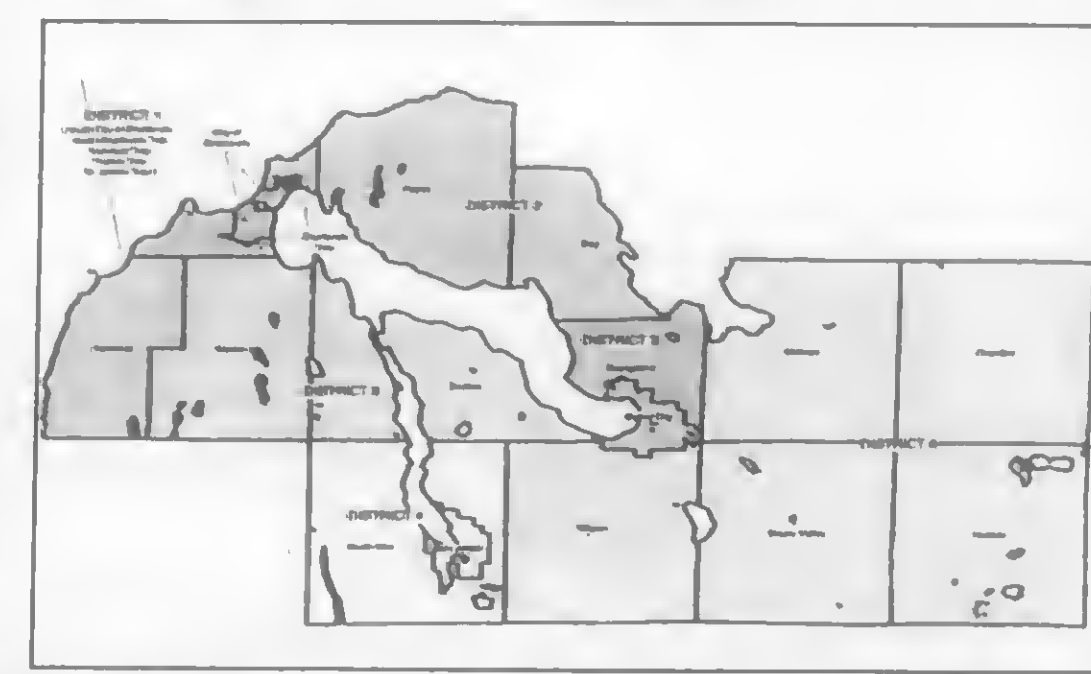

The apportionment committee was made up of Haggard, Balch, Charlevoix County Democratic Chair Kay Chase, Charlevoix County Prosecutor Mary Beth Kur and Charlevoix County Clerk Jane Brannon. Brannon, Kur and Chase all voted in favor of the adopted apportionment.

Haggard said the major reason for this appeal was the current plan's split of Charlevoix township and the city of Charlevoix's first ward into two separate county commissioner districts. The township and the entire city of Charlevoix have been in the same county commission district for about 20 years.

He said this split will create voter confusion and possibly give the township and city an unfair representation on the county commission.

Channel deepened early for cruise ship

Charlevoix Courier Wednesday, June 20, 2001 - PAGE 3

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

The United States Army Corps of Engineers crane barge, "Manitowac," was recently hard at work scooping sand out of Charlevoix's Pine River Channel.

Charlevoix City Manager Mike Wiesner explained that the army corps of engineers maintains the channel and removes sand periodically.

He added that this time around, the sand removal was attended to earlier in the season in preparation for the arrival of the 367 foot Greek cruise ship, "Arcadia."

The ship is scheduled to arrive in Charlevoix on the first day of summer, Thursday, and if the water isn't rough it may drop anchor in Round Lake. But if conditions aren't ideal, it will anchor out on Lake Michigan and ferry passengers to land.

Tom O'Bryan, civil engineer with the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers Grand Haven station, the station in charge of the sand removal, said there was a foot of sand down the length of the channel that needed to be removed in order to accommodate the cruise ship.

He explained that it's the government's responsibility to maintain a navigation level of 18 feet below low water datum in the channel. To see that the 18 feet is maintained the government conducts "conditions surveys."

O'Bryan said that Arcadia's draw is 18 feet and to have just 18 feet below low water datum, "isn't good." He said that the government has permission to remove obstruction up to negative 19 feet which, "gives the vessel an extra foot."

Beyond the 19 feet the vessel also had an extra half of a foot to deal with, because of what O'Bryan called the "plus gauge."

O'Bryan said that the sand removal has no harmful environmental impact.

"We are removing an obstruction, which is sand," he said. He added that the group has

"We are removing an obstruction, which is sand."

Tom O'Bryan,
U.S. Army Corps of Engineers removed roughly the same amount of sand from the channel every year since 1997, extracting a little more this year.

O'Bryan said the corps of engineers didn't have to remove sand until wave energy absorbing rubble mounds were built at the mouth of the channel. He explained that many argue when sand is washed through the "wave intinators" it settles as opposed to traveling through, like it used to.

Wiesner said the sand scooped out of the channel is used by city street superintendent John Martin to replenish local beaches.

Some of the sand was placed in the Department of Natural Resources Great Lakes Research Station parking lot located on Grant Street. O'Bryan said that whatever material isn't used around town will be thrown over the south breakwater.

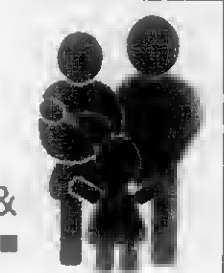

The project is being funded by the federal government who is paying the group $10,000 per day. O'Bryan said it took the crew a week to complete the project.

Budget shows the schools are healthy

Wow!
That pretty much sums up the feelings on the Charlevoix School District's proposed budget for 2001-2002. While many school districts are facing budget problems, Charlevoix continues to be a shining star by having a major budget surplus.

And the 2001-2002 budget projects the surplus to be about $3 million!

This surplus means we have a cushion to soften the blow if something goes wrong financially.

For example: Last year, the governor of Michigan, John Engler, decided he did not want the state to fund summertime reading programs. By not having state funding for the programs, many school districts found themselves forced to cancel. But not Charlevoix.

Thanks to the surplus in its budget, Charlevoix had the money to fund its own program for the summer. Thankfully, the funding was not cut and Charlevoix did not have to dip into its surplus.

As you can see, the surplus

created by what seems to be a smart fiscal policy by the Charlevoix School District is something we can all be proud of. It helps cover the costs of those little unseen glitches in school funding.

In the future, if politicians decide to cut funding, if voters balk at millage requests or even if the Charlevoix Downtown Development Authority decides to over-collect on its portion of the school taxes again (see page 7 for an explanation of this) the Charlevoix School District has the needed financial protection.

The school board and superintendent John Sturrock and his staff have been the focus of much criticism in the past. And each time they have had to silence their critics by proving these usually factless claims are fiction by creating fiscally sound budgets, well rounded students and improved facilities.

According to this budget proposal, they have once again proven their critics' claims are imaginary.

The mysterious creatures that roam our imaginations

Roger Knutson
'Ear to the ground'

Our folklore is so filled with monsters of various kinds that it has spawned a specialized field of zoology called cryptozoology which deals with whether any of the monsters actually exist in our present world.

Such monsters get more publicity from less information than any non-spectacular creature can. We all know about the Loch Ness Monster and see on the cable channels frequent speculation about just what it might be, along with all the old and new photographs presuming to show us what some part of the monster looks like on a foggy morning. Sea monsters don't leave tracks, so getting positive evidence of their presence is more difficult, which probably explains why the legends are so persistent.

Various Big Foot, human-like, hairy ape creatures are reported from almost anywhere on earth that there are tracts of trackless forest or glacier. North America has its sasquatch, the Himalayas have the yeti, and all of them have sometimes left tracks. I have seen catalogs that will sell plaster casts of sasquatch footprints, authenticated by a member of the Society for Cryptozoology.

There are, of course, local legends as well, most of them dating back to reports by the first Europeans to visit this area. The Native American legends included giants, great beasts and amphibious serpents. Henry Schoolcraft recorded many Ojibwa legends in the early 1800s. According to Schoolcraft, the Windigo or Weendigo was a cannibal monster, giant or great beast, and the Genabik or Genapeg or Kenabik was an amphibious serpent of legendary size. We could certainly expect that the legends were based on something in the natural world.

When people from Asia first arrived in what is now North America, possibly as much as 25,000 years ago, the animals they faced were quite different from those at present. At that time, and almost until the final retreat of the glaciers about 10,000 years ago, there were five kinds of giant carnivores inhabiting this place that live on only in the fossils found by the paleontologists and the legends of the people who saw them. No doubt a number of the early Native Americans fell prey to the ferocious Short-faced Bear, eight feet from nose to tail, and possibly the American Lion, about the same length, not counting a long tail. There were in addition the Dire Wolf, larger than the Timber Wolf, the Saber tooth with 10 inch teeth and even a kind of American Cheetah, able to run as fast as the present day African variety. Any or all of those creatures could be the Windigo of legend. It was the sort of monster that had really eaten people in the past, and would keep any young child from willfully wandering in the forest, far from home.

The Genabik is harder to identify and the only one for which we apparently have local and recent evidence. As I understand it, there have been reports, now some decades old, of a Little Traverse Bay lake serpent, and even the appearance of some enormous three-toed, slimy tracks on an old wooden pier in Petoskey at about that same time. I do not know if the tracks were photographed at the time of their appearance. A picture would be worth having. Should the tracks ever appear again, with present technology we could collect DNA and find out just what the monster was. Every bay should have its monster.

Are such terrible creatures real? They are as real as extinct animals and as real as our nightmares. The important biological truth is that no creature exists alone. If there is some kind of monster, then there must be a whole population of them, since nothing lives forever and reproduction with continuing survival requires a goodly number, not just a single individual.

DME should clean up its act

Editor:

Most live in Charlevoix and northern Michigan because of the beauty of nature and the supposed clean air, earth and water. Whether one grew up here or transplanted here, people in Northern Michigan are nature lovers.

I am surprised at the very neutral article about the contamination of Lake Charlevoix and the earth nearby from Charlevoix's DME Company. I am surprised that more Charlevoix residents are not appalled by the destruction of our beautiful lakes and earth.

Even more surprising is the fact that the Michigan Department of Environmental Quality will be tasked to clean this up if "DME won't clean up the PCE," as Bob Wagner, environmental manager at Gaylord states.

Why won't DME clean this mess up? Are they young children incapable of cleaning up their own mess?

Letters to the editor

Further, why should MDEQ have to pay for this clean up of a dangerous pollutant?

Will this clean up come from my pocket? Granted, I want it cleaned up, but I wasn't even aware that my backyard (literally) is being contaminated.

My backyard is being contaminated with PCE (tetrachloroethylene). The article in the June 6, 2001 Charlevoix Courier states that the side effects of this pollutant is liver and kidney damage and chronic skin disorders.

Well, gee, I hope that the Charlevoix Hospital will do research on these types of diseases so they will be prepared when these problems arise. However liver and kidney damage are not our biggest concerns according to Bob Wagner, "...PCE degrades into vinyl chloride, a known carcinogen."

Wow! This carcinogen can seep along the beaches. Oh, yeah, my 3-year old and I are on our way to Ferry Beach! Not only is this substance a known health hazard that DME is using, but they are still using it, even though it is a known toxic substance. Look at the irony in that.

I am sure that almost all of Charlevoix residents (and summer residents) stand behind me when I say, "DME clean up your act, now!" We live here because of the pristine beaches, lakes, forests, fields, and streams. DME should not wait until fall of this year to clean this up, but start now, and do not just let it go to the MDEQ to do your dirty work. DME, clean up your act! Now! Rachael Young Charlevoix

Help stop the developers

Citizens who care about our streams, rivers, lakes, clean water and our future need to attend the next meeting of the Stormwater Appeals Board at 9 a.m. on June 22, at the Charlevoix County Annex building.

The Stormwater Appeals Board is in the process of revising The Charlevoix County Stormwater Ordinance. This ordinance is a local law passed to protect our wetlands and waterways.

At this time, the pro-development forces on this board are trying to remove critical language in the ordinance that helps protect our watershed to the benefit of developers.

Greenbelts are critical to the health of our watershed. They keep sedimentation and flooding in check by slowing runoff and floodwaters, stabilize banks, remove nutrients and toxins and minimize erosion. They are essential to the health of our water supply. According to "Preserving Michigan's Wetlands: Options For Local Governments," recently published by the Tip of the Mitt Watershed Council and underwritten by Michigan DEQ and USEPA: "A minimum of 40 feet of greenbelt along a lake shore is a desirable goal."

The pro-development members on this committee are all trying to eliminate requirements to preserve natural greenbelts and protect our lakes and streams.

The proposed revisions would eliminate language discouraging removal of natural vegetation and tree roots within 25 feet of regulated wetlands and within 50 feet of ordinary high water of lakes and streams and encouraging buffer areas greater than those minimums.

Only one voice, JoAnne Beemon, Charlevoix County Drain Commissioner, is speaking out in defense of the environment and our water supply. She is the only person on this board trying to maintain the ordinance protection of our greenbelts and the health of our watersheds.

This ordinance was designed to legally protect our watershed. If we do not mobilize and stop the gutting of this important protection, there will be nothing to stop more rapid destructive development in Charlevoix County and the cumulative impacts on our environment. The last remaining wetlands and the quality of our watershed will have no protection from the "never enough" developers!

Please come to the Charlevoix County Annex Building on June 22 and let this board know, we will not allow developers to gut our watershed protection laws.

BUDGET

"We can run on fund equity for a bit if the state cuts programs, it buys us time," Sturock said. "If I can put money away and save for a rainy day, I'm going to do that; our purpose is to provide the best for the kids."

However, not all districts are so fortunate. He said that many districts have to dip into their fund balance to be able to present to the state the required balanced budget, such as Gaylord. Gaylord's 2001-2002 budget is the first in three years to be balanced (revenues equal expenditures) without dipping into their fund equity account.

"We are proposing a balanced budget without dipping into the fund equity account. In fact, we are adding to it," Sturock said.

The budget projects that in the 2001-2002 school year the fund balance will rise $2,040, which equals a total fund balance of $3,704,032.

The increase in the fund balance is accounted for in the proposed budget for 2001-2002, which projects revenues to reach $11,728,680 and expenditures to be $2,040 less at $11,726,640.

The greatest revenue generator for a school district is their student body. As a result of the Michigan State Aid Act, in the 2001-2002 school year, the district will receive $300 more per student. For each student enrolled in the Charlevoix district, the school will receive $7,687.

Although enrollment has steadily increased over the past three years Boss said the budget conservatively projects the count will fall 9 students short of last year, to 1,412. The state will give the district $10,854,044 total, an increase of $357,117 over last year. State funding accounts for 49.2 percent of the districts revenue.

The next largest revenue generator is from local tax dollars. The non-homestead and commercial tax brings in 46.98 percent of the district's revenue. Voters recently voted not to roll back the Headlee Amendment which would have brought an additional $30,000 to the district from this, non-homestead and commercial source.

The third largest funding source is from the vocational education millage, levied by the Charlevoix and Emmet Counties Intermediate School District (Char-Em ISD). Vocational education dollars that come in from Char-Em make up 2.4 percent of the district's total revenue.

Other smaller sources of district income include Title One, a federal source, and the Title Nine Native American Grant. Title One accounts for .95 percent of the district's income and Title Nine accounts for .47 percent.

Once the dollars flow in, 47.07 percent will be allocated to basic programs. Sturock explained basic programs as: elementary, middle and high school classrooms and teachers, but not counselors or special education instructors.

The counselors and nurses account for 4.43 percent of the expense budget and vocational education and special education programs absorb 12.2 percent, the second highest chunk of the budget.

The third highest percentage of funds goes out to the support staff that maintains the buildings, the costs associated with maintenance and to pay for utilities at the three facilities. Operation and maintenance make up 9.94 percent of the total expense budget.

Costs associated with school administrators; Richard Swenor, Keith Haske and Gary Grundman are 5.83 percent of the districts cost.

Instructional staff which includes librarians and technology specialists are a 5.75 percent piece of the expenditure pie.

All of these people may be at school, but for the kids to get there, the district allocates 5.05 percent to buses or pupil transportation.

Those people you talk to at central office, members of the board of education and legal experts representing the district are all considered, "general administration." The budget allocates 3.22 percent of its income to fund general administration.

Community, adult education makes up 2.28 percent of the almost $12 million expense budget.

Once they are at school, many kids join athletic teams and eat lunch at school. In order to provide these two services the school has to both supplement the food service and pay for coaches, allocating 2.43 percent of their budget to do so.

Then there are the business people, like Boss, those who do payroll and those who deal with the district's insurance. The business people make up 1.81 percent of the cost in the 2001-2002 proposed budget.

Sturock explained that in taking a close look at a school district's budget you get a sense of what a business school systems really are and the of threat state cuts.

"We have to take what the state gives us. If we start losing dollars, we are a people business. If cuts have to be made, that means we may have to cut programs," he said.

DDA told to pay back $85,000 to school district

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

Charlevoix's Downtown Development Authority (DDA) over-collected funds they captured from the Charlevoix School District in 1994 and 1999 and were ordered by the state to pay the district back.

City treasurer Rick Brandi explained that since 1984, when the DDA was established, a portion of the funds generated from the school district's taxable value has been exempted from going to the school and has been "captured" by the DDA.

In January of 2001, the DDA was informed by the Michigan Department of Treasury of an audit that found they had over-captured $85,000 in 1994 and 1999. In 1999 alone the DDA captured $231,096 total.

An example to help understand this form of financing is a subtraction equation. If in the initial year the taxable value of a given area was $1 million and in the second year the value was $1,250,000 the capture value is the difference or $250,000. A given area is the portion of the school district that the DDA impacts.

The DDA must outline all projects they plan to use the captured funds for in paperwork submitted annually to the Michigan Department of Treasury.

"The DDA is reinvesting in infrastructure in the district. A viable downtown will help them (the schools) too. It's money that wouldn't have been available without the improvements made by the DDA," Brandi said.

He added that in 2000 the taxable value of the area outlined in the DDA's plan was $13,112,401 and of those funds collected on that value, the DDA captured $597,394 of school tax money.

The treasury department's auditing specialist Sharon Erwine said in 1994, when Proposal A was passed, tax increment financing changed and tax increment financing authorities (TIFAs), like the local DDA, were limited to capturing only certain amounts.

Erwine said she has conducted over 200 audits and that the $85,000 return is minor.

Superintendent of Charlevoix Public Schools John Sturock said that in 1984 when the capture was initially implemented, it hurt the district but the burden was lifted when Proposal A was passed.

"I don't think it negatively impacts us," he said.

In the school districts amended budget for 2000-2001 the $85,000 sum is recorded in the adjusted revenue section.

Sheriff offers some tips for staying safe on the water

As our 2001 summer season gets underway, Charlevoix County Sheriff George T. Lasater reminds citizens to use safety while enjoying the waterways.

Unfortunately, while we engage in boating, fishing, scuba diving, swimming and other recreational activities, accidents do occur.

Boating accidents are a major concern to Lasater. Motorboats and personal watercraft (jet skis) are associated with the most injuries.

Injuries sustained on personal watercraft are usually serious, including lacerations, broken bones and head and back injuries.

Safety tips include:

- Life jackets — must be "readily accessible" and U.S. Coast Guard approved.

- Communication equipment — have a marine radio or cellular telephone for emergencies.

- Weather condition — watch or listen to local weather broadcasts, stop boating during a storm.

- Equipment check — make sure all required navigation lights function properly, check fuel oil levels and your fire extinguishers.

- Education — attend a six-hour boaters safety course to learn emergency procedures, laws, safety, navigation rules, accident reporting and equipment requirements.

- Float plan — tell someone about your boating plans each time you go out (trip itinerary).

Attendance at Boaters Safety Class is an excellent way to learn or review these basic points. Lasater encourages all interested individuals to contact Marine Deputy David Beyer at (231) 547-4461 ext. 320 for class scheduling information.

Two car crash leaves drivers with minor injuries June 14

The Charlevoix County Sheriff's Office investigated a two car personal injury crash on M-66 near Stover Creek in Charlevoix Township at approximately 2:45 p.m. June 14.

Kristiana M. Way, 36, of Charlevoix was traveling west on M-66 in a 2001 PT Cruiser, when she stopped to make a left turn and was struck from behind by Kiel Tilley, 17, of Charlevoix driving a 1994 Buick.

Tilley's Buick was totaled.

He advised he was adjusting the air conditioning in his vehicle and failed to observe the Way vehicle coming to a stop.

All drivers and occupants suffered minor injuries and refused ambulance transport, seeking their own treatment.

The Sheriff's office was assisted at the scene by the Charlevoix City Police and the Charlevoix City Ambulance.

The crash remains under investigation.

Group appeals plan to change county districts

Plus, he added the law used to make the redistricting does not allow the splits in the currently adopted plan.

"The statute states you should not split cities," he said.

However, Chase maintains the adopted plan does meet the standards of the law.

"The law was looked at numerous times. I can't say there isn't a better plan out there, but three of us couldn't find it," she said.

The issue of county commission districts is revisited every 10 years when the census population count is released. An apportionment committee is created that must come up with a county plan that basically creates county commission districts with as close to an equal population as possible.

Due to changes in Charlevoix County's population in the past 10 years, the committee voted for a new district plan.

Under the adopted plan, the county would be split up into six districts, each with its own commissioner, as it currently has. However, population changes in the county caused changes in the district boundaries.

The most notable changes were to Charlevoix Township, the city of Charlevoix and Wilson Township. In Charlevoix Township and the first ward of the city, people living on the north side of the Pine River Channel are in one county commission district, while people living on the south side of the channel are in another. In Wilson Township, the split uses Boyne City-East Jordan Road as its marker.

County prosecutor and apportionment committee member Kur said the adopted plan is the most user friendly of the plans the committee looked at because the splits are based on geographic boundaries.

"I looked at natural geographic boundaries. The dividing line at the channel made the most logical sense to me," she said. "We had to split somewhere. I thought I was following the law; I still think that."

But, the group appealing the adopted plan has some support.

Based on the testimony of County Commissioner Smith — who is also named on the appeal — at their meetings, the city of Charlevoix recently voted to give the group $500 to pay for some of the court costs associated with the appeal and Wilson Township has passed a resolution supporting the appeal.

Charlevoix Mayor Alvin "Butch" Russell said council does not like the district split in the first ward, even though he thinks it is a benefit to the city.

"When it first came out, I didn't have a problem with two representatives from the city," he said.

Kur said she was disappointed by these actions.

"It is unfortunate that the two governmental units, meaning the Charlevoix City Council and Wilson Township, that have taken sides on this issue didn't get the other side of the story before they took a position," she said.

Charlevoix city clerk, Elizabeth Gooch, even wrote a letter in opposition to the adopted plan. Her main contention was that it would create voter confusion, elections will run at a higher cost to the city due to additional staff and a voting machine and special attention must be made to the distribution of ballots.

However, after writing the letter, Gooch had a conversation with county clerk and apportionment committee member Brannon and has changed part of her opinion.

She learned that her fears that it would cost more and be more of a burden were taken care of by county.

"I really wouldn't say I am in opposition to it, but I can understand the concern....." she said. "I'd still really like to see the city of Charlevoix maintained under one district."

But, the letter Gooch wrote has been submitted as an exhibit in the appeal.

"It (the letter) is still true except for the cost part. I don't feel so strongly against it," she said.

A response to the appeal is being prepared by Kur. The deadline for this response is July 5.

HEALTH

Some safety tips for a day at the beach

Roderic Tinney, M.D.

'Your health'

We are so fortunate in this area that past civic minded leaders spared much of our lakefront from private development so that it could be enjoyed by all.

The beach in the summer is a great place for family fun. Children can rendezvous with old friends and make new acquaintances.

Sand, rocks and other beach treasures can spur creativity better than even the biggest box of crayons. The water can cool the temper of even the hottest irritable child (or parent). Busy families just seem to slow down and have fun together at the beach.

But, the beach may be the source of a parent's greatest fear — the loss or injury of a child.

Drowning and near drowning are leading causes of death and injury in children. In fact, especially in the warmer states, drowning is the leading cause of death in some age groups.

Drowning is defined as a suffocation death occurring within 24 hours of submersion in water. Near drowning victims survive greater than 24 hours, but mortality is high and at least one third of survivors will suffer significant neurological injury.

Prevention is crucial, drowning and near drowning should be nearly 100 percent preventable. There are a number of recommendations made by the Academy of Pediatrics along with other groups such as the Red Cross to prevent drowning and near drowning.

• Take your family to designated swimming areas preferably where there is a trained lifeguard. A lifeguard will not only be trained in rescue but may help prevent injury by stopping dangerous activities before someone gets hurt.

• Bring your cell phone to the beach. If you really are one of those people who don't have a cell phone, locate the nearest public phone, an emergency phone, before you need it. If there is not such a phone available contact the city or township responsible for the beach to get one installed.

• Whenever your infant or toddler is around water he/she should be within an arms length providing "touch supervision" at all times.

• While infant and toddler aquatic programs can be fun they have never been shown to keep children safer and do carry some risk, especially for young infants. The American Academy of Pediatrics does not believe, "children are developmentally ready for swimming lessons until after their fourth birthday." Swimming lessons are great for older children, but never assume your child is down proof.

• Other risks for infants swimming include getting cold or hypothermia and swallowing excessive water leading to possible water intoxication or acquiring intestinal infection.

• Even if there is a lifeguard present, constantly watch (or better yet, get in the water and play with) your children. If there is a group of adults be sure at least one is the designated watchman and please save the alcoholic beverages to drink at home after the kids are in bed.

• Closely supervise children jumping from rafts or docks and keep the younger children separated from the older, larger ones.

• Use a buddy system with older children to supplement your adult supervision. Be firm when it comes to any dangerous activity near water. Set the limits when you arrive and stick to them.

• Put all non-swimmers in a United States Coast Guard approved brightly colored life jacket whenever they are around water. Of course, everyone should wear a life jacket when boating.

• Take a basic life support course (CPR) with your older children. It's a fun family activity and may prove to be invaluable to you and your child.

Have a safe, fun-filled summer with your children at the beach, remember, winter will too soon come and our children grown.

Volunteers needed at the hospital

For the past three years, Liz Meadows has donated her time and energy to the Print Shop at Charlevoix Area Hospital.

She is involved in the production of forms and requisitions for various hospital departments. During the past year, Liz logged 385 hours in the Print Shop. These are hours that she gave selflessly; there was no monetary compensation for her time.

Liz joins 100-plus volunteers who comprise Charlevoix Area Hospital's volunteer program. These individuals give their time freely, and perform a great service to the hospital.

"Liz can be proud of her achievements," said Rebecca Parker, Volunteer Coordinator at Charlevoix Area Hospital. "Her dedication and commitment provide a service of immeasurable value to our hospital and the community which it serves."

It doesn't take a lot of time or effort to become a volunteer. One hour each week can be a tremendous help. The schedules are flexible, and training is minimal. Each volunteer is required to go through an initial orientation program along with annual education days. A TB test is given annually to insure that volunteers are in good health.

Charlevoix Area Hospital continues to seek volunteers who have the willingness to help out. There are many areas that need assistance. The Print Shop produces approximately 90 percent of all forms used in the hospital. This is a wonderful resource for cost reduction. Some of the tasks involved in the Print Shop are collating, binding, cutting, shredding and printing.

The Gift Shop is operated completely by volunteers. Volunteers stock and maintain the shop and are responsible for the shop's availability to patients and staff.

The Information Desk is where visitors and family members of patients look for assistance in finding their loved one's room or where outpatients go to find out directions to a department for a test. This is where a kind volunteer lends a hand and helps them get to where they are going.

Volunteers often lift patients' spirits when delivering flowers, mail, books and meals to the patients in the hospital.

There are a variety of clerical tasks available for volunteers as well. Clerical needs include filing, mail processing and chart assembly. Several departments often can use receptionists to ease the workload.

There are also opportunities for volunteers to help by doing "At Home Projects" out of their own homes. If this fits your schedule, you may find that you'd enjoy some volunteer hours of sewing, knitting, or special projects.

If you are interested in volunteering your time to Charlevoix Area Hospital, please contact Rebecca Parker at 547-8651.

Low trout catch causes some concerns about fish

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

Perhaps the theme at Charlevoix's 2001 Trout Tournament, that took place over the weekend of June 8-10, was "water, water everywhere and not a trout to anywhere."

The trout is Michigan's state fish, but according to area anglers who cast a line at this year's tournament it seemed like the lake trout was an endangered species.

"I fished harder than I had ever fished before and I caught the fewest fish I have ever caught. I never expected the fishing to be that poor," Dave Juilleret, member of the Lake Charlevoix Area Trout Tournament L.L.C., the group in charge of organizing the event, said.

Fishermen made excuses for the abnormally low number of bites, including everything from weather conditions to the commercial fishing industry.

But, Tom Rozich, Fisheries Supervisor for the Department of Natural Resources (DNR), said there should have been plenty of trout in Lake Charlevoix.

He said that the DNR hasn't changed anything in terms of plantings and that fishing for both brown and lake trout was great in 1999 and at the 2000 tournament the fishing was wonderful.

But Juilleret said that resident and visitor anglers only caught five brown trout of legal limit total this year.

"During a decent year you'll catch five browns in six hours of fishing," he added.

In both 1999 and 2000 the DNR planted 25,000 "advanced" brown trout in Lake Charlevoix that averaged 8 inches in length.

They also planted 100,000 lake trout in both 1999 and 2000 at an average length of 6-7 inches.

"We planted them in deep water too, to avoid walleye predators. I'm at a loss. I think the fish are surviving, whether they swam out to Lake Michigan or just weren't biting, I don't know," Rozich said.

Rozich explained some days the fish are biting and then there are the days, like trout tournament anglers felt, when "you wouldn't think there is a darn fish down there."

At the end of the weekend there were four salmon on the board that Juilleret said were all caught near Seven Mile Point by the same boat.

He added that the three top lake trout caught weren't brought in easily, they had to jig them up with smelt.

Trout tournament brings many visitors to Charlevoix and some are concerned that those who left after the first day with no bites may not be back to try their luck next year.

Juilleret said he did hear some talk from fellow fishermen about not returning for another try but he also said that most of those who fished at the tournament walked away with a prize even if they didn't bring home a fish.

Even if the tournament becomes a local tournament, Juilleret says they only need 500 people fishing to keep their commitments and to keep it alive.

As for the rest of the summer's fishing, Rozich said, "Right now there is no concrete answer. I will meet with those people (members of the trout tournament committee) and reevaluate our stocking effort."

Junior golf scholarship winners announced

Junior golfers in the Charlevoix area kicked off their summer as scholarship winners were announced during the orientation and registration week that saw another large turnout.

With 160 already registered for the program, predictions are that in the next couple of weeks the total will again top 200.

During the orientation sessions, the scholarship winners, who will be attending a week of golf camp at Ferris State University, were introduced.

They are: Gavin Mahoney, Kendra Spencer, J.D. Thomason, Adam Wager, Kelsey Dulancy and Lor Powers. Criteria for their selection included: golf potential, citizenship, dedication and recommendations from teachers.

In the six years of the Charlevoix County Junior Golf Program, over 30 youngsters have attended the prestigious camp.

Initial enrollment for the summer instructional program took place last week and additional golfers have until June 28 to register.

The program offers lessons and actual playing times through the combined cooperation of local courses.

Healthcare Comes Home

"Mom loves her independent life, but she needs some regular assistance. We tried to be with her every day, but our work schedules and the kids' activities made that almost impossible. I worried and felt guilty just about all of the time.

Then we learned that VitalCare could help. Mom went along with the idea of having a home health aide come over three days a week to help her with laundry and light housekeeping. I stopped by the other day, and the two of them were having a great time over lunch. I am so pleased; Mom has her independence, and I have peace of mind."

Search on for volleyball coach, athletic director

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

For the past two years Carolyn Loper has ate, drank and slept Charlevoix High School girls' volleyball. But she recently decided the position was too much.

On June 4, former Charlevoix High School athletic director and assistant principal Keith Haske received a letter of resignation from Loper. In the letter she stated she could no longer continue coaching because she is facing a possible job relocation and because of the long hours she is working that are keeping her away from home.

"This would allow one of the many qualified faculty members to take over the program I fought diligently to rebuild the last two years," she stated.

Haske said that in his 17 years of experience he has found it is more difficult for coaches like Loper, who aren't part of the school staff, to build athletic programs.

However, rather than abandoning her love for both teaching and volleyball, Loper has requested that whoever is hired to fill her position at the high school consider appointing her to head up the middle school program.

She cited three benefits to the middle school position that make it well-suited to her. Those listed include: a shorter season, fewer away games and her love for the age group.

"I have many wonderful ideas that would help bring their volleyball program up to speed with the surrounding schools. This of course is also contingent upon my employment remaining in Charlevoix," she stated. "It's been a roller coaster ride with many ups and many downs but overall it was a wonderful experience."

At the June 12 school board meeting the board accepted her resignation. However, in order to fill Loper's vacancy the district needs to appoint someone to the position of high school assistant principal/athletic director, the spot left open recently when Haske was named the new principal at the middle school.

The opening for an athletic director/assistant principal was posted on June 12.

Doctor brings his family business to Charlevoix

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

Dr. Rick Randall is keeping the family business alive and branching it out to northern Michigan.

His clinic, Randall Chiropractic Clinic located at 1302 Bridge Street in Charlevoix, is just the latest addition to the chiropractic medicine his family has been offering since the 1950s.

The first Randall Chiropractic Clinic was opened by his father in 1954 in Flint. The elder Randall was soon followed by his daughter and his two sons, one of which is Rick Randall.

"I knew I wanted to get into the health care field. I looked at dental school and medicine. But, the greatest influence was my father," Randall said. After deciding on chiropractic medicine, Randall graduated from a national chiropractic school in Illinois and has been working with a variety of patients for the past 20 years at his father's practice in Flint.

"I like helping people. It is really rewarding when you work with people and with your hands you can make a difference for them," he said.

Randall recently moved to northern Michigan and, after spending some time working in real estate, decided he wanted to open his own clinic. He decided on Charlevoix because it is a "beautiful and friendly place to be and Charlevoix needed another chiropractor."

To further make this a family business, Randall's wife, Audra, also works at the clinic. She has a degree in interior design from Michigan State University, but has acquired knowledge and experience in the field of nutrition while working in the Flint office for the past seven years.

Since the original clinic in Flint was well established before he joined on, Randall said many of the patients were older, thus giving him the chance to perfect his skills on people 60 and over.

But, he said, chiropractic medicine works for people of all ages. Randall said he has worked on patients who were from 3 days old to 94 years old.

Randall emphasizes the health of your back in his treatments. Just like a dentist helps keep your teeth healthy, Randall said he helps keep the spine in good working order.

He added this is of particular benefit to the many athletes in the Charlevoix area.

"Chiropractic and athletics go hand-in-hand," he said. By having a healthy spine, Randall said athletes will find they will pull less muscle, resulting in less injuries.

Randall Chiropractic Clinic opened March 21, 2001. Its hours of operation are currently 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. and 2:30 to 6:30 p.m. Monday through Friday and 10 a.m. to 12 p.m. on Saturday. Starting July 2, the office will be open from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. and 2:30 to 6:30 p.m. on Monday, 1 p.m. to 6:30 p.m. on Tuesday, 8 a.m. to 1 p.m. and 2:30 to 6:30 p.m. on Wednesday, 8 a.m. to 1 p.m. on Thursday, 8 a.m. to 1 p.m. and 2:30 to 5:30 p.m. on Friday and 10 a.m. to 12 p.m. on Saturday.

For more information call (231) 237-0665.

Dr. Rick Randall uses his skills to help keep his wife, Audra's, back in perfect working order. He is hoping to help Charlevoix residents with his techniques. (Photo by Jeremy McBain)

The third bridge over the Pine River Channel

By DAVID L. MILES
Charlevoix Historical Society

With steadily increasing water traffic, bridge number three became like today's, Charlevoix's focal point, a center of magnetic attraction to which most of its activity was at one time or another drawn.

People clustered daily to watch the parade of vessels small to magnificent that came and went from Round Lake. The wooden gates were suspended right at the edge of the drop-off, so when they were down spectators simply leaned their arms on them and placed their toes smack at the rim of the abyss. Should it ever happen that a gate might give away (it reportedly never happened), over they would go into the drink with no one but themselves to blame for getting soaked. This was the era before rules and restrictions, when people took their own risks and paid the consequences for doing so.

In April of 1882, the Charlevoix Sentinel reported that "About noon Friday a cloud of dust appeared over the hill, and soon two horsemen appeared over the bridge, followed by J. Milo Eaton's cavalcade of Texan horses and mules — all running loose and following the two horses and riders. Bringing up the rear came A. J. Cameron and an assistant in Mexican saddles. The animals, nearly 50 in number, went through town on a gallop, and it was a novel sight indeed."

Two months later, "A 'prairie schooner' (Conestoga wagon) of the old-fashioned sort, drawn by one mule and a horse, passed through town Tuesday. It came all the way from North Carolina, and its owner located in Hayes (township)." These were only two of the novel sights the bridge witnessed in its short existence.

By 1885, the traffic going through the channel had reached astonishing proportions. In May alone of that year, brigetender James Martin reported he had swung the bridge a mind-boggling total of 717 times. This statistic alone demonstrates the crucial role Charlevoix now played in the economic functioning and well-being of the Lake Charlevoix basin and surrounding lands. A mere 20 years before, it had been a hard-scrabble little village whose number of buildings could be counted on two hands, its inhabitants eking out a hand-to-mouth existence. Docks, dredged channels, piers and bridges had helped transform it beyond recognition.

In 1891, police officer James Martin was off and Powell Mudge on as brigetender, for 86 cents a day. Apparently he received less than Martin because he didn't hold down two municipal jobs.

By 1900, it was becoming too apparent that a new bridge was going to be needed soon. "The condition of the center foundation of the old bridge is very precarious" from rust and rot, reported the Sentinel, "an old structure (yet only 20-odd years old) which, at the most, cannot be used more than eight years longer." It could be patched up for $3,000. But the War Department, which oversaw crucial waterways, emphasized that vessels now plying the Great Lakes had become bigger, and were destined to become larger still. If Charlevoix wanted to take advantage of this fact it would have to deepen the channel from twelve to twenty feet. But for that to happen, since deeper, bigger ships needed a wider draw, the width at the bridge had to be increased by 20 feet. The entire package would cost $20,000. The proposal was put to the voters. Willard Smith said in the Sentinel that "We are of the opinion that the latter plan will be in the end the wiser one." Like so much of what he enthused about and recommended, it was right on the mark. The voters agreed and the bond proposal accepted. They would receive "a broad, modern bridge, with stone center pier and approach abutments."

The life of the third bridge BRIDGE

So in February of 1901, the wreckers came in, and by early March "The old iron bridge, which we once thought was the only thing on the earth (of its kind), is practically all taken down and is piled up in chunks on the revetment." It was quite an emotional time for the town, since the bridge of which the people had been so proud was, at the time of its construction, a state of the art work of art. South Arm township bought it for $1,200, and hauled the pieces by scow down Lake Charlevoix where they were reassembled to serve as a major part of the causeway across the tip of the lake's south arm into downtown East Jordan. There it remained until the 1920s when a new causeway was constructed, so it was removed and towed back north a few miles where it was installed as the entry bridge to Holy Island a few miles south of Ironton.

Back to the cable-guided scows again went the town for the ferrying of everything and everybody for the few months required to put our fourth bridge into place. And now was about to begin the remarkable career of the man who devoted his entire adult life to the care and well-being of his bridge, learning his craft beginning in 1899 during the last years of old #3, manning the scows in 1901, and now about to take over for the next 31 years.

His name was Elmer Johnson, and his is a wonderful story.

Ship visits town

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

For the first time in about 50 years, a Great Lakes cruise ship used Charlevoix as one of its destination points June 21.

The Greek-flagged ship, Arcadia, arrived early in the morning on June 21, mooring just off the pier near Michigan Beach. Passengers on the ship were ferried to a dock in Charlevoix's municipal marina by the boat Bay Pride, out of Petoskey. After being taken back to the ship around 11 p.m., the Arcadia departed around 4 a.m. June 22.

"It went great. I know a lot of passengers ate on shore and a lot went shopping," Kris Rasmussen, Charlevoix downtown coordinator said.

Rasmussen said the ship's passengers were offered a variety in entertainment when they got to shore. Passengers were offered a tour of the city, there was a band

The horizon off of Michigan Beach in Charlevoix contained a sight not seen in about 50 years, a passenger cruise ship. The ship, Arcadia, anchored just off the pier near the beach on the morning of June 21. As the sun went down that evening, the ships lights made an impressive reflection on the water. Earlier that day, passengers on the ship were ferried to the mainland where they were greeted by Charlevoix harbor master Hal Evans (above). (Photos by Jeremy McBain)

Business-owner, legend dies June 14

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

On June 14, local legend and Townhouse Bar owner Helen Weislik, 76, died.

Helen was born Oct. 7, 1924 in Hamtramck, where she was raised by her parents, Peter and Catherine Bielecki.

When she was 19, she met and married Sylvester Weislik and in 1962, 19 years after they married, the pair headed north, to Charlevoix. Together Helen and Sylvester owned and operated the Townhouse Bar on Bridge Street.

Sylvester died in 1982 leaving Helen to run things on her own. According to her son Ron, that's exactly what she did.

"There was no doubt the Townhouse was a special place because of Helen."

Bruce Weislik,
from a speech about his mother, Helen Weislik

"Maybe she wanted to prove she could do it by herself. It's a tough business. It's not for the meek," he said.

Anyone who knew Helen could safely say "meek" isn't an adjective that accurately described her. In Ron's 31 years of helping out at the family business, Helen fired him

"many times." It was also common to see uneven tempered clientele expelled from the premises by Helen herself.

Helen's famous phrase, "Don't youse guys got no homes to go to," can be echoed by Charlevoix residents and visitors who tested her patience.

When you were at Helen's you played by her rules. Her work ethic demanding respect. She put in 70 hour weeks on a regular basis and molded herself the reputation of a tough lady who served stiff cocktails.

But, she had a sense of humor. Many Townhouse patrons fondly recall the 1997 Roast and Toast in honor of Helen. At the event everyone shared their best Helen stories and the profits went to support local schools.

Ron said that she enjoyed everything, but her work schedule was pretty packed, so she didn't have much time for hobbies.

But, when she wasn't working, she knew how to relax.

Development's troubles make it all wet

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

Heavy spring rains made "The Whippoorwill," a 26-acre north side development, look marshy, but real estate agent Greg Bryan of ReMax said claims that the site is a regulated wetland simply aren't true.

"There is a high water table there, but that does not make it a wetland. You can be walking in water up to your knees but that doesn't mean it is a designated wetland," he said.

The Whippoorwill sits on 26 acres of land bordering both Waller and Old Orchard roads. Despite the high water table, 14 of the 27 lots included in phase one of the development have been sold.

"The north side of town is a desirable place to live. The Whippoorwill is no less desirable than North Pointe Woods or the Country Club," he said.

Some looking to invest in property at the Whippoorwill have been told that they can't have basements because of the water table issue.

A drainage system has been developed by Performance Engineers Inc., of Charlevoix, including drainage ditches that run along Old Orchard and a retention pond situated in the center of the development.

The developers, Sue Erber and Ron Weislik also ran into a culvert complication. A culvert that runs across Old Orchard Road was lifted by frost. Last year, when the road was re-paved, the culvert wasn't lowered to its proper position.

As Bryan pointed out, water doesn't run up and he claims that because of the lifted culvert, more of the spring rain settled on-site than would have, had the culvert been properly positioned.

In early June, Manthei Development of Charlevoix was back on-site — they tore the road out, and with the permission of the township, lowered the culvert 12 inches and re-paved the road.

Weislik and Bryan both said that after the culvert was lowered, water levels in the detention pond went down three feet.

Bryan said that all of the engineering has resolved the water issue and that, "There is no doubt it is wet but it will be dry."

It may have seemed like a developers nightmare, but Weislik said better now than later.

"We're fortunate it happened now, that way the problem could be resolved before too many homes were under construction," he said.

This northside development has been having a hard time with flooding. But, the developers feel they are getting it under control. (Photo by Julie Musilek)

Other than the surface water issue, the high water table also requires the site to be serviced by sewer. The Whippoorwill is tapped into the city's system.

Another 27 homes are planned to be built in phase two of the project which Weislik said will begin after lots in phase one are sold.

Fourth of July events in area

The Fourth of July will be celebrated throughout Charlevoix County next week.

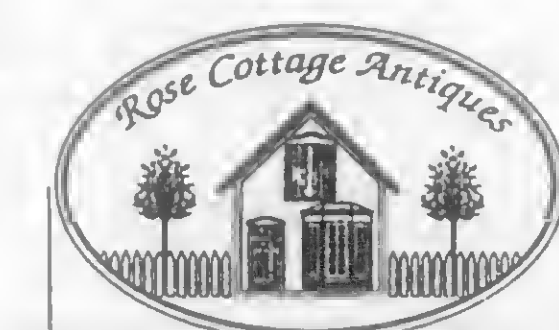

The following events are scheduled to coincide with this summer holiday.

• There will be a parade in downtown Charlevoix starting at 10 a.m. on July 4, from Charlevoix High School to East Park in downtown Charlevoix.

• Beaver Island will be celebrating our nation's birth with fireworks and a parade. The parade starts at 2:30 p.m. in the downtown area of St. James, in addition to a Kid's Carnival. Fireworks can be seen over the harbor at dusk.

• Horton Bay will have its annual Fourth of July parade. This year's parade theme will be the Horton News Network and "all the news that is fit to parade." Parade organizers say, "Neither hail, nor sleet, nor pestilence, nor famine, nor electrical disturbance, nor brownout, nor blackout, nor mudslinging, not a lack of newsworthy stories, will prevent this newsworthy parade from fixing your news fix." The Horton Bay parade starts at 1 p.m.

OPINIONS

What do you think about the festival?

The results are in from last month's "What do you think?" question.

The question was, "Where do you think a new industrial park should be placed in Charlevoix?" Apparently the readers could care less about where an industrial park is placed, because we did not receive any responses.

Therefore, we will move on to this month's "What do you think?" question.

With Venetian Festival looming on Charlevoix's horizon, we have heard many people around town discussing this summertime event. Some people have said the week-long celebration is just too much, while others felt it was just right. People have discussed the location of some of the events, some saying they should not be in the downtown area, while others say they should. And traffic is always an attention getting topic.

We have even heard people sharing their memories about the festival, good and bad.

This festival impacts just about every life in Charlevoix and it seems ev-

WHAT DO YOU THINK?

Everyone has an opinion on the event.

Therefore, this month's question is: "What do you think about the Charlevoix Venetian Festival?" This can be answered several different ways. Examples including telling us what you would change about the festival or share your memories of past festivals.

We invite you to share your thoughts. Although, do not make any personal attacks in it. Personal attacks will be edited out and we may not even publish the letter. Also keep it under 250 words and sign your name to it.

Send your responses to the Charlevoix Courier at P.O. Box 117, Charlevoix, MI 49720; e-mail them to charlevoixcourier@charlevoixcourier.com; or drop them off at our office located at 112 Mason Street in downtown Charlevoix.

The responses will be published in the July 25 edition of the Charlevoix Courier.

Global warming can be proven with Charlevoix

Edith Gilbert

'Behind the news'

Nobody — not from the University of Michigan, nor the Bush administration, nor the European Union in favor of the Kyoto treaty — nobody has checked with any of us in Charlevoix as to our opinion on the threat of global warming.

This is indeed an unfortunate omission.

In answering the question, "Is there or isn't there global warming?" here are indisputable facts, as I recall them.

In the good old days, almost all the summer people had fireplaces and cords of wood were delivered as soon as families arrived late in June. These wood burning fires were lit pretty frequently during the entire season. When visitors came north from, say, southern California or Georgia, they were reminded to bring sweaters and rain gear. In August we could always count on what was known as a "three day blow."

That's when we headed to Petoskey to do serious Christmas shopping on Lake Street.

For a number of years now we have not lit the grate fire once, all summer! Cords of wood lie unused. Nor have we had a good three day blow. Sweaters lie folded on our shelves and rain gear hangs in our closets. Instead, Sears is selling more air-conditioners. Gone are the chilly evenings with a game of bridge, now we can count on balmy bonfires on the beach and symphonies on the green.

"And what about our winters," puzzled scientists may ask?

Let me tell you! Old timers described snow reaching up to the second story windows. They told of strong armed men who shoveled snow that created a tunnel five foot high from the front door to the sidewalk!

As for me, I recall everyone having a long steel pole attached to their car, topped with a little yellow flag. I think they gave them out at the gas station or sold them in the hardware store. The object being that one could see the little yellow flag coming around the corner, long before one could see the car appearing from behind the mountains of snow piled up on the streets.

Gone are the little yellow flags along with mountains of snow. In fact, the local ski areas were hurting badly for several winters because of the lack of snow. This change has been keeping more and more people

"up north" for longer periods during the winter.

"Winters aren't so bad up north anymore," we are told. Instead the two favorite get-away-months now are November and April, during what is called the "mud" season.

There's no doubt that old timers agree our climate up north is changing. If it's warmer here, that also means it's a lot warmer down south during the summer, which is too bad. What if this trend continues? Will we eventually be growing palm trees here by Round Lake instead of pines?

We've been told that the United States contributes 25 percent of the emissions to the earth's gradual global warming and that this is the most formidable threat to our world's environment. Chicago has already taken the lead to create a greener metropolis by turning to renewable sources such as wind and solar power and with the warming trend I describe in Charlevoix, there's no reason for more scientific studies.

The warming trend is for real!

Response to letters

Editor:

In regard to the May 16 letter by John Yaroch, I would like to say to him thank you so much for offering from your south side position, to place a large marina on the north side in an entirely residential neighborhood near Depot Beach. I guess I could quote nearly every word you said and it would perfectly fit Ferry Beach except that Ferry Beach has more of everything than Depot Beach, including commercial development. OK, so back at you Mr.

Yaroch.

In regard to the May 23 letter by John Winn, that was nice, measured, organized, full of statistics...about nothing...but very well written and organized. OK, lets dissect it: It would appear that there is at least one serious problem with attempting to increase boat slips inside the bridge and that is the bridge. Mr. Winn, your stats on the bridge and your comment on the bridge tenders in other places using some sort of communication technology to set up boats entering/leaving certainly has merit...big time! However, your comments on the number of boat slips had by lots of other places falls into a somewhat less important category since none of those places is anything like Charlevoix.

Second problem: The town fathers or somebody has some money and it's burning a hole in their pocket, some extra tax money, some grant money, some matching funds, who cares, it's money and someone or several someones want to hire and pay "consultants" to tell us how we should be doing things. Allow me to suggest that when those consultants live on Round Lake (as do we, like you, Mr. Winn) then they can come and suggest lots and lots of docks and floats and all sorts of stuff and we both listen.

All right, two problems, the bridge doesn't need to open any more than necessary and Mr. Winn has a technical solution for that. The city fathers have money they want to spend. 1) Fix up/replace the bathrooms, showers, whatever they are in the park so that there is a set for day trippers and a space for people who rent a space at the dock. 2) Make the docks floating, add a few if possible. 3) Fix and increase the size and ability of both pump out and shopper's docks...so that people can actually step off their boat and buy something in downtown Charlevoix, that is the reason being given for all this marina talk, isn't it? 4) Build a breakwater out from the South Pier into Lake Michigan, along the Lake Michigan Beach, move the beach around the shore a bit, put in docks, bathrooms, among others. Then be sure you put up lots of signs saying: "This way to downtown" or "fudge, ice cream and T-shirts this way" or whatever you need to say to attract the new boaters from the new marina into town for dinner, groceries, T-shirts, fudge, wedding gifts or whatever.

Editor:

My name is Dave Schuchard. My parents were Bob and Lil Bergmann and I have one sister, Mary Mol (she married Bob Mol, a Charlevoix native)...the Bergmann Center is named after my mom who gave a large portion of her life helping the less fortunate. Anyway that is not why I am writing this letter.

I am writing to tell you that I grew up in Charlevoix from 1946-1962 (we moved to Charlevoix from Detroit where I was born in 1942). I really believe that I grew up in the best town and during the best of times — the 50s. I have lived in North Carolina since I was discharged from the army in 1964, and I have subscribed to the Courier for all these years to keep "in touch" with Charlevoix. Other than the obituaries from time to time, I very seldom recognize any names or faces, so Marilyn Boss's monthly column is one that I really look forward to. Sometimes she outdates me but for the most part I remember the names and places from my growing-up years...the most recent article about the beaches really hit home.

When we lived on Bridge Street in the early 50s we would always go to the Ferry Avenue beach (but only after we had finished all of our chores.) Mom always left Mary and I a list on the fridge. We moved to Michigan Avenue in the middle 50s and then we started sharing time with the Depot Beach and the Lake Michigan beach...those memories of spending time at the beach are some of my fondest...the Bergmanns used to have a annual chicken roast on the beach. Dad would build a fire with driftwood and grill chicken and corn on the cob. To this day I have never tasted anything better. I am sure the people who have lived in Charlevoix for most of their lives and were there in the 40s and 50s are enjoying Marilyn's monthly articles, so keep it up Marilyn and thanks for sharing with the past.

Mary and I, along with our spouses, are planning a trip to Charlevoix in the fall, hopefully around Apple Festival time, so Marilyn, why don't you have a "Days gone by" booth set up for those of us that lived during the time when the population of Charlevoix was about 2,500 and it grew to 10,000 in the summer? If so, I will see you then.

Local vet competes in Golden Age Games

James Memmer, an Air Force veteran from Charlevoix, was one of more than 400 veterans in their "golden age" who competed in the fifteenth National Veterans Golden Age Games June 9-15 in Duncanville, Texas.

Participants in the games were U.S. military veterans from across the country, all age 55 and over, who receive medical care through the Department of Veterans Affairs.

Memmer, 56, currently receives care at the Veterans Affairs medical facility in Saginaw.

He competed in horseshoes, bowling and bicycling at the games.

"Competing in the Golden Age Games is a wonderful experience to look forward to each year," said Memmer.

The games are meant to demonstrate the value of providing exercise, recreation and friendly competition, which helps older people deal with disability and aging. Athletes compete within ambulatory and wheelchair divisions and age groups.

"These men and women are inspiring. There is no other way to say it," said Secretary of Veterans Affairs Anthony J. Principi. "The Golden Age Games bring together veterans who landed at Normandy,

Take a moment to enjoy the wait at the bridge

By FR. JIM GUNN
Rector, Christ Episcopal Church of Charlevoix

The last article I wrote started with me thinking about the petunias that adorn our city from May throughout the summer. There is another feature of our community that is more prominent in the warm weather... the bridge!

I feel quite sure that everyone reading these words has spent some amount of time sitting in a line of cars waiting for the bridge to go back down and let us continue on our way. I would even be willing to say that some of us have entertained some "colorful" thoughts when coming near the bridge and realizing it is in the up position, since there is no other way to get from here to there without going many miles out of your way!

We live in a culture where such a time of waiting is not valued; rather, it is regretted. I once read a remark highlighting that in the Nineteenth century people were not terribly upset if they missed a stagecoach and had to wait until the next day, but we had gotten to the point in the Twentieth century where we were irritated waiting for the next section of a revolving door.

I'd like to suggest that we try giving thanks for being in the line at the bridge — I agree that sounds like a startling idea, but it could have some benefits. We could, for instance, simply accept the fact that we aren't going anywhere for a few minutes and look around us. We might notice some particularly striking piece of God's handiwork. It could even be something we had seen hundreds of times, but shone forth with a new beauty on this occasion.

We could look around us at the people on the streets and in other cars. What is happening in their lives? What problems are they facing that day? What pain is causing them to look sad? We don't have to know the answers to those questions in order to pray for them. God knows the full details of their lives and their problems and their pains. It is His desire to touch their lives with grace and love and healing — and it may be that our prayer will "open the floodgates of heaven" so that blessings will rain on them.

We could even just sit there and take a couple of deep breaths and seek a sense of peace within us. I once wrote an article for a magazine focusing on prayer. The article was entitled "Stop, Look, and Listen" and I mentioned it previously in another Beacons of Blessings.

It seems appropriate to hold it up again in that it can direct us to simply value that time of waiting. It tells us to do exactly what it says — stop, look and listen. When we take those deep breaths it can prepare us to hear God say something to us. I don't mean that we will necessarily hear an audible voice like on a radio or loudspeaker (although we should never rule out that possibility) but in that quiet space we may have a sense of leading that we can attribute to God.

I will leave it to you to come up with other possibilities to fill the time of waiting at the bridge. There are many that could be profitable and edifying. Perhaps one day I'll see you there in line.

I will definitely endeavor to follow my own advice.

Weislik leaves behind many stories and laughs

He said that for the last couple of years the family took three or four trips annually to Stuart, Florida.

He added that she was a softy for the spirit of Christmas. She loved dressing up the business and checking out other store windows around town.

"She liked knowing everybody. She was always a fixture behind the bar. She felt needed, she felt a purpose," Ron said.

Helen was diagnosed with lung cancer on Jan. 3, 2001. Ron said that being inactive was hard on her and that she told him if she could just breathe a little better she could get back to work.

Helen passed away just five months later.

Her son Bruce addressed those who attended a morning Mass of the Resurrection in her memory on June 16 at St. Mary's Catholic Church in Charlevoix.

"There is no doubt the Townhouse was a special place because of Helen," Bruce said. "Over the course of the past 40 years, she tended to the social and entertainment needs of many of you. The Townhouse has become a rite of passage for generations of Charlevoixians."

Throughout the years this "rite of passage" included an initiation by Helen herself. The initiation wasn't a set program, but everyone who came through the glass and wood door had or would soon have a Helen story to tell.

Ron plans to take over operations at the Townhouse.

"I'm going to try to fill her shoes, but those are big shoes," Ron said.

The Weislik family is sponsoring The First Annual Helen Open, a golf tournament scheduled to take place Aug. 19 at the Charlevoix City Course. For more information contact Rochelle Whippo at home 547-3518 or at work, 547-0881.

Tournament proceeds will benefit the American Cancer Society.

Summer Reading Program to start

The Timestep Players, a children's theater group from Chicago, will kick off this year's Summer Reading Program at the Charlevoix Public Library.

The show will be starting at 1:30 p.m. today in the basement of the library.

Children can also sign up for the summer reading program after the performance by just visiting the library.

According to interim library director Charlie Kregel, this year's summer reading activities will be "loads of fun."

Each child will keep a list of the books they read on a file in the library. For every book completed, children can stick a colored light on a sailboat with their name on it and the boat will be placed on a mural in the library lobby.

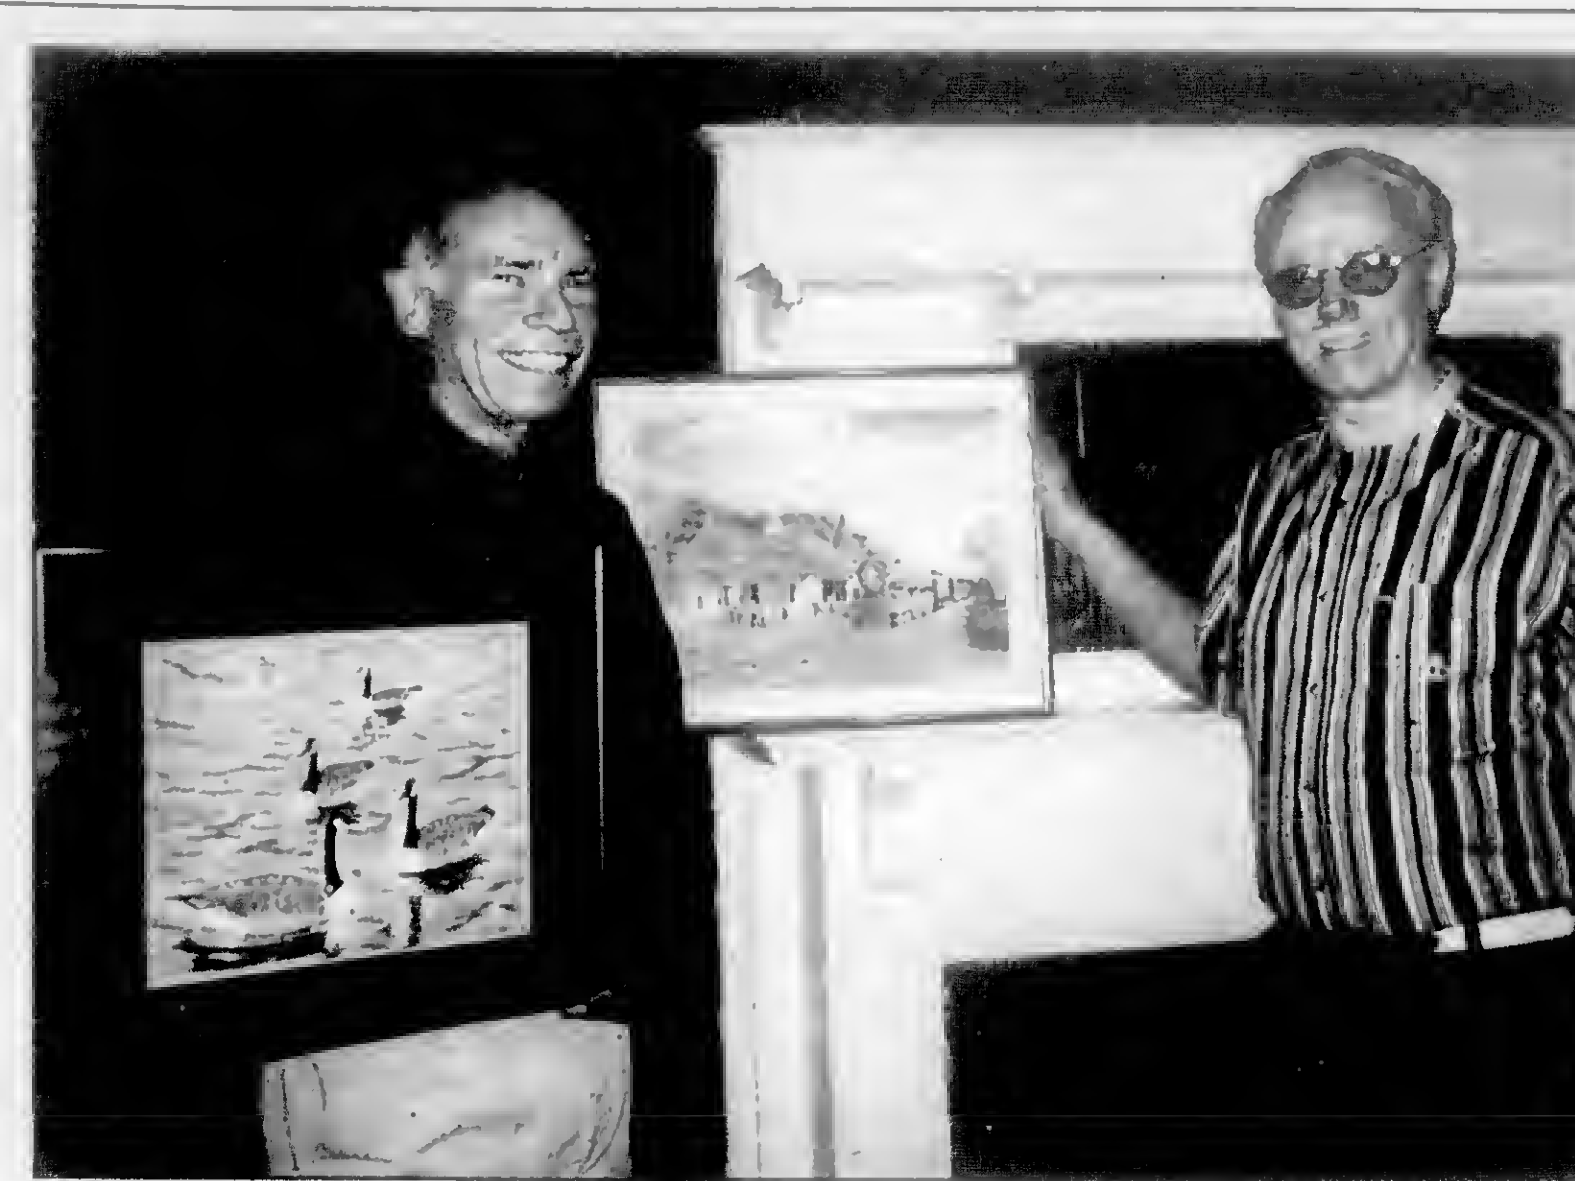

Kregel added some new twists in the program should make it special. At regular times each week, kids will be able to discuss the books they have read with a Friends of the Library volunteer.

There will also be a Celebrity Story Hour where each week a different local celebrity will spend an hour reading to the children.

"So far we have lined up our police and fire chiefs, a lifeguard from the community swimming pool, the school nurse and a high school basketball star," Kregel said.

A schedule of story-reading dates and times is posted in the library.

The summer reading program will finish with a celebration in the afternoon of Aug. 8 on the front lawn of the library. At that time, children will be presented with a certificate acknowledging their reading achievements.

Paintings donated

Two original paintings by Lyle Miles, a Charlevoix resident until his death in 1997, have been given to the Charlevoix Historical Society by the estate of Helen Goldstick, Miles' sister-in-law. The paintings will be restored through the "adopt-a-painting" program. Over 209 pieces of Charlevoix art still require repair and can be adopted by contacting the society at 547-0373. The collection can be seen Monday through Saturday from 1 to 4 p.m. at the Harsha House Museum at 103 State Street in Charlevoix. (Courtesy photo)

Get ready to register for this year's Venetian games

The 2001 Venetian Games will feature an array of team and individual events, but to be a part of them make sure you are aware of the registration dates and rules.

Two popular events from last year, golf and tennis, have both been expanded to allow for more participation this year. However, both will maintain the entry restrictions from last year, which required participants to have a Charlevoix area mailing address, thus keeping the event for local enthusiasts.

In the golf tournament, the Keith Carey Cup, adult and junior golfers will vie for championship trophies. Co-managers of the tournament, Tom Dorsek and Scott Blechel, have designed a format with top scorers from the qualifying rounds being placed in either the championship, first, second or third flight.

Participants must register and play qualifying rounds June 28-July 2. Match play will take place July 3-23, with each flight's championship scheduled for Venetian Week, July 24. Defending champions will automatically qualify for match play.

The junior golfers tournament will be on July 19 and 25. For more information call the Charlevoix Municipal Golf Course at 547-3268.

The tennis tournament will also have a new format. It will take place during the entire Venetian week starting on July 17 and climaxing with the finals on July 22. Registration for the tournament will be through the Charlevoix Recreation Department at City Hall with a July 19 deadline. Call 547-3253 for more information.

The popular Jeff Drenth Road Race will again feature 10K, 5K and one mile races, with registration at the recreation department. The race date is July 29.

Swimming for all ages will again be at the Charlevoix Area Community Pool. Participants need only to show up and register at 4 p.m. on July 25 to compete. Races include freestyle, backstroke, butterfly, breaststroke and IM events. For more information call the pool at 547-0982.

A new event last year, Cottage Croquet, will be July 24 in Bridge Park in downtown Charlevoix. A 1 p.m. clinic will kick off the event with two person teams making up the field with a single elimination tournament following the clinic. For additional information or to volunteer as an event helper call 547-9314.

The new events, disc golf and sporting clays, will be debuted this year. Disc golf is played similar to golf with various "holes" accompanied by assorted hazards. Although instead of a golf ball, participants use a flying disc.

There will be three levels of competition: novice, intermediate and advanced. Registration in advance is available at the city recreation department or on site at Mount McSaubia on July 22.

Sporting clays is a Rod and Gun club sponsored event for certified marksmen with registration at the club site on July 29.

Three vehicle accident caused by animal in road

There was a three vehicle accident on US-31, a half-mile from the south city limits of Charlevoix around noon on June 22.

Mark Stone, 43, of Kewadin and his daughter Elinor, 13, were traveling north in a GMC Safari van. They were behind a brown 1996 Jeep driven by Glenn White, 67, with his wife Delcie White, 65, of Omena, as a passenger.

Glenn braked and stopped for a small animal, possibly a dog, that ran in front of him. Stone was unable to stop in time, rear-ending the Jeep in front of him.

After being struck from behind, the Jeep was shoved across the centerline, into the left lane, striking a blue, Dodge pickup truck traveling south. The Dodge truck was driven by Thomas Cichoski, 42, of Eastpointe, with his wife, Theodora Cichoski, 45, of Eastpointe, as a passenger.

All three vehicles were damaged considerably.

Both Glenn and Delcie White received injuries that required hospitalization. Theodora Cichoski received a head injury from an impact with the windshield; she was not wearing a seat-belt.

Two dogs that were in the Cichoski truck were cared for by the Charlevoix County Humane Society while their owners were hospitalized.

The Whites and Theodora were transported to Charlevoix Area Hospital by Charlevoix Ambulance.

The Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department was assisted by the Charlevoix Township Fire Department and officers from the Charlevoix City Police Department and the Michigan State Police.

It's berry season at Kiteley's Farm

Julie Musilek
'Stepping out'

Just after the roosters sounded the morning alarm at the Kiteley farm Thursday morning, Quincy McMullen, 3, of Cheboygan started grooming a bright red mustache — a perfect match for the streaks of red that quickly painted his once white shirt.

Thursday was the McMullen family's annual strawberry picking outing at the Kiteley farm off of M-66, three miles out of Charlevoix's city limits. Quincy was working the patch using his trademark "one-for-now, one-for-later" system with a red mustache created by strawberry juice.

That's right, the strawberries are in and Quincy's seeded smile and colorful ensemble are a testament to the fact that this year's crop is just as juicy as it is sweet and tasty.

The farm has been in operation for almost 20 years and the Kiteley's trademark strawberry operation began 10-15 years ago under the watchful eyes of Chuck and Carmen Kiteley.

In 1999, after almost two decades in the business, Chuck and Carmen were ready to hand over the bulk of the operation, but they wanted to keep it in the family. At that time, their son Mike, who grew up on the farm, was living in Tennessee with his wife Sue and their two children. But Sue said they both always wanted to make their way back to Charlevoix.

Mike and Sue bought the operation shortly thereafter and Sue said she caught on quick that strawberries may be easy eating, but cultivating the little red wonders is a different ball game.

She explained that getting your first good crop takes two years.

After planting, there's a year's wait before the patch will yield fruit. Sue also said that strawberries are spreaders, so to keep the rows in ship shape for optimal picking there is a lot of fertilizing, hoeing and weeding.

After the season is over, the plants have to be covered with straw and uncovered the next spring. Sue said that after three or four years of yielding fruit, you have to dig up your plants and start over again.

Andrew McMullen, of Cheboygan, digs deep into the strawberry patch to find the perfect treat to place in his basket. (Photo by Julie Musilek)

That's the beauty of crop rotation — after the Kiteleys remove the plants, they let the field sit for a year.

Not only does the Kiteley family offer Charlevoix residents some of the best strawberries in the business, but they'll also soon have a boatload of pickable raspberries. Sue anticipated the raspberries coming in right around July 4.

If berries aren't your bag, but fresh veggies spark your interest, by mid-summer you can get some sweet corn and other fresh garden vegetables. Once you've loaded up your car with freshables don't forget to add some scented color to the dining table with a fresh cut bouquet.

When you're suiting up to hit the road remember Quincy's white shirt and reach back in the closet for something more strawberry friendly.

Kiteley's, located at 03805 Brock Road, is open daily from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m.

The farm welcomes all ages and even has an animal observation and feeding area. For more information contact Sue at (231) 547-2318.

School budget lists ways to trim money

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

The Charlevoix school district has found it's tough to break even in two places, food service and sports, but to cut back on either may mean students lose more than what comes out of the district's wallet.

"A good extracurricular program goes right along with education. The students learn valuable lessons in and out of the classroom," Superintendent of Charlevoix Public Schools, John Sturrock said.

The proposed budget for 2001-2002 shows the general fund contributes $208,000 to sports and $40,560 to food service each year.

Sturrock explained that extracurricular programs can't be run on the revenue they generate — if money is tight, one of the most obvious places for a district to make cuts is in extracurricular activities.

"We would look across the board. But maintaining the integrity of the academic program is my first priority," he said.

However, the district does currently have a $3 million surplus. As of now none of the four proposals are necessary, but if the general fund can no longer contribute $208,000 to the athletic budget these options may be explored.

The proposed athletic budget for 2001-2002 shows the bulk of the total revenue, $246,000, comes from the $208,000 transfer from the general fund. The next biggest money makers are admissions for boys basketball, which the budget estimates will bring in $12,000; football admissions at $9,000 and season ticket sales at $8,000.

The district is spending the largest chunk of the revenue on coaches and officials who make up $154,000 of the $245,200 expense budget. Other areas where big bucks are spent is equipment/repair which costs $11,000, uniforms at $10,000 and travel/meals at $9,000.

At the June 11 school board meeting the board adopted a plan that would allow them four future options if and when athletic cuts are needed.

The first proposal would allow the district to eliminate all middle school sports at an interscholastic level replacing the sports with an intramural program.

Or, when push comes to shove the district could eliminate all non-revenue producing sports at the high school and middle school. That would mean both schools would offer football and girls basketball in the fall, boys basketball and girls volleyball in the winter and girls/boys track and baseball/softball in the spring.

The board's third option would be to maintain only varsity sports and possibly offer an intramural program at the lower levels of both the high school and middle school.

The fourth proposal reflects the system Gaylord currently operates on: the pay to participate concept. With the pay to participate system, all sports in both the high school and middle school can be maintained.

A second area the district is looking to break even is in food service. Sturrock said that the relatively small number of students in the schools make it more expensive to run the program.

In addition to the $87,000 federal sources supply the district with, the general fund contributes $40,560. The district is expecting to bring in and pay out $394,560 next year which equates to a $40,560 loss from the general budget.

According to the district's accounting manager Judy Boss, in an effort to try and make up some of the money students may have to spend more on a la carte items in the cafeteria.

Men arrested for OUIL after crash on June 16

At 10:25 p.m., June 16, the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department and Boyne City ambulance were dispatched to an unknown accident on Boyne City/East Jordan Road near Tompkins Road in Wilson Township.

The vehicle, later determined to have been driven by Jeffery

Craig Tenney, 30, of Ludington had missed the stop sign on Tompkins Road and hit the bank on the opposite side of Boyne City/East Jordan Road.

Upon arrival all occupants of the vehicle had fled the scene. The Boyne City Police Department was first on the scene. They pursued a second vehicle, which turned out to be a passenger in the accident coming back to help a friend.

The driver of the second vehicle, Michael Wood of Weidman, was arrested by a Boyne City police officer for driving under the influence of alcohol.

A second Boyne City police officer along with Michigan

State Police apprehended another subject from the accident who was attempting to elude police by swimming away in Deer Lake.

A third subject, Gabriel Perez was apprehended by a Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department deputy at a nearby residence.

All three subjects were treated by Boyne City Ambulance. Two of the men were released with minor injuries while the driver Jeffery Tenney was transported to Northern Michigan Hospital where he is being treated for more serious internal injuries.

Alcohol was a factor in the accident which remains under investigation.

Stormwater changes discussed at board meeting

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

Concerned residents told the Charlevoix County Stormwater Board of Appeals if they don't put "stronger teeth" in the county stormwater control ordinance, Lake Charlevoix will end up polluted.

"People are frustrated when they see non-compliance on their neighbor's property. Get consistent and back up the ordinance with zoning," Timothy Boyko, Hayes Township supervisor said.

At the June 22 meeting, Boyko said township zoning laws need to reflect the county stormwater ordinance. He believes that if individual townships and the county are on the same page, the ordinance could be enforced more efficiently.

The 17 residents from across the county who attended the meeting supported Boyko's idea of consistency within both township and county government. Many asked the board why enforcement of the old ordinance was poor and how enforcement can be changed so that the new ordinance will protect our lakes.

Charlevoix County Drain Commissioner JoAnne Beemon said that when six of the seven variance requests that are submitted are granted, the law is being changed and the appeals board needs members who understand conservancy.

She added that with Charlevoix city stormwater draining directly into the lake, the county still has a lot of work to do.

Charlevoix County soil erosion and stormwater control officer Wendy Armstrong said to review all county building permits she would need a staff of 20. It is the responsibility of individual townships to call in and notify Armstrong of questionable development sites.

Armstrong said that in April of 1998 when the first county stormwater control ordinance was established, using Grand Traverse's ordinance as a model, the board decided to review it every couple of years.

The ordinance was reviewed in 1999 and it's time once again to take a look at possible changes based on Armstrong's recommendations.

Armstrong said one problem she has run into was the definition of commercial. She said as it was stated in the ordinance it didn't define commercial as what they intended it to be.

Commercial use as defined by the ordinance is, "1. The use of property in connection with or for the purchase, sale, display or exchange of goods, merchandise or personal services, as well as the maintenance or operation of businesses or recreational or amusement enterprises. 2. All land uses except for one-family and two-family detached dwellings."

Armstrong has also ran into enforcement issues. She said that a change in the ticketing process whereby ordinance violators would go through the magistrate as opposed to going through the court system would push the process along.

Board member and county commissioner James Behling said that with the change, "You can stop something a lot quicker than going

"People are frustrated when they see non-compliance on their neighbor's property."

Timothy Boyko,
Hayes Township supervisor

through the courts."

A third issue Armstrong would like to see revised is the buffer language. She recommended that the board use enforceable language or remove it from the document.

The current guideline states, "Removal of natural vegetation and tree roots which would expose bare soils within 50 feet of the ordinary high water mark of any lake or stream shall be discouraged."

Boyko suggested taking the word "discourage" out of this stormwater control ordinance guideline and leaving in shall.

The next board work session will take place July 13 in the county commissioners' room inside the Charlevoix County Building.

Members of the Stormwater Board of Appeals are: Shirley Roloff, James Behling, Jim Vaveh, JoAnne Beemon, Jim Malewitz, Tom Erwin and Wendy Armstrong.

Charlevoix gets visit from first cruise ship in 50 years playing in East Park and they could take advantage of some golf packages, in addition to shopping and dining in Charlevoix.

However, according to some of the passengers on the ship, there was a mix-up in Charlevoix that caused some tour confusion.

Thelma Caplan, a passenger on the Arcadia from Seattle, Wash., said her cruise to Charlevoix was okay, but there was a mix up in the tours when she arrived on the mainland.

"The tourist organization (in Charlevoix) needs a little help in planning so there is a little more organization," she said.

But, most of the passengers took any glitches in plans in stride.

"In general that is what we expect, some small problems," said Alex Gopp of Ann Arbor.

After his day in Charlevoix, Gopp said he thought the people from the area are very nice. As for his cruise, he said, "This idea about cruising the Great Lakes is very interesting."

He added there were several people on the ship from the Charlevoix and Petoskey area.

Brain Stanhope, a musician on the ship from British Columbia, Canada, said the cruise to Charlevoix was lovely and the water of Lake Michigan was a "black calm."

He said the ship is small and easy to find your way around in, with nice cabins and excellent food.

A fellow musician from the ship, Brian Stanhope, added, "You wouldn't do better in any other hotel."

While the trip went smoothly, it was a light load.

Ralph Diehl, president of Great Lakes Cruises, Inc. — the company that charters the ship — said there were only about 60 passengers on this ship. The Arcadia can hold 224 passengers.

"I've heard from different people in different parts that this is the worst year for tourism in 15 years," he said. However, Diehl expects the next ship to Charlevoix will be much fuller.

As for the reason why the ship did not come into Round

Lake, which was one of its options, Diehl said he had not talked to the Arcadia's captain yet, but thought it probably was due to the width of the Pine River Channel.

"That is definitely a nail-biter," he said.

While he said he knows that freighters used to come down the channel, he said a passenger ship is a completely different thing.

"The problem is if a freighter touches the side (of the channel) it is not a big deal. But if a passenger ship touches the side it is a disaster," Diehl said. He said the media would and Coast Guard would "go nuts" if that happened.

Charlevoix Harbor Master Hal Evans added it was the first time on the Great Lakes for the Arcadia's captain and he was a little nervous about bringing the ship into Round Lake.

The Charlevoix Construction Technology House will be up for bids starting noon June 25 until noon July 6, 2001

The house is 28x48, 1344 square feet, 3 bedroom, 2 bath.

Bidding price starts at $45,000.

Students who performed with Sousa being sought

When the famous "March King" John Philip Sousa served as guest conductor for the National High School Band at Interlochen Arts Camp in 1930 and 1931, he was assisted by about 600 high school band students from northern Michigan.

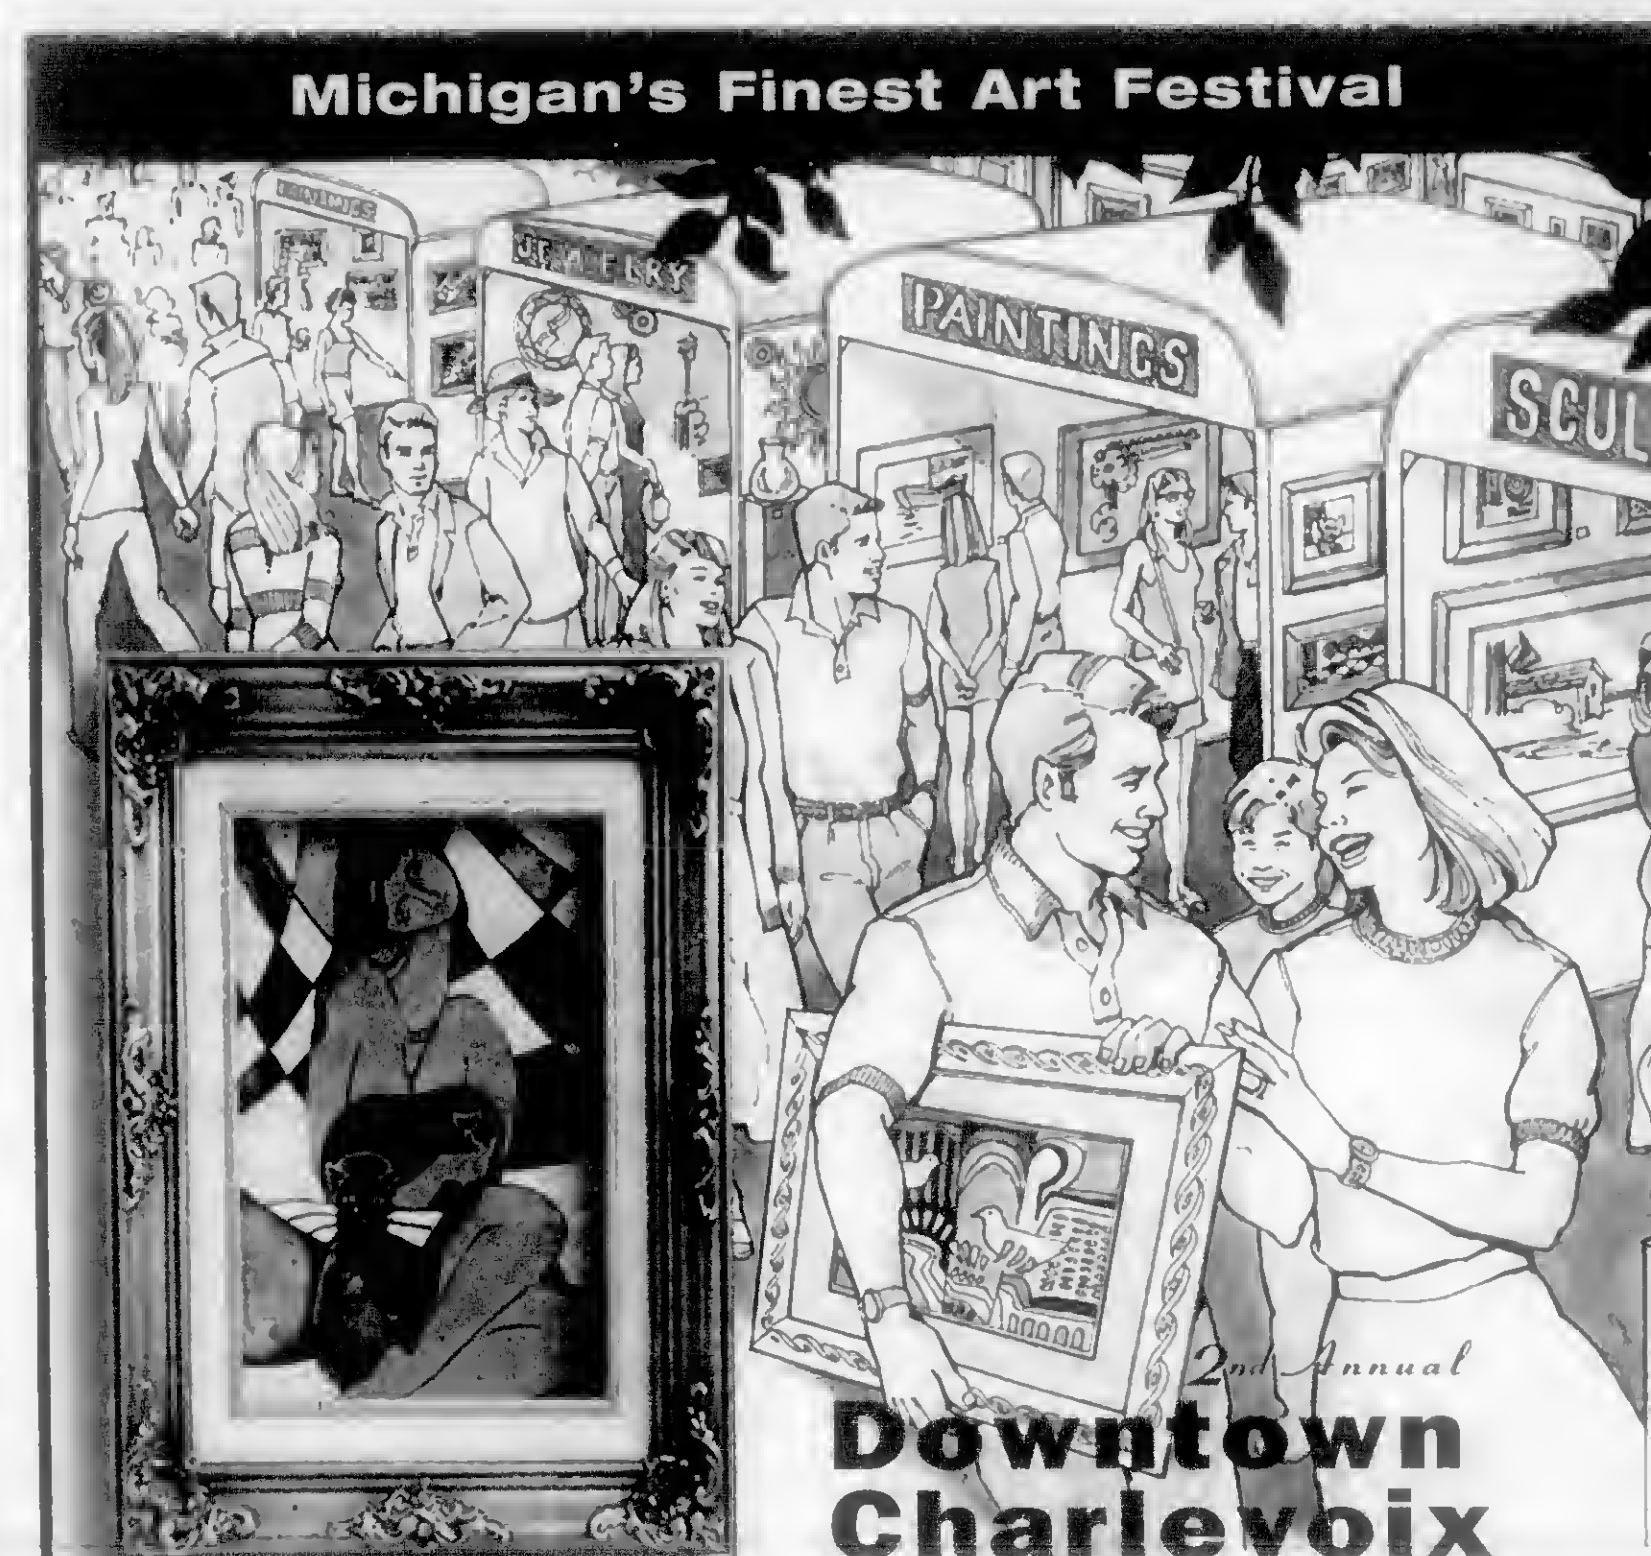

The concerts drew an audience estimated between 8,000 and 10,000 and became a special memory for many young musicians as well as a wonderful moment in Interlochen history.

Interlochen Arts Camp is looking for the high school students who played under Sousa during those concerts to invite them to be a part of the camp's "Stars, Stripes & Sousa" evening this July 4.

"They can be in our Fourth of July parade, have a VIP pass for the concert, sit in a special section and be our guests of honor at an ice cream social afterwards," said Carleen Roeper, Interlochen's alumni director. Roeper would like to reconnect with anyone who has memories of the Sousa concerts.

Please call (231) 276-7630 for more information or to share your memories of this special time.

Why you should turn off your phone in a hospital

Charlevoix Area Hospital like many other hospitals in Northern Michigan, ban the use of cellular phones or enforce strict guidelines for their use — with good reason.

At Charlevoix Area Hospital, the use of cellular phones inside the building could interfere with the transmission of information on the Telemetry system, an electronic remote communication equipment system that allows patients with heart monitoring devices to move about and walk outside their rooms. Patients' cardiac rhythm is broadcast to the nurses' station computer where trained personnel keep an eye on their heart rates and other necessary information.

"We have not had a problem with electronic interference with our equipment, we simply want to avoid it, so we've posted signs and we ask people to step outside to use a cell phone," said Bernadette Cole, registered nurse and manager at Charlevoix Area Hospital. "These precautions are based on evidence of problems elsewhere that we are aware of."

Cellular telephones may interfere with certain cardiovascular patient monitors, according to a recent Mayo Clinic study. In most cases, however, the level of interference was not severe enough to be clinically important, investigators found. The research was published in the January 2001 issue of "Mayo Clinic Proceedings."

The latest study adds further support to recommendations regarding prudent use of cellular phones in hospitals.

In other hospitals throughout the United States, other patient care-related equipment has been discovered to be interrupted and even malfunctioned because of the use of cellular phones. In a rare example, a young patient was diagnosed with epinephrine poisoning after he received an unintended 10.5 milligram of intravenous concentration of an epinephrine infusion delivered by infusion pump.

An investigation found the pump in working order and a cellular phone in the "stand-by" mode in the immediate area.

When these conditions were duplicated in a lab setting, the pump displayed a "999 milliliters per hour" rate of infusion, 10 times the desired amount. Once the phone was removed from the vicinity, the pump reverted to its original setting. Despite developing pulmonary edema and other problems, the patient recovered.

For this reason, and others, hospital staff members ask that all patients, visitors and vendors comply with the hospital's facility's restrictions on the use of cellular equipment. Cellular phones can be safely used outside the entrances of a hospital.

In studies by investigator David L. Hayes M.D., a Mayo Clinic cardiologist, and other research teams, some cellular phones might interfere with implanted devices such as cardiac pacemakers. In the more recent study, investigators found that the most severe interference occurred when a cellular telephone was held one to two inches from some devices. Hayes and colleagues determined that the interference was unlikely to cause a serious malfunction at reasonable distances, more than about five feet from devices.

The investigators tested 17 different external cardiopulmonary monitoring devices in a laboratory setting over three months. All devices underwent maintenance checks before and after the laboratory tests to verify that the devices were working properly. Five cellular phones (four digital models and one analog model from three manufacturers) were used to test the monitoring devices. The external monitoring devices tested included: Intensive care unit vital sign monitors; pulse oximeters; infusion pumps; non-invasive blood pressure monitors; telemetry packs; ECG monitors; defibrillator/monitor/pacemakers; intra-aortic balloon pumps and ventilators.

Devices were set up to operate in "normal" mode connected to appropriate simulators. Each device was tested according to an 18-step procedure, which included evaluations of device vulnerability to interference and whether a telephone's ringing or its angle and distance from the device affected potential interference.

The cellular phones caused some level of interference in 41 percent of the medical devices tested and that some interference was present in 54 percent of the total tests performed.

The majority of the interference was observed in devices that display electrocardiograms (ECGs). Digital phones tended to create noise, or static, on the ECG baseline readings.

Analog phones tended to cause movement in the ECG baseline readings.

Hayes and colleagues concluded that cellular phones would not likely hinder proper interpretation of ECGs at distances beyond five feet from monitors — "a reasonable distance."

Other studies conclude that the potential for mobile communication devices to interfere with medical technology depends on the frequency and power of the devices.

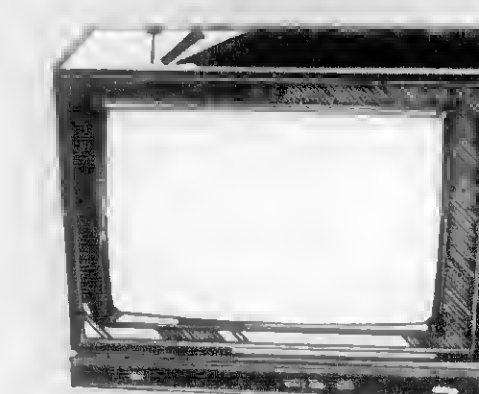

Experts advise that to avoid interference with medical equipment, cellular phones should not be used inside a hospital.

BUILDING OPERATIONS TO COMMENCE TODAY

New Institution Will Have All The Features of an Up-to-Date City Hospital

Work on the old Meech place on Huribut Avenue which is to be transformed into a hospital for Charlevoix started today.

The plans contemplate a thoroughly up-to-date completely equipped hospital in every respect. Besides a large general ward, there will be seven private rooms with bath and quarters for the nurses. The floors will be hardwood throughout and the interior woodwork will be enameled white. The operating room will be fitted with modern equipment sufficient to take care of any and all cases that may be brought to it, and a bacteriological laboratory is also included in the plans.

The building will be heated by a vapor system, the plumbing is to be A-1 and all electric wires carried in conduit. The grounds will be put in attractive shape and the place is expected to be open for business inside of two months' time. Fred H. Thomas is the contractor and Harry L. Oldham, treasurer of the Charlevoix Hospital Association, will have general supervision of the work.

Nothing has given us more pleasure in a long time than to be able to record the fact that a hospital for Charlevoix is assured. It is impossible to estimate the benefit that such an institution can bestow, not only in taking care of actual cases of sickness and accident, but along the lines of preventative work and general public health.

All subscribers who have not paid up and others who wish to help in the good work are urged to make remittance at once to Mr. Oldham, the treasurer.

PALACE THEATRE OPENS JULY 10

WITH AFTERNOON AND EVENING ENTERTAINMENT

Special Features Booked for Opening Attractions—New Playhouse a Model Structure

Charlevoix's new theatre and moving picture house will open on Thursday, July 10, with both afternoon matinee and evening programs.

During the summer season the house will be open both afternoon and evening with a complete change of program each day, including the Sunday evening show, which will be the very best obtainable along religious and educational lines.

While this modern playhouse is as yet not completed, nor will be on the opening day, what work remains to be done will be finished during the hours when not open to the public. Interior decorations, features that will add to the comfort of those who attend, will be added as fast as the management can obtain them, and when completed, will stand second to none in this section of the state.

Manager Moon compliments himself on being able to obtain the services of Mrs. Rita Amick of Kansas City, professional picture player and orchestra leader, who will delight the "movie fans" with both classical and popular music.

For the opening numbers the management has secured William S. Hart's masterpiece, "Border Wireless," a thrilling, gripping play that will hold the closest attention of those fortunate enough to be present. In addition to this "Fatty Arbuckle" will appear on the screen in one of his side-splitting comedies.

The program for the balance of the week is high grade and as good as can be obtained and without a doubt the new playhouse will be filled to capacity during the entire week.

One of the features of the new theatre which will be appreciated by its patrons are the rest rooms for both sexes, located at the right and left of the main entrance. Another feature worthy of mention is the ventilating system installed, which completely changes the air in the building every 20 minutes, also the comfortable upholstered chairs and modern fixtures throughout. A full announcement of the opening day and program appears on page ten of this issue.

Queen, Court Are Named To Preside at Venetian Night Events July 27

A queen and her court will be the new feature of Charlevoix's traditional Venetian Night when it is held this year July 27.

Sally Miller has been chosen as queen. Comprising her court will be Virginia Ranger, Anne Campbell, Helen Jean Hammond, Marion Craig and Audrey Byers.

At Venetian Night, the queen and her court will be on a special float, well lighted, which will be in the foreground during the parade.

Planning the event are the officers of the Marine Club: Frank Ochs, commodore; William Bellinger, secretary; and Joseph Howard, treasurer and harbor master. Helping is S. E. Coleman of the Board of Commerce.

Opening the day's events will be the Water Carnival. Starting at 3 p.m., it will be staged in front of East Park. Among the events will be diving contests and 50 and 100 yard swimming races. In each of these there will be three classes each for boys and girls: Juvenile, junior and senior.

Chief potential feature of Venetian night is the traditional boat parade. Its success depends on owners of craft here, and Coleman is stressing the fact that the success of the entire program still hinges largely on the number of owners who will enter their boats in the evening parade.

This is scheduled to start at 9 p.m. What boat will lead still is to be decided but will be announced next week.

While the parade is in progress, the fireworks will be shot. The Marine Club has contracted for this display, costing more than $300.

Music will be provided by the Charlevoix Marine Band. Other events are planned and will be included, Coleman says.

Car takes a swim in lake Saturday

A parked and unoccupied vehicle must have thought it needed a bath around 6:30 p.m. Saturday on Antrim Street and it rolled away from its owner, down Antrim Street and ended up floating in Round Lake.

According to Charlevoix Police Chief Dennis Halverson, a 1988 Volvo owned by Brie Woodhouse, 18 of Charlevoix, came out of gear while it was parked on Antrim Street and rolled into Round Lake. No one was hurt in the incident and, what is being attributed to luck, there was no damage caused.

Charlevoix Harbor Master Hal Evans saw the incident take place.

"My wife was trying to hang onto it," he said. "Brie (Woodhouse) locked it and was standing next to it talking to my wife and it rolled away. They were trying to stop it."

Evans said when the vehicle rolled into Round Lake, it jumped over a small boat and landed just before two larger boats. It then floated for about 15 minutes and sank.

Halverson said a hydraulic boom, normally used to put masts on sailboats, was used to pull the car from the water. He said it took about an hour-and-a-half of work.

Evans said once the car dries out, it will probably start right up.

"I wouldn't park it on a hill for a while," he added.

Stormwater discharge debated Is it safe to let discharge run into lake?

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

Some Charlevoix County residents are concerned that the city of Charlevoix may be polluting the local watershed by discharging untreated stormwater directly into Round Lake, but the city maintains this is not a problem.

"Since God created the universe it has always been that way (stormwater has been discharged into the lake)," City of Charlevoix Street superintendent John Martin said.

But, Charlevoix County Drain Commissioner JoAnne Beemon, thinks it's time for a change.

"Sewage and stormwater are the number one pollutants in the state of Michigan. Smart counties are designing stormwater systems so the water is treated before it goes into the lake. But that happening here comes down to money," Beemon said. "What is it worth to us to have clean water?"

According to City Water and Wastewater superintendent Sam

Creswell, the city has made major improvements to the system.

Creswell said the problem was worse 20 years ago when the city did attempt to treat all the stormwater. The sanitary sewer system and the stormwater system were combined and when big storms would hit, the sanitary sewers would overflow and raw sewage would wash into the lake.

Mark Fife, stormwater coordinator for the Gaylord post of the Michigan Department of Environmental Quality (MDEQ), said many places combined the two systems and ended up with problems.

"You get a large rain and the sanitary sewers can't handle the volume, you overload the sanitary system and discharge raw sewage, which is worse," he said.

According to Fife, water pollution as a result of stormwater discharging into lakes, rivers and streams is being addressed at the state level.

Sorority gearing up for this year's Home Tour

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

For more than a century, Charlevoix's enchanting beauty has pulled people in from all over the world and in that time many have established permanent residences and second homes as dramatic and enticing as the local landscape.

Over the last two decades the Kappa Sigma Sorority of Charlevoix has taken on the tough task of picking five out of the sea of spectacular Charlevoix homes to be featured on their Home Tour.

This year's show has something for everyone — from an antique filled cottage to a lakefront home with its own babbling brook.

Home Tour 2001 is scheduled to take place from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. July 11.

The morning start, coupled with the spacing of the homes provide the perfect opportunity to start the tour out of town, work your way in for lunch and hit the remaining homes after fueling up.

A great way to kick off the tour is poking around two homes in the Pine Lake Club. To get there from downtown Charlevoix, take a left at M-66 and drive to an empty parking lot across from Ferry Avenue on the right side of the highway. A shuttle will be taking visitors from the lot to the Parker home.

David and Arlene Parker's manor on the water is located at 6090 Pine Lake Club Drive. From the Parker's brick circle drive to their indoor elevator to the granite countertops that grace every room, you will see that this couple has incorporated lavish detail every step of the way in their home's design.

After touring the Parker home walk or shuttle over just a couple of lots to 6210 Pine Lake Club Drive. This lakefront home is owned by Arnold and Polly Evans. According to Charlevoix Home Tour chairperson Kim Molter, the Evans home is reminiscent of traditional New England architecture with a nautical twist.

If you still have energy after perusing the mammoth Pine Lake Club homes, the two tour stops on Park Avenue are a nice way to keep the ball rolling.

To get to the Rhode and Kaufman homes, travel back into downtown Charlevoix and turn left on the street just before the bridge, Park Avenue. The Rhode house is located at 213 Park Avenue, on the right side of the road but parking is only permitted on the left.

The Rhode home was built before 1900 and the antique collections inside reflect its age. The family has an upstairs bedroom with a quilt display stacked along the wall, featuring the star of the show, a silky quilt dating back to the civil war. The second floor also features a glassed in sun room furnished in antique white wicker.

Beaver Island is full of nature-loving activities

Julie Musilek
'Stepping out'

Before anyone heads over to Beaver Island for a summer retreat peruse these island survival tips and must see attractions.

First, you've got to get there and regardless of the strength of your doggy paddle, I suggest using the Beaver Island Boat Company located next to Bridge Park in Charlevoix. On a calm day, even the most sea weary passengers will grin and compliment the captain on the smooth ride of the company's two ferries, the Beaver Islander and the Emerald Isle.

Once you get there you may say, "Well, this is nothing like Mackinac Island." To clear up the confusion ahead of time, those looking for the quaint charm of Mackinac Island, should visit Mackinac, because Beaver Island is cut out for the nature lover and you'll be hard pressed to find taffy, horses and T-shirts here.

According to Michael Moore, "If you're not really into nature, I don't know if you would really enjoy this place. It's not like you can go to a movie."

Moore, 26, is a Beaver Island native who now entertains during the summer at the priest haven turned restaurant, The Rectory. And he recently gave me a tour of the island.

While you are on the island, rent a car or a bike — there is a ton to see. But remember, when you're cruising town, try to blend. Moore said you can pick a mainlander out from a mile away because they don't wave.

"Wave when you come here. It seems like mainlanders aren't friendly when they don't wave. That's got to change," he added. Moore defined the mainland as,

"anywhere but here (Beaver Island)."

Another way to blend is to join the island race. When traveling back, dirt roads and there is on-coming traffic, the driver races their passengers to see who can get their window rolled up before a big dust cloud consumes the interior of the car.

So you have your wheels, your wave and your windows ready to go, but where to stay? Hotels are the obvious answer and that information is available through the Beaver Island Chamber of Commerce, at (231) 448-2505, but campgrounds are a harder pick.

St. James Township Campground is conveniently located just a walk away from town but Will Wagner Memorial Campground is more secluded and has the better swimming beach.

Don't leave your fishing pole behind, anglers who come to the island are sure to wet a line and pull in a fresh catch out of one of the many island inland lakes including; Fox Lake, Font Lake, Barney's Lake and the island's largest, Geneserath Lake located off of East Side Drive.

The entrance to the island golf course is also off of East Side Drive so you can warm up your golf clubs too.

If you decide to venture out on Fox Lake, take a look at all the huge trees jutting out over the water. Moore said they are the toys of ambitious beavers.

"The beaver are taking huge trees down, it looks like a battlefield down there," he added.

On your way back from fishing, take Fox Lake Road, located on the west side of the island and make two stops. First, there will be a huge rock on your left — you'll know why natives call it Paul Bunyan's tooth when you see it. The objective is to climb the tooth-shaped rock and get a photo to frame.

A little further down Fox Lake Road is the largest birch tree on the island, its long limbs and lush foliage are awe-inspiring.

For the "sports enthusiast" in your party who is tempted by sandy beaches, take the group to climb the huge dune, Mt. Pisgah and then tromp across the street to Donegal Bay for beach volleyball and beach bummin'.

To really soak in the sun, tour the island's outer roads and make beach stops every few yards.

But even on the island there come days when the sun has decided to hide. But, have no fear, there is rich island history to explore that merits an afternoon of discovery.

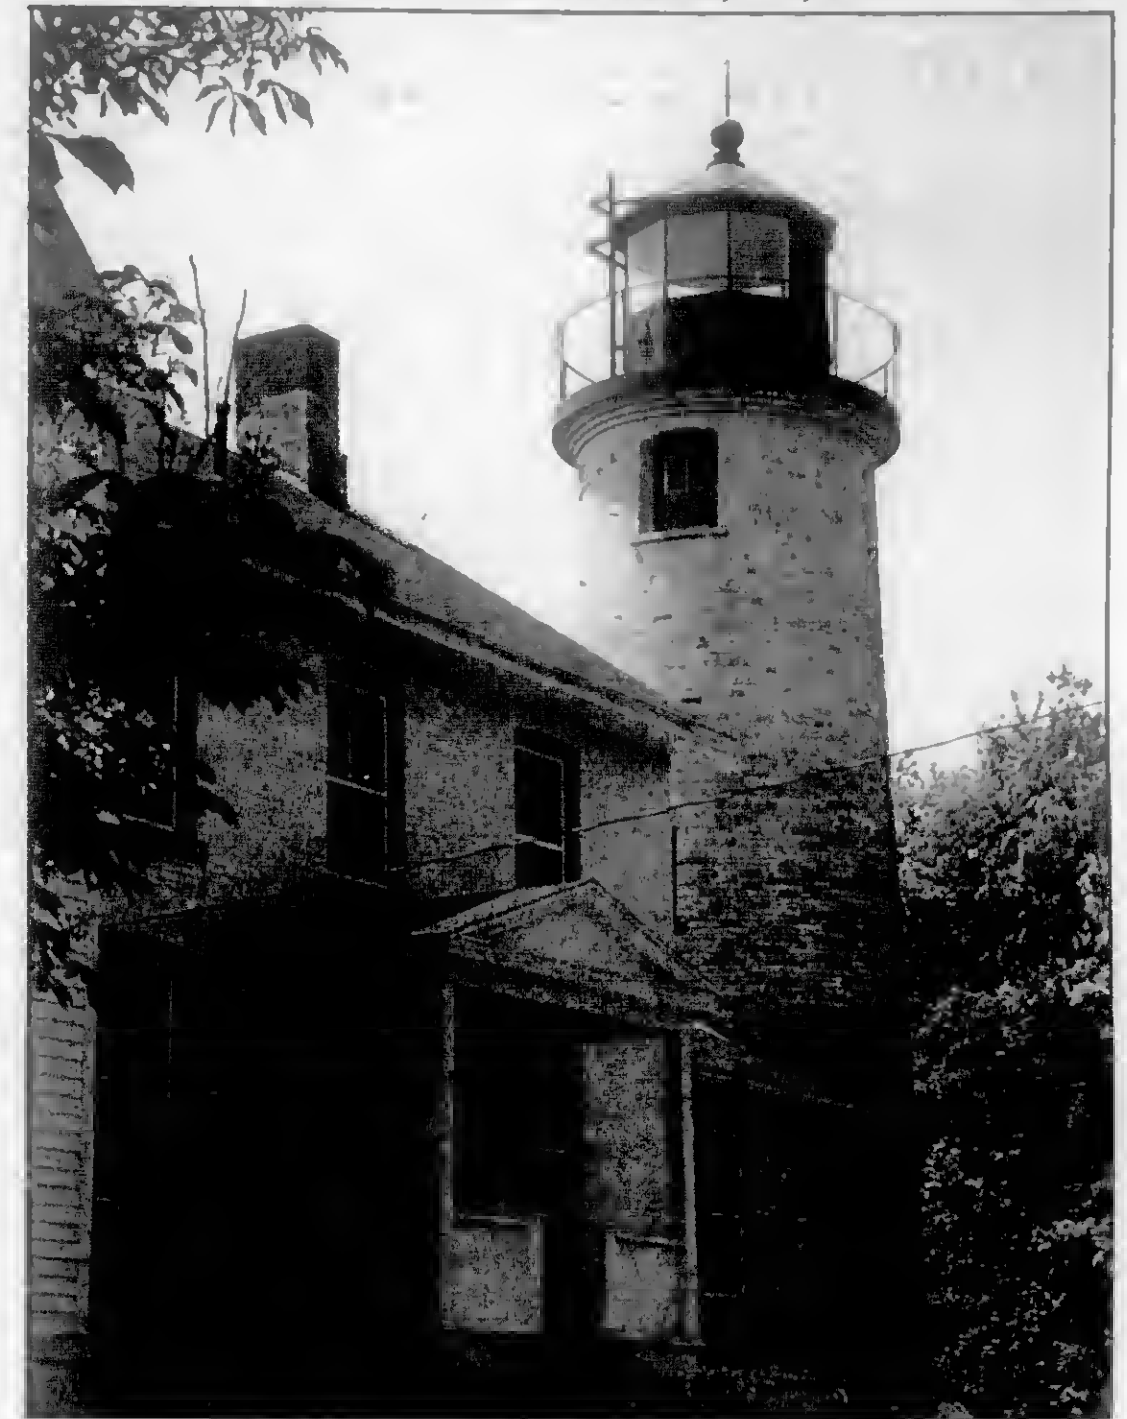

The Mormon Print Shop and the Maritime Museum, both located in St. James Township, are two museums that celebrate the island's interesting past filled with Irish immigrants and even its own king.

After touring the displays head out and see some historical spots that dot the island like, Protar's abandoned wooden home and the tomb natives built in his memory. Moore said that Feodora Protar was a Russian actor, that many years ago made his way to the island and decided he would be the local doctor.

Well, he became a local icon and when he died the islanders entombed him off of Slop Town Road.

If you are overwhelmed by the immense rock tomb equipped with flowers and an epitaph with his mug shot imposed on it, take in a breath of fresh air by hiking Keebler's trail which stretches out from the turn around where Protar's tomb is located.

Correction

In the story on page 1 of last week's edition of the Charlevoix Courier, it was wrongly reported that the last cruise ship to visit Charlevoix was 50 years ago, as was also reported by the Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce. However, we have discovered that a cruise ship, called the USS South American, did visit Charlevoix as recently as 1967. To prove this, we were given a photograph of the ship (at right) sailing into the Pine River Channel in 1967 by Charlevoix resident Gene Farkas.

Also, in the June 27 article on page 18, "Stormwater changes discussed at board meeting" the next Charlevoix County Stormwater Board of Appeals meeting was incorrect. The meeting will take place at 9 a.m. July 12 at the Charlevoix County building in the county commissioner's quarters.

Don't be stupid in your summer fun

Summertime. Just the thought of it creates images of lazy days, lounging around the beach, catching a few of the sun's rays for that awesome tan and sometimes enjoying a cool frozen drink or frosty beer.

Add to this image that of a summertime holiday vacation, like the Fourth of July, and you have a recipe for good times and lots of laughs on the boat or beach. Of course, it could also be the recipe for jail-time and lots of grief at your funeral if you are not careful with your alcohol intake.

Too many times we have to write reports of visitors and locals drinking too much alcohol and deciding they are okay to drive. Too many times we find people willing to risk their own lives and the lives of other people, just because they are too stupid to understand a simple concept like "don't drink and drive."

Some of these people think that these laws are nothing more than a game or an inconvenience on their fun.

The laws forbidding a person from driving a motor vehicle were not designed to ruin your fun. People need to realize that these laws were created to keep not only themselves, but all of us, safe on the roads in the summer, fall, winter and spring.

And these laws are not just meant for your car or truck. The same drunk driving laws also apply to the operation of a boat.

Just like with an automobile, if you drink too much alcohol and then decide to operate a boat on any of Charlevoix's surrounding lakes, you are risking jail-time or death. Modern boats are high speed machines, capable of doing a lot of damage to the driver or to other people on the lake, if used in an unsafe way.

The most unsafe of way to operate a boat is drunk.

We at the Charlevoix Courier want everyone to have a fun-filled summer in Charlevoix. We also want everyone to keep it safe.

Remember, the Charlevoix Courier has two places in its newspaper that the names of drunk drivers will be published: "On the Record" on page 2 and the Obituaries on page 8.

The culprit behind this year's poor fishing season

Roger Knutson
'Ear to the ground'

have a wonderful recipe for carp in red wine, sheephead can be much more pleasant than their name suggests and catfish are properly served as fine food in at least one of our local eateries.

The recent local trout tournament was viewed as a disappointment by many and there seems to be general agreement that fishing has been poor so far this year. Reasons abound: Water temperature too cool, global warming, unsettling weather — a different reason at the end of each launching dock.

I don't believe the problem is in the fish, it is in the exotic species and one in particular. A few years back, the Zebra Mussel arrived from Europe and established itself in the Great Lakes and adjacent waters.

They have clearly thrived. As long as three years ago, it was not possible to touch any solid bottom of Lake Michigan locally without touching Zebra Mussels — they don't attach where sand is moved by wave action. Any lure that contacted the bottom brought up with it a clump of Zebra Mussels, even from depths below 100 feet. The bottom of the lake is clearly covered with Zebra Mussels.

Just how many mussels is that? Lake Michigan is about 15,000 square miles in area and let's suppose that only about 10,000 of those are appropriate for mussel attachment. The bottom probably has, conservatively, 100 mussels per square foot. That would be almost 3 billion mussels per square mile. I am not a serious fisherman; I laugh a lot when fishing. Compared to most, I hardly qualify as an amateur. Catch and release was not a part of my upbringing. The shadow of the food-poor depression was still hovered over most of the families I knew while growing up and throwing away the food was a sin. Throwing back an edible fish still seems almost sinful to me. When our children were growing up, I taught them that if you kept it you had to eat it. Of the local dish that are widely denigrated as food, most are delicious if properly prepared. I

They get their food by filtering out the microscopic creatures in the water. If each mussel filters only a cup of water each day, those mussels are cleaning all the microscopic life out of 200 million gallons of water each day for each square mile of lake bottom. That would make two trillion gallons of Lake Michigan that are filtered free of microscopic life each day.

I am not completely sure how much water there is in Lake Michigan, but it's a safe bet that over the years since the mussels have arrived, most of the water has passed through the Zebra Mussel population.

The amount of potential fish food that has been turned in to Zebra Mussels is almost beyond belief. If a mussel weighs just 1/10 of an ounce, there could be 19 million pounds of Zebra Mussels per square mile of lake bottom. If that dramatic change does not affect the sport fishing eventually, then none of nature's laws are operating. The problem is clearly not with the native populations, but with the exotics.

One positive note: The only local fish equipped to eat Zebra Mussels is the sheephead. We better get out some new recipes.

Respect Old Glory

Editor: Memorial Day and Flag Day have come and gone this year and Independence Day and Veterans Day are still to come and all these days include the American flag as an important part of these patriotic observances.

Do you still get a lump in your throat when veterans, young and old, proudly lift "Old Glory" as they participate in local parades or when "Old Glory" is removed from the coffin of an American serviceman, properly folded and given to the loved one of his family? The American flag, whether in celebration of victory, unselfish service or devotion to duty, has always been a beacon of light, hope and the unyielding spirit that is the greatness of this country.

Isn't it ironic that the only place in this country where it is illegal to burn an American flag is in front of the United States Supreme Court building?

The American Civil Liberties Union and many other special interest groups consider the American flag "just a piece of cloth."

If it were just a piece of cloth, why would American flags be lowered to half-mast to honor the memory of someone who has died? If the American flag were just another piece of cloth, why would the United States Senate start its business day with the Pledge of Allegiance? Why would embassies fly just a piece of cloth in a foreign land? And certainly, a grateful nation would not present just a piece of cloth to the loved ones of a deceased veteran in memory of honorable service.

"Old Glory" is the most recognized national banner on the planet, by friend and foe. From Bunker Hill to Gettysburg, Saratoga to Kuwait, "Old Glory" was a constant companion and inspiration for those of us who fought for what is right.

The American flag has inspired us throughout our history, the values we fought for that make us the most respected nation on Earth, values that are vital for our children and the future of this great nation.

Editor: If you are not offended by the price we are paying for gasoline in our fair city, you are not paying attention.

On Tuesday I headed downstate on business. The price of regular at the Holiday station had "lowered" to $1.79 a gallon. Over the weekend it has been at $1.82. Anyway, I had stops to make in Lansing and in Flint while downstate. In Lansing I found regular as low as $1.47.9 and around $1.52.9 in the Flint area. In fact you don't have to go that far downstate to find gasoline prices consistently lower than Charlevoix. Elk Rapids is usually 10 cents lower and the same can be said for Traverse City.

So, what is to account for our higher gasoline prices. This is real easy: greed and gouge. There is absolutely no sense of competition between the four gasoline stations in town. Why should they be competitive? Where else are we going to fill up — Petoskey, now there is another bargain waiting to happen. When you complain or mention the price differences to the clerks at the local stations they look at you like deer in headlights or claim not to be responsible since their prices are set by someone in a different state. Now there's an explanation!

The current price difference we are paying has nothing to do about transportation costs. It does have everything to do about taking advantage of a situation. Does anyone really think that the four local stations are selling their product at or below cost? Give us a break.

What to do? Complain. Everytime you frequent your local station, complain, mention the price to the clerk, to the manager or to your neighbor. Eventually, they may catch on and start bringing their prices back into line.

Again, if you are not outraged, you are not paying attention.

Timing of hearings is wrong

Editor: It has come to my attention that the public hearings, which are required before the marina expansion can take place on Round Lake, have been set for the late fall and winter months. Was this time carefully chosen to coincide with the time when the fewest people would be in Charlevoix? Wouldn't the summer months, when there are a maximum number of Charlevoix residents, be a more appropriate time for a public hearing? I feel that the timing of the public hearings was an intentional selection so as to minimize the public opinions.

Taxation without representation

Editor: I couldn't believe my eyes; headlines in the June 13 issue of the Courier regarding millages denied, "The tax increase applied only to commercial properties and non-homestead properties in the district." Most of the commercial building owners and none of the non-residents burden the school district with their children, but they are taxed to the max: taxation without representation!

Could it be time for a "tea party" in Round Lake? Commercial property owners are the economic backbone of this community and there is so much overhead that, for some, it is hard to break even. Some are seasonal operations; why not tax accordingly?

The next time the school district wants to pass an increase in millage, they should use the "free" word. The residential turnout would be much higher than it was. At least 479 voters gave this proposed increase more thought than most. There are many commercial buildings for sale and nobody is buying. Does the city of Charlevoix assessor own property on Bridge Street?

Watch out for crime

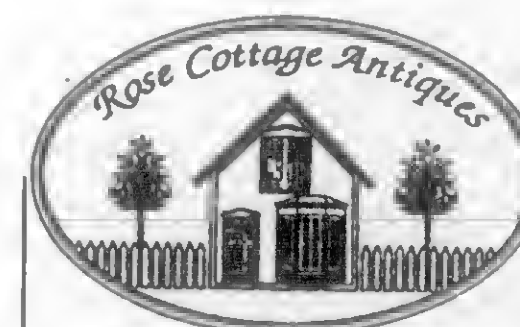

Editor: Last Friday, June 22, I was part of a shocking experience which I thought may be of interest to other Charlevoix residents. While stopping at the local Shell Station for some lottery tickets, my purse was stolen from my car in a matter of minutes. The perpetrators were two adolescent males and another even younger (possibly 6-7). The purse contained valuables and a fair amount of cash.

While I understand I am at fault for leaving a purse in an unlocked car, I am still shocked and disgusted that this would happen in our seemingly "sleepy" resort town. Added to this is the fact that after seeing the perpetrators flee the scene on bicycles, I chased and caught them and was then subjected to verbal abuse in the form of swearing. These kids even had the audacity to deny the event even happened! Needless to say, the kids did get away with everything and have not been apprehended as yet. It should be noted that city police officer Paul Ivan was prompt and courteous with both myself and the situation.

I realize that small towns are not immune to crime and I am not naive to the fact that more and more happens each year. However, I was still dismayed with the occurrence. Charlevoix residents beware, there is a marauding band of thieves on bicycles here in our wonderful town. Lock your cars and houses.

50 years of marriage

Dale and Marilyn Boss

Dale and Marilyn Boss celebrated their fiftieth wedding anniversary recently.

They were married on June 23, 1951 at the Charlevoix Methodist Church, by the Rev. George Whitten. The couple were both born in Charlevoix and were childhood sweethearts.

Their children hosted a dinner at the Argonne Supper Club and returned to their home for a program in which the children and grandchildren played a tape where they acted out a spoof of their 50 years together.

Dale graduated from Charlevoix High School in 1949 and was a milkman and insurance agent. In later years, he bought Maxbauer's Dairy and built the Village Milkhouse on Bridge Street.

He originated the Charlevoix Petunia Project in 1982 and continues it today.

Marilyn graduated in 1950. She was a homemaker all her life with the exception of the 12 years when she was a Charlevoix public school's bus driver. She was the first woman driver in northern Michigan.

She began a Christmas scene in their yard in 1987 and today has over 250 characters which she drew, cut-out and painted. Each year, new ones are added. The display, called Santa's Workshop, is lighted and has Disney Christmas music playing.

The couple have five children and two foster children.

Bible filled with stories of our connection with water

By FR. JIM GUNN, RECTOR Christ Episcopal Church,
Charlevoix

I seem to be "on a kick" lately about writing of things in our community. Last month I did a piece on the petunias and most recently one on the bridge. This time I will start with another prominent feature of our area — water!

Charlevoix is nearly surrounded by water. We have Lake Michigan all up and down one side. The community is bisected by the Pine River and Round Lake. And then we have Lake Charlevoix itself on the other side of town. We all know that these bodies of water are very important to the city of Charlevoix in terms of drawing people into our midst, either short-term or long-term.

Water is a very important element in our lives in general. I did not look up the exact figure but, if my memory serves me well, well over 75 percent of our bodies is water. Without water we would quickly die.

I wonder how often we think of the significance of water in our spiritual lives. How many people realize that the Bible starts and ends talking about water. Genesis 1:1-2 says, "In the beginning God created the heavens and the earth. Now the earth was formless and empty, darkness was over the surface of the deep, and the Spirit of God was hovering over the waters."

Beacons of Blessing

The very start of God's act of creation involves water. Then we turn to the fifth from the last verse in the Bible to once again encounter water (Revelation 22:17) — "The Spirit and the bride say, 'Come!' And let him who hears say, 'Come!' Whoever is thirsty, let him come; and whoever wishes, let him take the free gift of the water of life."

When God's redemptive purpose is fulfilled then water is a sign of the completion of salvation. All in all, the word "water" appears 482 times in the New International Version of the Bible and many of those occurrences have spiritual significance. Of course there was the water of the great flood through which Noah sailed in his ark. From that water came the rainbow that is the sign of God's care and promises.

In the third chapter of his first letter, Peter says the water of the Flood symbolizes baptism. There is the Red Sea through which the Israelites escaped from bondage in Egypt when God empowered Moses to part the water of it. There is the water of the River Jordan that was also parted to give the Israelites access to the Promised Land. Water is held up by our Lord as part of our entrance into a new and living relationship with God.

In John 3:5, Jesus said, "I tell you the truth, no one can enter the Kingdom of God unless he is born of water and the Spirit."

We do not all agree about the method of baptism or the underlying theology of it, but we do agree on the use of water. It symbolizes cleansing and being made right in the sight of God.

We should always be thankful for water and remember the part it plays in our spiritual lives. There is a part in our Episcopal service of Holy Baptism when we do explicitly offer that thanks.

I would like to quote it for you: "We thank you, Almighty God, for the gift of water. Over it the Holy Spirit moved in the beginning of creation. Through it you led the children of Israel out of their bondage in Egypt into the land of promise. In it your Son Jesus received the baptism of John and was anointed by the Holy Spirit as the Messiah, the Christ, to lead us, through his death and resurrection, from the bondage of sin into everlasting life. We thank you, Father, for the water of Baptism. In it we are buried with Christ in his death. By it we share in his resurrection. Through it we are reborn by the Holy Spirit."

God has chosen to work in special ways through water. Whenever we see water, let it remind us to offer thanks to God for His many gifts, especially life-giving water.

Alice Hetherington: Jan. 24, 1918 - June 21, 2001

Alice Hetherington, 83 of Beaver Island, died at her island residence on June 21 after a sudden illness.

She was born Jan. 24, 1918 in Indianapolis, the daughter of Theodore and Alice (Bixby) Layman and had been married to Dr. John Hetherington, who preceded her in death in 1996.

Alice had been a resident of Beaver Island for 47 years and was a devout Catholic and a member of Holy Cross Church on the island.

Her family will miss her deeply, but they are comforted in knowing she is feasting bountifully with the Heavenly Father and loved ones that have gone before her.

Alice was the mother of six children, 10 grandchildren and 13 great-grandchildren.

Mass of Christian burial was on June 22 at Holy Cross Catholic Church. The Fr. Pat Cawley officiated and interment was in Holy Cross Cemetery. Arrangements were handled by the Winchester Funeral Home in Charlevoix.

Harvard Reflections GLASS SCULPTURE

The artists have chosen to work exclusively with glass. They feel glass lends itself, in a unique way, to interior design by visually enlarging space and collecting and coordinating color.

Historically, glass accents have been the finishing touches in fine Victorian, Colonial and Traditional settings. Today, sculpture is popularized in contemporary and ART DECO environments (two favorite thrusts of the artists).

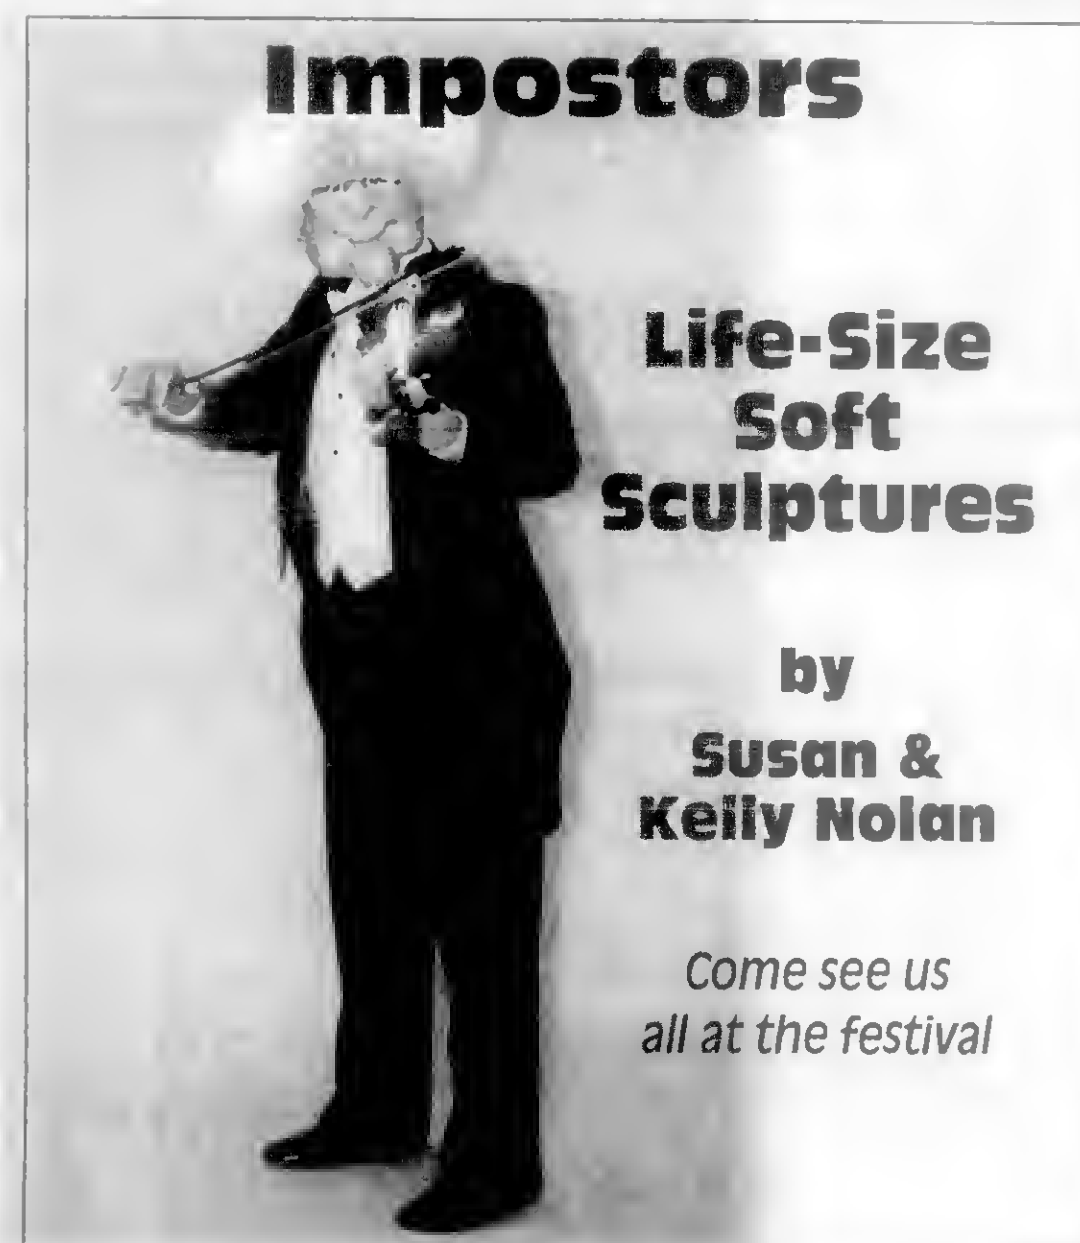

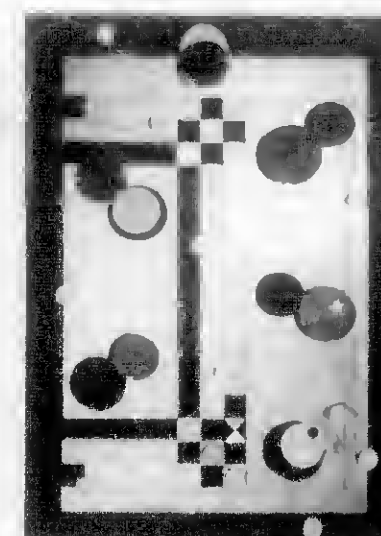

In these sculptures an emphasis on dimensional quality, contrasting textures, color accents, and optical effects, help breathe life into their work.

These sculptures brighten the walls of fine homes, galleries, and executive offices throughout the world.

Symphony challenge

Tickets for the third annual Symphony on the Green concert are now available through the Crooked Tree Arts Center.

Symphony on the Green, a benefit for the Charlevoix Area Hospital, has challenged the Crooked Tree Arts Center to sell one general admission lawn ticket for each child in the Beginning String Program. For each ticket sold at the Arts Center, half of the ticket price will be returned to support the Beginning String Program.

This year, the Traverse Symphony Orchestra's program is entitled "A Toast to Broadway."

The performance will be at 8 p.m. on July 13 at the Charlevoix Country Club. General Admission lawn tickets will be $25 per adult and $15 per student and senior citizen ages 60 and over.

The Beginning String Program is supported by the Crooked Tree Arts Center, and teaches more than 300 young students in Charlevoix and Emmet counties to play various string instruments.

Karey Johnson, Education Director at the Art Center, offers instruction. Each child's family is responsible for the rental fees charged for the instruments. The Arts Center is developing a scholarship fund sufficient to insure that every child in the program will have an opportunity to play the instrument they desire.

The General Admission ticket 50/50 challenge could generate as much as $4,000 for this program.

To benefit the Beginning String Program, tickets must be general admission and must be purchased through the Crooked Tree Arts Center office at 461 E. Mitchell, Petoskey, or by calling the Arts Center at 347-4337.

For more information about Symphony on the Green, call Charlevoix Area Hospital at 547-8502.

Healthcare Comes Home

"Mom loves her independent life, but she needs some regular assistance. We tried to be with her every day, but our work schedules and the kids' activities made that almost impossible. I worried and felt guilty just about all of the time.

Then we learned that VitalCare could help. Mom went along with the idea of having a home health aide come over three days a week to help her with laundry and light housekeeping. I stopped by the other day, and the two of them were having a great time over lunch. I am so pleased; Mom has her independence, and I have peace of mind."

Not just antiques at Rose Cottage

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

Kelly Romano and Holly Anderson-Fuchs, new co-owners of Rose Cottage Antiques and Eats and long-time Charlevoix residents, decided the best addition to the already popular antique store was Romano's pastries.

Further adding to the antique atmosphere surrounding customers, the duo created a "tea room" to enjoy the warm spiced-water from the orient and Romano's sweet gourmet pastries.

Romano's handiwork with pastries comes from her background at the Culinary Institute of New York. Her work with desserts is complimented at the Rose Cottage by Anderson-Fuchs experience in the retail business as the regional salesperson for Nine West Shoes for 14 years.

Rose Cottage offers a variety of antiques and gifts, such as soaps, books, candles and lotions.

Both say the strength of this new business is the atmosphere created by the combination of pastries and antiques. Rose Cottage, they say, is a great place to come and relax with a cup of coffee or tea and your favorite book.

So far, the reaction from the public has been great.

"It has been incredible, actually. The word-of-mouth has been great," Anderson-Fuchs said.

Rose Cottage Antiques and Eats is a season business, open from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Saturday and 12 to 5 p.m. on Sunday. It is located on Mason Street, about one block west of Bridge Street.

For more information on Rose Cottage, call 547-0636.

Son gives father a jeweled sign of his love

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

Glenn Wachler, of Orchard Lake and Charlevoix, wanted to give his father something that truly showed how much he cared about him.

So, Glenn and his brother, Link, a jeweler, worked for six months designing and creating a jewelry sculpture of Charlevoix's lighthouse. Glenn gave it to his father, Jeff Wachler, on Father's Day last month.

"We have always had a bond. I call it jewelry for the soul," Glenn says of his creation. He and his father share the same birthday, Aug. 14 and Glenn has named his son after his father. Glenn will be 37 this August, while his father will be 74.

This soulful Father's Day gift contains about 150 diamonds along with various other jewels and is worth about $15,000-$20,000. But, for Glenn, the monetary worth of the little lighthouse is meaningless.

"The real value is the message that it shares. It is nice to focus on the nice times," he

"He was always behind me. He always supported me and encouraged me."

Glenn Wachler, Orchard Lake and Charlevoix resident said. Glenn said his family has been coming to the Charlevoix area for many years, ever since his father was a young boy.

"Basically we come here to celebrate life. This is the place of the good times in our lives. A lot of the memories I have with dad are going to Michigan Beach and renting boats at Ward Brothers," he said.

For Glenn, not only was this gift a great way to remind his father of the good times, but it was also a way for him to tell his father how much he means to him.

"He was always behind me. He always supported me and encouraged me," Glenn said.

Therefore, along with the sculpture, Glenn also wrote his father a poem entitled, "And you are there" explaining the sculpture, the images contained in it and what his father means to him.

For Glenn the sculpture even has some lessons for those outside of his family. He said it can help people remember to celebrate life.

"I believe we are sharing this amazing experience (life) together," he said.

He also stressed while this gift to his father may be expensive, it does not take money to share the love you have for another human being or to give your "ultimate expression" to them.

"The wealthier a person is, in many cases, that is a hindrance for them to establish relationships. The money is a distraction," he said.

To further get this point across, Glenn said he is writing a book about his experiences and has created a website. The website can be accessed at www.gr8nrg.com.

Symphony on the Green to benefit hospital July 13

If classical music played by an orchestra wearing tuxedos is not your preferred "cup of tea," then July 13's Symphony on the Green is tailor-made for you.

For the third year in a row Symphony on the Green will be presented by the Traverse Symphony Orchestra, outside under the stars. Instead of classical music by Mozart and Bach, this year's program is "A Toast to Broadway," and will be comprised entirely of Broadway show tunes from hits such as "A Chorus Line," "Gypsy," "Fiddler on the Roof" and "Oklahoma."

The evening's performance will be directed by maestro Kevin Rhodes from Switzerland, offering songs performed by Broadway voice coach, tenor Mark Planner. Maestro Rhodes is also a concert pianist and will delight the audience by playing "Rhapsody in Blue."

Tenor Mark Planner will sing "If I Loved You," "This is the Moment," "Music of the Night," "Manhattan," and "Someone To Watch Over Me."

Other songs on the program include "Jesus Christ, Superstar," "Don't Cry For Me Argentina," "King Herod's Song" and "Memory."

A salute to New York will include selections "Lullaby," "42nd Street" and "New York, New York." Songs from "Guys and Dolls" and a tribute to George Gershwin will also be played.

Music lovers are encouraged to bring their families and a picnic dinner to enjoy on the lawn at the Charlevoix Country Club while listening to this program.

Symphony on the Green is an annual fund-raising event given rain or shine. This year proceeds will benefit Charlevoix Area Hospital's Expansion Project and the Crooked Tree Arts Council Beginning String Program.

Grounds open for seating and picnicking on the green at 6:30 p.m. The pool bar and grill will be open from 6:30-9:30 p.m. The concert begins at 8 p.m. Alcohol may be purchased on the grounds only.

Patron tickets are $200 and include a preview party with Maestro and the Tenor from 5-6 p.m., a three-course gourmet dinner, preferential tent seating and $120 tax deductible donation.

Reserved seating under the tent is $50. Seating on the Green is $25 or $15 for students and seniors. Lawn ticket holders may bring blankets and lawn chairs for their own comfort. For additional ticket information please call (231) 547-8502.

Beaver Island to see many improvements

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

Beaver Island is looking forward to major capital improvements, but St. James Township supervisor and 12 year islander Don Vyse says the changes won't compromise the island's rustic charm.

"People come here because they like the peace and tranquility of it, that's what we have to try and maintain, to keep the character rustic and nature driven but still convenient," Vyse said of the direction island development is taking.

Pothole ridden Main Street was last paved in the 1950s and Vyse said it has since been patched and patched and patched. But, six years ago the township board saw that the patching efforts had proven to be futile and they went in search of re-paving funds.

They found that "getting the funding just takes time." After a long wait, Vyse said that the Michigan Economic Development Corporation awarded the project a $1.4 million grant making this summer the time to mend beaten streets.

Re-paving a road may not seem like much of a luxury for a mainland but Vyse said that Beaver Island has never had asphalt paving. They call isolation problems related to improving the land, "the island factor."

"With 20-30 guys working, what do you do about housing. They also have to barge their equipment over which makes it more practical to do all the projects at once," Vyse explained.

To sidestep the island factor, H & D will be bringing over a portable paving plant.

Also included in Main Street changes are both light pole and sidewalk installation. The road paving, sidewalk and pole projects will stretch from the popular public beach, Jewell F. Gillespie Park, to the lighthouse located across the street from the St. James Township Hall on Michigan Avenue.

The road re-paving effort also spurred further related improvements including updates to the airport shared by Peaine and St. James townships.

Vyse explained that the Michigan Department of Aeronautics said that if some major road work was done, they would be interested in bringing the township airport up to the standard.

So, the aeronautics department will be widening the runway 25 feet, from 50 feet to 75 feet and will lengthen it 300 feet from its current length of 4,000 feet. They will also replace the airport's runway lighting and clear some trees.

The airport project is costly, but the aeronautics department has agreed to fund 90 percent of the project or $1.4 million and both St. James and Peaine townships are responsible for the remaining 10 percent.

Another popular island road is Back Highway, which will also be resurfaced. Part of the project funds were provided by the Grand Traverse Tribe and the remainder was generated from a 2 million town millage levied in St. James Township.

Island to undergo several projects over the summer PROJECTS

Vyse also said islanders are looking to the future and are protecting the lake by putting in a sewer system that will run from Jewell F. Gillespie Park on Main Street to the post office, also on Main Street. He said there are limitations as to the size of the sewer.

"To go further we would need a whole other septic," Vyse said.

The system they are putting in is similar to a big septic field. The sewage will be stored in a septic tank located on two of the township's 40 acres in the St. James Township Campground. The total cost of the sewer is $500,000, which will be paid for by a special assessment on property owners who it will service at a bond sale to take place July 11.

"That's a whole new adventure. There have never been bonds sold on the island before," Vyse said.

The Beaver Island Boat Company parking lot will also get a face lift and the Waterways Commission awarded a $1.1 million grant which will allow for dock repairs.

Projects will get underway July 9. The township plans to start the sewer and airport projects simultaneously and then move on to the downtown paving projects.

Vyse said they expect all the projects, with the exception of some Main Street landscaping which will be done in June of 2002, to be completed by Oct. 31, 2001.

"We'll have a whole bunch of projects going all at once, it's significant. It will be inconvenient but tolerate it for four months and everyone will have something we've been waiting for, for a long time," Vyse said.

HEALTH

The causes and cures of swimmer's ear

Daniel Mann, M.D.

'Your health'

Summer is finally here!

It has been slow arriving, as it is in the summer solstice as I write this article. Rest assured, however, we will definitely see plenty of those sweltering hot, humid days where everybody flocks to the lakes and swimming pools to chill off. Hand-and-hand with summer and water comes Otitis Externa, or "swimmer's ear" as it is commonly called.

This is a very common problem throughout the summer. Children far outnumber adults in infections, but it causes problems for both, interfering with sleep, jobs, family vacations and most importantly, from going swimming. All-in-all, both literally and figuratively, it can be a great pain!

We'll talk about how and why this infection arises (which entails a little chemistry for those kids on summer vacation), as well as the common symptoms, proper management and prevention.

In its most common form, Otitis Externa is inflammation of the skin or epithelium of the external ear canal. Inflammation of the eardrum (tympanic membrane) can also occur. If left untreated or in severe cases of Otitis Externa, the underlying bone can become infected.

Otitis Externa usually involves only one ear and causes a considerable amount of pain. Sometimes, however, people only have mild ear discomfort, itching or a pressure sensation. Redness, swelling and a yellowish or crusty discharge are often present in the ear canal. Generally, people have a little or no fever.

Onto a little chemistry for those people who miss being in school. The pH, or acid level, of the ear canal and ear wax (cerumen) is usually acidic. This acidic environment usually limits the growth of bacteria and other microorganisms. When on swims, the pH in a pool, lake or ocean is usually alkaline (a high pH). The resulting change in pH of the ear canal, as well as being a wet, warm and dark area, is a great climate for growing things in one's ears.

Bacteria are the usual suspects of Otitis Media, especially during the summer months and from swimming. However, not all cases of Otitis Externa are due to swimming. Infections can arise from viruses, fungi, chemicals and foreign bodies in the ear canal. Basically, anything that changes the pH or injures the ear canal can put one at risk.

For example, people with diabetes can have an alkaline pH and fungal infections are seen more commonly in these people, as well as people with compromised immune systems, such as transplant patients or those with AIDS. Otitis Externa can also be seen in those with skin disorders, such as psoriasis, seborrhea or eczema.

Trauma to the ear canal can increase one's risk of infection. Chemical irritants, such as hair sprays and dyes can alter the pH. Foreign bodies, such as corn and peas that kids are so good at getting stuck in their ears, as well as hearing aides, can cause irritation that results in infection. Finally, just bathing or showering and getting water in the canal can put one at risk.

Fortunately, treatment of Otitis Externa is usually straightforward and includes antibiotics, cleansing of the ear and pain medications. These infections can often be very painful and irritating. Usually over the counter medications, such as Tylenol and/or Ibuprofen are sufficient. Sometimes ear drops that contain pain medications are prescribed.

Cleansing the ear canal is important and sometimes the ear will be irrigated and gently suctioned to remove some of the debris in the canal. This can also be performed at home with a small amount of hydrogen peroxide.

Antibiotic drops are prescribed, which may contain a steroid and/or an acidifying agent to restore the ear's normal pH. Sometimes antibiotic eye preparations or oral antibiotics are prescribed. Finally, an earwick may be inserted into the ear canal to ensure the medication reaches all the affected areas.

Most people are feeling much better with one or two drops. However, the worst thing about these infections is that swimming is not allowed for generally seven to 10 days. Sometimes cotton balls with Vaseline are recommended for bathing.

There are several ways to hopefully prevent these infections. Good drying of ears is essential. Using a hair dryer for a short amount of time also helps. A variety of over the counter preparations are available to use after swimming. These help to dry the ear and restore the normal pH of the ear canal. A simple mixture is a half dropper full of half rubbing alcohol and half white vinegar applied after swimming.

I hope this helps you to better understand Otitis Externa. If infection occurs despite these preventative measures, please see your physician as prompt treatment often ensures a quick recovery.

Grants available through the MDEQ

Funding for water quality improvement projects is available through two separate grant programs from the Michigan Department of Environmental Quality.

The application deadline is 4 p.m., Aug. 7 for both Nonpoint Source Pollution Control grants and the Clean Water Act Section 319 grants. The Nonpoint Source Pollution grants are funded under the Clean Michigan Initiative, a $675 million environmental bond proposed by Gov. John Engler and approved by the voters in 1998.

Applications are being accepted for:

• The Nonpoint Source Pollution Control grant program. About $7 million is available for implementing processes in this third round of funding. Grants require a minimum 25 percent local match, which may include in-kind services. Funds are available to local units of government and nonprofit entities. Two categories of activities are eligible for funding: implementing physical improvements in approved watershed management plans and establishing permanent riparian conservation easements and livestock exclusion practices. Some eligible activities may require permits from the MDEQ. A grant application package is available by calling Veronica Willard at (517) 373-2867 or by downloading from the internet at www.deq.state.mi.us/swg and selecting "Grant Application Packages." For more information on the program, contact Amy Peterson at (517) 373-2037.

• Clean Water Act Section 319 grants. Projects that develop watershed management plans or implement nonphysical improvements in approved watershed plans are eligible for funding. About $3 million is available for grants to local units of government, nonprofit entities and federally recognized tribal entities. The DEQ's priority for using Section 319 grant funds this year is the development of approvable watershed management plans. Watershed planning projects require a minimum 10 percent local match, which may include in-kind services. A second category of eligible activities includes implementing nonphysical improvements in DEQ-approved watershed management practices. This category requires a minimum 25 percent local match, which may include in-kind services. An application package is also available by calling Willard or downloading it from the internet. For more information call Robert Sweet at (517) 335-6967.

For over 25 years, one hospital in northern Michigan has been leading the way in cardiac care.

Now we need your help to keep it beating strong.

In 1973, Northern Michigan Hospital in Petoskey established the first open heart surgery program in northern Michigan. Since that time, Northern Michigan Hospital has stayed on the leading edge of heart disease prevention, diagnosis and treatment. Now, we need your help. In order to expand and modernize our facilities and equipment, including renovating and upgrading our Cardiac Catheterization Laboratory, Northern Michigan Hospital is mounting its first major capital campaign in nearly 25 years. Our goal is to raise $15 million of the funding required to make the necessary improvements to maintain our exceptional level of patient care.

Stormwater focal point for environmental discussion

DISCHARGE

The MDEQ is currently in the process of reviewing the stormwater systems of municipalities across the state and are implementing a permit process to monitor the discharge. He estimated that by 2003 there will be over 300 municipal stormwater permits issued in the state of Michigan.

Martin said that if the city runs another line into the lake they would need a permit and that currently, there "aren't very many lines." He explained that water from the curbed streets runs into the storm system and into Round Lake and the rest drains into the ground.

He added that Charlevoix deals with the state and federal stormwater guidelines and that as of now, the size of the city doesn't require discharge permits be acquired.

Fife said that current regulations ask that local governments across the state do their best to minimize the impact of their system on the watershed. Three ways the MDEQ encourages impact minimization is through water testing, catch basin cleaning and street sweeping.

Both Martin and Creswell said that all three practices encouraged by the MDEQ are currently practiced regularly in Charlevoix.

In the spring, after the snow melts, sand and salt that accumulated over the winter is cleaned out and hauled out, so "it never reaches the lake." And, throughout the winter, snow is hauled out of town.

Fife also said education was a big factor. He offered the example of those who put oil into the system thinking it will be treated, without knowing it will go directly into the water.

Home Tour to feature 'something for everyone' TOUR

Don't get too caught up in the Rhode family's collections inside that you skip the great outdoors. Ray Rhode is a diligent gardener that has maintained landscaping well-suited to the charm of the home.

Continuing down Park Avenue the tour guide directs participants to the Kaufman home, located at 221 Park Avenue, on the right side of the road. According to Molter, the home was built in 1885, it overlooks the channel and is decorated with whimsical works by local artists.

With one more home left on the tour, you can break for lunch or plow through to the last stop, "Eagle's Nest."

To get to the nest take US-31 north to Boyne City Road. Turn right on Boyne City Road and drive to the Argonne Restaurant which will be on your left. Park in the Argonne lot and a shuttle will take you to the site located at 08085 Indian Trails Drive.

Nest owners Don and Ruth Van Sulichem built a Maple Island log home full of great spots to curl up with a book or bird watch. The Van Sulichems even constructed a real eagle's nest in hopes to provide a comfortable abode for one of the great birds.

Molter said that last year's tour raised almost $10,000. This year, two-thirds of the funds raised will be donated to the hospital and the remaining third will go to the Judy Edger/Sue DeYoung Breast Cancer Walk.

Tickets for the event are $15. Tickets are available at any of the five homes included in the tour, and Bridge Street stores: the Appletree, the Clothing Company and Shop of the Gulls. Tickets will also be on sale at the July 7 and 8 Charlevoix Summer Art Festival.

The final standing for the spring series

A. Nony Mouse
'Yachting notes'

Final Results — Spring Series; but, first, a special offer to sailing members who would like to try racing.

The Race Committee, at the suggestion of Ken Heininger, invites you to sail in the Jib and Main Fleet (no spinnaker allowed) and waives the race fee and full membership requirement for races one and two of the Summer Series. (If you like it and want to continue to be scored for the series, you will then need to properly register.)

Meanwhile, they simply need your name and all details about your boat, so that they may assign you a rating. If interested, call Tom Barnes, 547-5137 or Mike Miller 547-6167 or simply show up at the Club at 7 p.m. Friday to both sign up and learn the basics of the rules and starting procedures.

The JAM Fleet is a fun fleet and welcomes novices and experts alike. A couple former JAM fleet skippers are moving up to the Spinnaker Fleet leaving a great opportunity for you in this small fleet!

The Wednesday Summer Series starts July 11, as we have no races scheduled for the Fourth of July. Excepting only as provided in the above paragraph, no boats shall be scored for any races unless they have paid their race fees and are full members prior to the start of the race.

Spring Series Final Results: (position. BOAT NAME points (last race):

Powerboats are being reminded of the Beaver Island Overnight July 14 and 15, with several heading over Friday (the thirteenth!) in the evening — call Diana Hickey at 547-7777 for more information.

The Sail Fleet's LaBlance Cup Race is the same weekend and they desperately need a powerboat to start and record finish times. If interested, call Karl Juries 347-6460 — he's willing to bribe you!

Sorry, we don't have the results of the third Sunday Sunfish Spring Races, but should be able to give you those and the July 8 final Spring race results next week. There is no race July 15 as the Sunday Sunfish Summer Series starts the race.

Look for Nautical Trivia next week. We'll try to come up with something easier as responses to date are running over 90 percent wrong!

Joe and Wynne Curry will host at Charlevoix Yacht Club this Friday evening. Also, the Membership Committee invites prospective members to be their guests, so come join us for an hour or two of fun and relaxation at 209 Ferry Avenue.

Beaver Island is a great place to go for adventure

According to Moore, island lore says that Karl Keebler was a one armed islander who carved the eight mile path using just his one good arm.

Shipwreck discovery is just one more great way to spend the day. Scuba and snorkeling are the road to underwater exploration. Iron Ore Bay is home to one such wreck, an old wooden schooner that went down a while back.

The bay is referred to as Iron Ore Bay because a freighter also went down there, spilled its load and turned the bay red.

Another island tradition is climbing the Beaver Head lighthouse. Moore said that each trip around the island has to equal a trip up the old lighthouse. The lighthouse's metal, intricately designed stairs wind up to a beautiful lookout point, a staple during any island visit.

There is one more lighthouse, located off of Michigan Avenue at the end of Main Street where you can take an exterior gander of the old brick ship-saver. Then head over to the Gull Harbor Natural Area located off of Michigan Avenue and Gull Harbor Drive for a bird watching adventure. The natural area is a great spot to bird watch and hike during the day and to stargaze at night.

If none of these outings spark your interest, use your imagination and wander the island in search of your own adventure but while your exploring don't forget to wave.

Watch out for dehydration

The dog days of summer are here. With them come hot, humid weather and the perfect time for outdoor activities, summer sports and for fall sports conditioning.

But athletes beware! Hope for fun summer sports and conditioning activities can quickly evaporate in the hot summer sun if athletes do not properly hydrate themselves before, during and after a workout. Without proper hydration the body can lose water and essential elements and run the risk of kidney problems or even death.

To help athletes avoid the risks of dehydration, physicians at the University of Michigan Health System's MedSport are advising summer athletes to drink large amounts of water during their workouts, know and recognize the signs of dehydration and begin to prepare their body for its heavy summer fluids by drinking extra water during cooler times of the year.

"Athletes can get seriously dehydrated especially during the warmer summer months and also in August when the intensity of the workouts seem to increase prior to playing fall sports," Edward Wojtyls, M.D., professor, Department of Surgery, and director, Sports Medicine said. "If you do enough work in any type of weather you can get dehydrated, but when temperatures are in excess of 75 or 80 degrees and humidity is in the same range, it's easier to become seriously dehydrated."

The key Wojtyls says, is to prevent dehydration before it even begins by drinking plenty of fluids before, during and after any workout. But in any case, athletes also should be aware of what are and are not signs of dehydration.

Although thirst may seem like it would be a sign of dehydration, Wojtyls says it may not always be the case. That lack of a thirsty feeling, in fact, poses a greater problem because it is a time when the body needs fluid the most.

But when the body does need fluids, there are other signs as well. The true signs of dehydration include an uneasy feeling and a noticeable decrease in energy and performance levels. Some athletes also may develop a headache and feel achy if their body is running low on fluids.

If these fluids are not replenished at the first signs of dehydration, the body temperature can rise causing its cooling mechanism, perspiration, to slow down or stop and the athlete to pass out. Wojtyls advises that if this occurs, the athlete should be taken off the field and evaluated by a trainer or a physician immediately.

"Once dehydration starts, the deterioration can be quick making it difficult to treat," he said.

The best way to prevent that from happening is to continuously drink fluids throughout any workout, especially when heat and humidity are on the rise, causing the athlete to sweat more and deplete the body of necessary fluids and salts.

That advice is particularly important for those young athletes who are working to lose weight before their sports season starts through physical conditioning and running. It's important for those athletes to monitor their body weight before and after their workouts to avoid dehydration. Wojtyls warned that much of that weight loss is fluid and if it's not properly replenished and the athlete continues to work out, it can be fatal.

"It's not unusual for an athlete who's 160 or 180 pounds to lose five or more pounds during a work out," Wojtyls said. "We would hope that by the next morning, after having an opportunity to drink fluids and eat a healthy dinner, that most of that weight would be regained. It's the athlete who goes back out the next day and hasn't regained that fluid who's really placing himself at risk."

Coaches and parents of summer athletes also need to be aware of the dangers of dehydration and supply their athletes with plenty of fluids during games and workouts. Wojtyls suggests that coaches provide several breaks every hour and remove any athlete from the field who is exhibiting signs of dehydration and who have nausea or have vomited.

"You can't drink too much water when you are young — your kidneys are designed to be able to handle that amount of fluid," Wojtyls said. "So, if anything, we should force fluids on young athletes and have them drink as much as possible."

But drinking all of that extra fluid in the summer can sometimes make an athlete feel sluggish or bloated. So, Wojtyls recommends building up that extra hydration during the cooler months, before they actually need them, to get used to the healthier fluid load.

And to stay hydrated before, during and after a workout, athletes should drink water or a balanced salt solution like Gatorade. A balanced salt solution will work to not only meet the body's water requirements but it will also provide it with the essential elements that are lost during perspiration.

But if a Gatorade-like substance is not available, Wojtyls suggests drinking water instead and avoiding any type of soft drink or juice drink.

Although balanced salt solutions will replenish fluids and elements lost while working out, young athletes should not use salt tablets to achieve the same outcome.

Venetian team sporting events registration times

The 2001 Venetian Games will feature team sporting events that will be fun for players and spectators.

Team captains will need to register their official rosters and secure team rules, schedules and appropriate material from the City Recreation Department in City Hall (547-3253.)

Team events will begin with a 3-on-3 Basketball Tournament scheduled for July 22. The tournament, hosted by St. Mary's Church, will take place at Lake Michigan Beach. The newly paved parking lots will accommodate all the courts needed and offers the lake for cooling off and the beach for family fun.

July 23 will kick off the two day, 3-on-3 Soccer Tournament at Shannah Field. Boys, girls and adult teams will start at 6 p.m.

A co-ed beach volleyball tournament will take place July 25 on the sand courts at Ferry Beach. Teams of three males and three females are required.

Co-ed softball was changed this year to be a one-day tournament.

On July 29 teams of five players, two female, three male or vice versa will take the field. Three teams will compete at once, one up to bat, one in the field and one in the outfield.

The challenge is to outscore the other two teams in a five inning game.

4-H art to be on display at Chinese painting show

Nine Michigan counties, including Charlevoix, will be represented at the 2001 Sichuan, People's Republic of China International Children's Painting Exhibition.

Children from all over the world were invited to participate. Ten pieces of Michigan children's art were sent to China in May.

Children chose any theme for their artwork, as long as it represented something important in their lives.

Local young artist Alexis Nalbock from Concord Academy in Boyne was selected to send her art to China.

Also, recognized for their outstanding work were Zach Thorpe from Concord Academy in Boyne, Bridget Peters, Jacob Wimmer and Megan Zawisza from St. Mary's in Charlevoix.

The children's artwork will be on display at Kettunen Center near Tustin from the late fall 2001 through Aug. 31, 2002.

The China Art exchange is coordinated by Michigan State University Extension 4-H Youth Development. For more information on the 4-H Children's Art Exchange and other 4-H programs, contact the Charlevoix County MSU Extension office at (231) 582-6232.

Watch out for heart attacks

Exercising outside in hot and humid conditions can be hard on your heart.

When you head to the golf course, be aware that you too are at risk of sudden death if you have heart disease. So use caution when you head to the course.

And know the signs of a heart attack:

- Chest discomfort (ache, pressure, burning, fullness) lasting more than a few minutes
- Discomfort spreading to shoulders, neck, jaw, back or arms
- Indigestion or heartburn
- Weakness, fatigue
- Shortness of breath
- Sweating
- Nausea, dizziness or feeling faint
- Anxiety

If any of these occur, stop and rest. If the symptoms do not go away or return with activity, call 911 and go to the closest emergency room.

Permanent heart damage can be avoided only if a person seeks immediate medical attention within a few hours of the onset of these symptoms.

Members of The Healthy Heart Coalition of Northern Michigan have placed posters with these signs and symptoms at area golf courses as a reminder to all golfers.

If you would like a poster for display at your golf course or business please contact Northwest Michigan Community Health Agency at (231) 547-6523.

Cruise company sinks

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

The cruise ship Arcadia, and its charter company Great Lakes Cruises, Inc., will no longer be coming to Charlevoix, according to reports.

The charter company which set up cruises on the ship throughout the Great Lakes — including Charlevoix — has reportedly folded, according to an article in the Detroit Free Press on Tuesday.

This comes following the ship's forced docking at Windsor, Ontario, Canada by the United States Coast Guard and the Center for Disease Control after it failed health inspections on June 20 and June 30. That order was lifted Saturday, following another inspection.

The Arcadia visited Charlevoix June 21 and was scheduled for another trip on Oct. 11.

Kris Rasmussen, Charlevoix

downtown coordinator, said the Oct. 11 trip is canceled. She added there are other cruise ships on the Great Lakes that she will be looking at for next year.

Rasmussen was worked on bringing a cruise ship to Charlevoix for a while.

According to United States Coast Guard Lt. Commander Brian Hall, the ship was boarded by the Coast Guard and Center for Disease Control on July 4 to issue a "No-Sail" order and for further inspection. At that time, many of the problems found on June 20 — the day before the ship arrived in Charlevoix — were not fixed.

The ship has been barred from entering United States water until the violations found by the Center for Disease Control are taken care of, Hall said. In order to leave Windsor, the ship would have had to enter U.S. water.

Official: Marion best bet for city

By JULIE MUSILEK

Before the July 3 Marion Township Planning Commission meeting rumors that the commission planned to rezone township agricultural land to industrial were flying.

But commission chairman Tim Matchett explained that wasn't the purpose of their meeting, "those rumors are false."

According to Marion Township Zoning Administrator Bob Drebenstedt, areas currently zoned industrial in Marion Township are concentrated along M-66. The zones include the boat storage near Loeb Road, the Hoskins Manufacturing area and a couple other small pieces.

"That's all we have zoned industrial at this point," he said.

So, it would seem difficult for the city of Charlevoix to find over 40 acres of land for an industrial park. However, Drebenstedt said there is a lot of farmland out there and zoning can be changed.

And Drebenstedt said he foresees the city's industrial site located off Marion Center Road.

Sheriff to step up patrols based on citizen concerns

The Charlevoix County Sheriff's Office is offering a traffic safety concept of concentrated patrol to reduce accidents in Charlevoix County.

Any citizen of Charlevoix County who has a concern over traffic safety for any road in the county can contact Charlevoix County Sheriff George T.

Lasater for concentrated patrol consideration. The traffic safety concern may be speeders, careless or reckless drivers and drunk drivers, among others.

One or more deputies in marked and unmarked patrol units will be assigned to the concentrated patrol for designated periods of time. Once the concentrated patrol has been accomplished, the citizen or group of citizens requesting the service will be supplied with a written report concerning the number of citations issued, traffic stops made, arrests and number of patrol hours spent on the problem area.

When a person is requesting this service from the sheriff's office, please be prepared to supply: The name of the road, the nearest cross road, types of violations observed, specific facts concerning the violations — suspect names, types of vehicles — and the time of day and week the violations take place.

Lasater added this program is in addition to the regular sheriff's office patrol activities.

Requests for this service may be made to the sheriff at 547-4461. Lasater will share the request with the Michigan State Police Post in Petoskey and their units will assist the sheriff's units with these patrol requests.

Debate rages over sidewalks

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

City of Charlevoix plans to work on infrastructure projects along Belvedere and Michigan avenues are being fought by the streets' residents.

The city plans to reconstruct the Michigan Avenue roadway from Petoskey Avenue to the intersection of Division and McSaub roads.

The plans also include installation of a new curb and gutter system, an increase in the size of the storm and sanitary sewers, installation of a new water main and new street lighting.

The aforementioned changes were met with little opposition at the 5 p.m., July 2 informational meeting between city officials and residents in council's chambers at city hall.

But, residents erupted when it came to the final discussion item on the list: new sidewalk construction from 431 Michigan Avenue along the west side of the street to Division Street.

They voiced concerns ranging from the possibility of the work compromising the health of street trees to whether or not the cinder block retaining wall would fit with the neighborhood's character.

Project engineer Don Swem representing Performance Engineers Inc. of Charlevoix responded to cinder block concerns saying he may be less "fashion conscious" than the residents in attendance but he thought the block would be appropriate.

Swem added that most of the trees, with the exception of a red maple on the corner of Michigan Avenue and Crouter Street, are set far enough back from the roadway that they are in little danger.

However, Swem's assurance of tree safety and compatible cinder block work wasn't enough for many of the residents.

One such resident, Virginia Olson, told city manager Mike Wiesner if sidewalk construction begins she will fight every step of the way. She went on to call the project an unnecessary waste of tax dollars.

The total cost of the Michigan Avenue project is $573,900.

Wiesner responded to allegations of misappropriated tax dollars by saying that the object of the project isn't to save money.

"The cheapest alternative is not always the best. Our goal is to provide a good product for the public," he explained.

He said Charlevoix is a walking city and the proposed sidewalk would cater to area walkers including students. He said the addition of the sidewalk will allow Charlevoix Elementary School students to walk from downtown, all the way to school, without crossing the road horizontally.

The proposed project timetable shows bids for the Michigan Avenue project were received by the city July 10 and the city could award the bid at the July 16 city council meeting. Construction is scheduled to begin at the earliest on Aug. 13, 2001 and is scheduled to be completed by Memorial Day of 2002.

Just one hour after the Michigan Avenue meeting commenced the city's Belvedere project caught similar flack from Belvedere property owners.

Like the Michigan Avenue residents, Belvedere residents who attended were happy with most of the planned capital improvements, but when they took a vote of who was in favor of the north side sidewalk construction they tallied 20 against and only one in favor of it.

The proposed sidewalk would run along the north side of Belvedere Avenue from Bridge Street to the Belvedere Club gates.

Harbor Club resident John Pittman was the one vote in favor of the sidewalk. He said that his business partner's wife who is half owner of the condominium is confined to a wheelchair. When Pittman and his partner's family decide to go downtown they have to cross Belvedere twice to get to Bridge, both times facing high volumes of summer traffic.

However, residents said handicapped accessibility is less of a safety hazard than what would result if the sidewalk is constructed. Before attending the meeting residents counted 36 driveways on the north side where the sidewalk is proposed and seven on the south side where the sidewalk currently exists. They cited the high traffic volumes on the north side as a safety concern.

But Wiesner said that when city council decided to install the sidewalk they were addressing another safety concern — people walking in the street.

Keep your pets healthy

By JOCEY FLORENCE
Staff writer

While many humans experience discomforts such as bug-bites and sunburns, what many don't know is summer also brings its share of discomforts to their pets, some of which can be fatal.

Canine Parvovirus Infection is an example of a virus particularly rampant in the summer and potentially fatal to dogs. "Parvo," as it is called for short, is a virus that attacks the lining of a dog's digestive system and prevents it from being able to absorb nutrients or liquids.

When infected dogs are not treated properly, they can die from dehydration. Parvo affects dogs of all ages and breeds, but is especially harmful to puppies.

Parvo is a highly contagious virus that was first identified in the 1970s. In 1981, Charlevoix was hit particularly hard with the virus and over 20 cases were reported in a single year.

Now, 20 years later, the virus is back in the Charlevoix area and there have already been dozens of cases identified this year.

Dr. Matthew Greimel, of the Bayshore Animal Hospital, said that he has seen five dogs infected with the virus in this season alone.

Parvo is a virus that is transmitted through the stool of an infected dog as well as through simple dog-to-dog contact. The symptoms of Parvo include depression and lethargy, vomiting, high fevers and bloody diarrhea.

If a dog exhibits any of these symptoms, its owner should seek immediate veterinary care.

"A animal brought in during the early stages of the virus has a much better chance of survival than a dog brought in later. When a dog is brought in later, the prognosis is not as good," said Greimel.

Because Parvo is a virus, there are no drugs available that can kill it. This makes treatment more difficult than that of other infections or sicknesses.

Infected dogs are given IV's to replenish their liquid nutrients, as well as antibiotics to help build up their immune systems, which are then able to fight off the virus. When an infected dog is brought in early enough, this form of treatment can be successful.

However, if a dog is brought in after a few days of displaying the symptoms, the virus can prove fatal.

"Parvo is one hundred percent preventable," said Greimel. A vaccination against Parvo is included in the Distemper vaccination, which also includes protection against four other canine infections.

Because puppies are particularly susceptible to sickness as a result of their weak immune systems, it is especially important that they receive their Distemper shots at as early as six weeks old. Older dogs should receive the shot annually.

Celebrate your own 'Independence Day'

By FR. JIM GUNN
Rector, Christ Episcopal Church,
Charlevoix

Last week was the celebration of our national holiday, the Fourth of July.

This was the 225th anniversary of the founding of our country. Sometimes I think the significance of this holiday gets lost behind the hoopla, much like what happens with Christmas. Basically we are celebrating a proclamation of freedom - a time when we said, "This is enough; we will not go further along this path."

We are saying that we must be free from an influence and rule that was becoming increasingly onerous. We had to fight for years to bring about that freedom and there was more than one point where the outcome of the struggle was in doubt. In the end, however, those who waged the battle for freedom prevailed and a new nation "conceived in liberty and dedicated to the proposition that all men are created equal" came into being.

Each of us should celebrate our own individual "Independence Day" — our own personal "Fourth of July" (whenever it occurs) when we commemorate our freedom from the rule of the prince of this world. This would be the day when we come into a reconciled relationship with God.

This is when we receive the freedom to live with God more in the way that He designed for us in the first place. We were meant to walk with God, as Adam and Eve did in the Garden of Eden. But we put ourselves out of the Garden by our disobedience.

We thought we knew better than God as to what was good for us. We saw the fruit of earthly knowledge and found it attractive. Even though God had told us not to sample from the Tree of the Knowledge of Good and Evil, our human pride said that it was okay. We may have been "egged on" by the serpent, but the final choice was ours and it forever ruptured our relationship with God.

However, God set the way for us to come back into freedom. He sent His Son to bring into being our Independence Day.

Have you celebrated your freedom? Have you published your Declaration of Independence?

If you want to find the directions for forming your own freedom, just look in the third chapter of the Gospel of John.

Charlevoix man accused of murder to have October trial

A Charlevoix man accused of murdering an Elk Rapids man at the Charlevoix Municipal Marina in April is scheduled for trial at 8:30 a.m., Oct. 17 in the 33rd Circuit Court of Charlevoix.

Thomas Aryon Shulick, 21 of Charlevoix, is accused of first-degree murder in regards to the death of Scott Christopher Cook, 24 of Elk Rapids, on April 29 in the marina.

According to police reports, Shulick allegedly stabbed Cook in the abdomen with a knife. Reports state Cook had boated to the area with a group of friends and they were being bothered throughout the evening of April 28 by Shulick, which at one point involved a physical altercation between Shulick and a member of the group.

Early in the morning of April 29, Shulick allegedly returned to the marina, where the group was staying on their boats. Cook confronted Shulick on a dock in the marina and was stabbed, according to police.

Cook died around 4:30 p.m. that day, from the knife wound. However, police say Cook identified a man named "Tom" as his attacker before he died.

The two men did not know each other before that night.

A hearing on various motions in the case has also been set for 9 a.m., Sept. 20 in the circuit court.

Charlevoix deputy honored for his service to citizens

Charlevoix County Sheriff

Deputy George Robert Lasater was recently recognized by the Michigan Sheriff's Association for outstanding service to the citizens.

Specifically, Lasater was recognized for his actions on Jan. 3, 2000 while assisting the East Jordan Police Department at a trailer where a subject was threatening to take his life with a large knife or stab any police officer that confronted him.

East Jordan Police Officer Dan Reece and Lasater confronted the individual, secured the scene and talked with the man, attempting to reason with him. Both officers requested assistance. The man eventually surrendered the knife.

Before he could reach additional knives, which were on the banister of the deck, he was subdued. The man was arrested and lodged in the Charlevoix County Jail.

Lasater and Reece were recommended for the award after confronting the knife wielding man and for using good judgment, organizing and coordinating the negotiations and their restraint and controlling of the situation. Sheriff George T. Lasater said.

Sheriff Lasater presented the award to his son, Deputy Lasater, at the annual Michigan Sheriff's Association conference recently.

Artistic fun

The second annual Downtown Charlevoix Art Festival, that took place July 7 and 8, featured a handful of musicians, including (left) Stephan Mikés, a sitar world jazz musician. Mikés had a front row booth facing Bridge Street from where he played and sold CDs. (Below) This artist removes a metal sun sculpture from his booth for a customer anxious to purchase his work. For over 25 years, one hospital in northern Michigan has been leading the way in cardiac care.

Now we need your help to keep it beating strong.

In 1973, Northern Michigan Hospital in Petoskey established the first open heart surgery program in northern Michigan. Since that time, Northern Michigan Hospital has stayed on the leading edge of heart disease prevention, diagnosis and treatment. Now, we need your help. In order to expand and modernize our facilities and equipment, including renovating and upgrading our Cardiac Catheterization Laboratory, Northern Michigan Hospital is mounting its first major capital campaign in nearly 25 years. Our goal is to raise $15 million of the funding required to make the necessary improvements to maintain our exceptional level of patient care.

Council ponders sidewalks on Belvedere, Michigan

SIDEWALKS

Other than safety issues, the Belvedere group voiced a concern related to business that is unique to the Belvedere project.

As of now the proposed timetable shows the earliest construction start date to be Sept. 4, 2001. But Gary Anderson, owner of the Gray Gables Inn and restaurant said September is too early and if they are to go through with it his sales will fall by 25-30 percent across the board.

"I don't think it's necessary to have this disruption until late October. Give me, the taxpayer, the choice not him (the contractor). That contractor will only be here for that job. I'll be here a long time," Anderson said to Wiesner.

But Swem explained that a later start would limit the scope of the project.

"Waiting until October really restricts the contractor's ability. Frozen dirt is a major problem. It's hard to do a good job in really bad weather conditions," Swem said.

The total cost of the Belvedere project is $471,500.

After the Belvedere meeting residents attended the 7 p.m. council meeting and voiced their concerns to council, the body that made the project decision. Council made no official decision on the matter at the July 2 meeting.

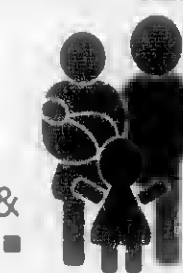

Another meeting between the contractor, city officials and residents is tentatively scheduled to take place in early August.

Venetian raises about $200,000 for this year

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

How much do you think it would cost to put on a week-long festival featuring two nights of fireworks, 28 bands, a carnival, a craft show, a kids day, a parade, team sporting events and more?

Your answer was most likely much higher than the $200,000 it costs local non-profit group, Charlevoix Venetian Festival Inc., to pull it off. The local festival's $200,000 budget is just a fraction of Traverse City's Cherry Festival expenses which are over $2 million.

"We do extensive fundraising to provide this caliber of activities and events. We host the largest fireworks display in northern Michigan," president of Charlevoix Venetian Festival Inc., Dan Barron proudly said.

Barron explained that the majority of the festival's funding is generated through donations made by local clubs, organizations and businesses; and through events, like the carnival, the boat raffle and the craft courtyard.

This year also marks the first time residents and visitors can dine and donate. Area restaurants will have stickers on receipts given to their customers that offer the option of donating to this year's festivities.

He added that when the Chamber of Commerce was in charge of coordinating the festival, the carnival was their main source of revenue. He said that even now carnival funding is a top money maker with the current Venetian group receiving a percentage of the carnival's gross sales.

"We receive more bang from a buck than any other business or organization in northern Michigan...."

Dan Barron,
Venetian Festival president

In looking to the future, Barron said the group hopes to get national corporate sponsorship like what Century Tel is for this year's Cherry Festival. To get a corporate sponsor, the group has to be able to show the results of their product.

Barron described these results as, "demonstrating what we can deliver, that is the quality of what the festival generates and the number of people it brings in."

The budget may seem small but it only accounts for money spent, not the money the group saves. The Venetian coordinating team has an amicable relationship with the city who donated $15,000 to this year's event and doesn't charge a fee for the use of East Park for concerts, the craft show or fireworks seating nor do they charge for use of Mason Street for the carnival.

The festival committee also uses the fireworks barge free of charge and aren't required to pay a fee for its winter storage.

Barron is also saving big bucks by heading up an army of volunteers, so the group has no salary overhead. Barron himself averages 10 to 20 hours every week to make the festival a reality and right now, as Charlevoix approaches the 71st festival celebration, he is logging 30 hours every week.

The savings are passed along to the consumer in the way of free participation in almost all of the Venetian events including the live concerts and fireworks — the two factors that cost the organization 50 percent of their budget.

"We receive more bang from a buck than any other business or organization in northern Michigan which reflects the fact that the festival is a community institution that most people in town hold near and dear. We've got a great community with civic-minded people," Barron said.

Those who would like to help out with this year's festival can contact Barron at (231) 547-9950.

Man arrested as part of assault investigation

Charlevoix County Sheriff's Deputies arrested a 24-year-old man as part of an investigation into a series of assaults that took place during the early morning hours on July 7 in a field near Maple Grove and Dalton roads in Hayes Township.

Deputies were contacted initially by several Charlevoix teens who advised that they were attending a bonfire with other friends when an uninvited subject arrived. This subject soon became unruly and threatened all in attendance with his knife and repeatedly struck them with his fists and kicked/hit their vehicles. He bragged about being out on parole and that he would kill them all.

Deputies determined the identity of the 24-year-old suspect and located him less than two hours after the first victims reported being assaulted.

The suspect was located on Webster Bridge Road by Charlevoix and Antrim County deputies. He was arrested without incident.

He has initially been charged by the Charlevoix County Prosecutor with a felony offense of Carrying a Weapon with Unlawful Intent. He has also had a hold placed by the Michigan Department of Corrections and was also cited for transporting open alcohol in Antrim County.

The subject is expected to be charged as a habitual offender due to a prior home invasion conviction as well as additional assault and damage to vehicles offenses.

His name is being withheld pending his arraignment in 90th District Court. The Sheriff's Office was assisted by the East Jordan Police Department.

Health care forum to be at Senior Center on July 12

A public forum on long-term Health Care will be from 7 to 9 p.m. on July 12 at the Charlevoix Senior Center (Norwood Road and Carpenter Street).

Industry representatives will be available for presentations and a question and answer period. The public is invited. This community service is sponsored by The Michigan Association of Retired School Personnel, Charlevoix County Chapter.

Star School reopens six months after break-in

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

July 8, just six months after a group of vandals broke into the Eveline Township Star School community building and reeked havoc, the doors were reopened.

On Dec. 23, 2000 a group of East Jordan teens broke into the community facility and destroyed everything from chalkboards to the antique toilet in the building's bathroom.

Even though the boys confessed to the crime and were duly punished, the school was left in shambles. According to Star School board secretary Gail Farley the damage from the December evening escapade exceeded $10,000.

Farley said that being a non-profit, she feared it wouldn't be easy to get the building back in working order, but soon found that many northern Michigan communities were ready to step in.

"We received a lot of private donations from people who have never even been to the schoolhouse. One lady walked up and handed me $1,000. I was really surprised," Farley said.

On Feb. 3, the group hosted a spaghetti dinner at the East Jordan Middle School that raised $2,313 in sales and donations. They followed up their successful dinner with an auction on March 25 in Boyer City that featured numerous donated items from area businesses and private citizens.

Even former Star School students joined in. East Jordan Middle School students raised over $400 to revamp the building.

In a letter written by Gail's husband Gene, he states, "The act of caring (by the East Jordan students) shows you can't judge all kids by the thoughtless acts of a few."

Beyond the cash donations the group also came upon some amazing deals. Farley said her favorite story is the group's new toilet.

The vandals had smashed the antique latrine that once graced the Star School bathroom with a sledge hammer and Farley cringed when she found its modern replacement would cost $1,100.

Aside from the cost, Farley said she wanted something more original that would fit the school's bucolic setting. The next thing she knew, in walked a plumbing saleswoman who said, "I know where you can find one of those old toilets."

She pointed Gene and Gail to Atlanta, Mich. and they found a toilet that matched the one the school had before. The Atlanta plumbers said they had been trying to give "the thing" away for years but no one would take it.

So the bathroom was soon back in working order but something was still missing. The music that once filled the air at the Star School was also destroyed by the vandals who took a tire iron to the antique wood carved piano with ivory keys that sat in the corner of the one room schoolhouse.

A Traverse City family stepped up and donated an antique organ that they had bought at an auction. The organ was made in Ontario in 1880.

The vandals also broke antique benches leaving the facility without seating space. The Eveline Township Hall stepped in after a clean-up and donated old-fashioned chairs.

"It has been remarkable what people have done. People saw this and were upset. It's amazing what we have come up with. I'm overwhelmed," Farley said.

Farley added that tears shed after the December incident have been dried and the school is looking forward to getting back into the swing of things. Upcoming events that will be held there include: a carnival July 14, cake walks, simulated school days and Christmas and Halloween celebrations.

"We are running late, but we'll have it all this year," Farley said.

BASES was considering relocation to old church

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

Scott Kelly, director of Bay Area Substance Education Services (BASES), was recently looking into a new Bridge Street location for the teen center, but his plans did not work out.

Kelly wanted to relocate the center from its current location at 208 West Lincoln to Bethany Lutheran Church at 1407 Bridge Street which is being rebuilt in Charlevoix Township.

"In the future we would be only one block from grades five through eight. And, we would be on the main drag, there would be more public visibility," Kelly said.

He had the finances all worked out and was ready to make a move when the church found another buyer.

"I guess now we'll stay put and fix up our current location," Kelly said.

He added that because the price of Bridge Street property is so much higher than more remote locations, the center was able to save some money. With the extra money he plans to rewire, drywall, heat and insulate the West Lincoln building and still "worry less about money."

Pastor Mike Teuscher of Bethany Lutheran Church refrained from divulging the name of the new buyer, but did say that if everything checks out, the closing on the Bridge Street property will be in August.

Teuscher expects to be in the new Bethany Lutheran Church located off US-31 North across from the Charlevoix Community Pool some time in October of 2001.

"We are getting there, but we are still a little way off," Teuscher said.

The new facility is about 11,000 square feet, as opposed to the 2,500 square foot Bridge Street location that Kelly was interested in.

Rhodes to be conductor for 'Symphony'

Charlevoix Courier Wednesday, July 11, 2001 - PAGE 21

Kevin Rhodes, Music Director of the Traverse Symphony Orchestra, will be conducting the orchestra at the third annual Symphony on the Green, Friday at the Charlevoix Country Club.

Recognized as a "highly accomplished conductor" by Opernwelt, an industry authority publication, Rhodes achieved a remarkable level of international success.

He completed five seasons as staff conductor for the Basel Stadttheater of Switzerland, where he led between 60 and 70 performances a year with the Theater's two resident ensembles The Basel Symphony Orchestra and the Basel Radio Symphony.

During his tenure with the theater, Rhodes conducted 20 different productions including five premieres and six important revivals. Based on successful guest engagements, he was appointed Principal Ballet Conductor for the Vienna State Opera, and Resident Conductor for the Deutsche Opera am Rhein in Dusseldorf beginning in 1971.

Rhodes began his professional conducting career at the age of 16 in his hometown of Evansville, Indiana. He received his bachelor's of music in piano performance from Michigan State University where he studied conducting with Maestro Leon Gregorian and earned his masters of music in orchestral conducting at the University of Illinois under the tutelage of Paul Vermel.

As a pianist, Rhodes was the 1980 winner of the Evansville Philharmonic Concerto Competition, and Principal Pianist of the New Mexico Symphony.

This past season, in addition to his work in Vienna and Germany, he conducted "Sleeping Beauty" and "Swan Lake" with the Berlin State Opera and returned to the Basler Festival Orchestra for which he has been named Principal Guest Conductor. As of June 2001, he will be the new music director and conductor of the Traverse Symphony Orchestra.

Way was also re-elected board treasurer, this will be his fifth year in the position.

There were no other board nominees for the aforementioned offices.

Laugh, Lunch and Learn announces summer series

The new luncheon venture in town, the "Laugh, Lunch and Learn" series, has announced the menu for four summer events.

According to organizers, the spring series was so successful that public interest prompted a second series for the summer.

On July 18, the luncheon is "Laughter is the Best Medicine." The central theme is to enjoy people and life by using humor and laughter for a healthful lifestyle. The featured speaker is humorist Jack McNamara, a professor from Ferris State University.

On July 25, the focus will be "Successful Parenting and/or Grandparenting." Celia and Scott Kelly from Hazelton of Minnesota and BASES of Charlevoix will share their expertise regarding the issues of drugs, school violence and pregnancies facing teenagers.

On Aug. 1, a panel of experts will discuss "Projecting a New Image, Perhaps Even Cosmetic Surgery." Questions will be answered regarding eye surgery, face lifts, hair transplants and liposuction.

On Aug. 15, the public is invited to bring their children to a "Formal Tea Party." It will be organized and directed by tea party expert, Mary Ann Beaumont and friends.

There is no cost to attend any of the sessions. The cost of a buffet lunch is $8.95 and the public is invited.

Each session is from noon to 1 p.m. at the Charlevoix Country Club.

Industrial site best bet in Marion, Drebenstedt says

INDUSTRY

say they will locate the site off of Marion Center Road. That's nothing official, but it's just the general talk — it will be where they can plug into the sewer line," Drebenstedt said.

He added that the city is not confined to keeping their search on the north side of the school.

"They don't have to stop on the north side of the school, they can extend farther south from the school and extend the sewer. There are lots of big acreages south of that school, towards Ellsworth. If they can run it to the school, they can run it a half mile further," Drebenstedt said.

He explained that those interested in a zoning change get the ball rolling by bringing their request before the planning board. At that meeting the interested party must be able to show the board that the majority of the adjoining property owners are not in opposition to the proposed use.

Changes to the township zoning ordinance were discussed at the meeting. The proposed changes may allow for more pole barn storage buildings to be erected and may change the lot/width ratio.

The first proposal initiated by the planning commission is a change to the lot depth, width ratio. Matchett said if the proposal is adopted lots could be longer and narrower.

He added that the new ratio size will not affect lot size requirements because the ratio applies to the agricultural district where density rules the pattern of land use, not lot size. In Marion Township homes are required to be clustered to control for density.

The second proposal addresses special use permits and pole barns. If the proposal goes through, pole building storage will be allowed in the agricultural district with a special use permit.

Matchett said that the special use permit process allows the planning commission to look at each proposed site on a case by case basis.

If the proposal is adopted the pole buildings will also need to follow these four conditions — the building itself has to be a neutral color, items to be stored must be contained within the building and the main activities going on must be related to incidental storage of the items. The group is still working out the wording of the fourth condition which looks to eliminate the presence of mini storage. Their aim is to make sure the buildings are owned by individual people.

Before either of the changes become the letter of the law the proposals have to be reviewed by the Charlevoix County Planning Commission and the Marion Township Board.

Matchett said at 7 p.m., July 10, the planning commission will have a public hearing to discuss language involved in issuing special use permits. The meeting is taking place as a result of settlement issues the township faced after issuing the Charlevoix School District a special use permit for the new high school located off of Marion Center Road.

Arcadia issued 'No-Sail' order

CRUISE

According to a press release issued by the Center for Disease Control, problems were first found on the ship back in May, before it arrived in the United States. During an inspection of the ship by CDC staff, "numerous deficiencies were identified with the vessel's portable water system, galley and food provision areas."

An unannounced inspection was conducted by the CDC on June 20 when the ship was in Wisconsin. Again, multiple deficiencies were found.

According to the CDC, the Arcadia scored 59 out of 100 points — 86 is passing. Among the problems officials found, they documented refrigerated food stored at 56 - 58 degrees — 41 degrees is acceptable — and pots, pans and other dishware heavily soiled with grease and food residue.

Officials gave the ship seven days to correct these problems.

The ship was inspected again on June 30 in Detroit and the problems still existed. A "No-Sail recommendation" was issued at that time. The ship's captain and the president of the charter company Great Lakes Cruises, Inc., Ralph Diehl, told CDC officials they would "immediately comply with the 'No Sail Recommendation.'"

However, on July 2, the ship sailed from Detroit to Windsor where it picked up passengers and proceeded to sail in Canadian waters. When the ship sailed to Detroit, it was met by CDC officials and the United States Coast Guard.

Hall added the ship's crew and captain were very cooperative and "extremely professional."

Great Lakes Cruises' Diehl was unavailable for comment.

Jacqueline Merta, president of the Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce, would not comment on the matter at this time. She said she would like to talk to the Center for Disease Control and the United States Coast Guard before she does.

Host families needed for Belgium orchestra

The Symfonisch Jeugdorkest Edegem of Heverlee, Belgium will visit Charlevoix from July 24 through July 27 as part of the Burt Lake International Exchange Program and in conjunction with the Charlevoix Venetian Festival.

Members of the 70 piece orchestra will stay in private homes while visiting Charlevoix, according to Raphael Rittenhouse, chairman of a committee making arrangements for the group's visit.

While in Charlevoix, the orchestra will perform one concert. The concert will be at 7:30 p.m., July 25 in the Odmark Pavilion in East Park. There will be no charge to attend the performance.

The Belgian orchestra is one of 13 European musical groups that will visit Michigan during 2001 as part of Blue Lake's International Exchange program.

Groups or individuals willing to host can contact Rosemarie or Jessica at 547-9950.

Florence joins Courier to get journalism experience

FLORENCE

United States and abroad, she always returned to Charlevoix in the summer.

"I haven't missed a summer. I love it up here. The minute you step off the plane you can get a friendly feeling. It's the only constant place I've had moving around so much," Florence said.

Florence has been coming to Charlevoix since she was born. In 1921 her great-great-grandfather built the home in the Belvedere Club where she spends her summers. Joining her at the home this summer are her two younger brothers, Bennett and Nicky.

She looks forward to working at the paper this summer to extend her writing skills. She will write one to two stories for the paper each week.

This fall Florence will begin her senior year at Mamaroneck High School in New York where she is the editor of the entertainment section of the school newspaper and is the editor of the yearbook.

She boards her plane en route for New York Aug. 3 to condition for the fall field hockey season.

In the fall of 2002 she plans to attend one of 10 liberal arts schools she's currently scouting.

Charlevoix Courier Editor Jeremy McBain said Florence is a nice addition to the Courier staff.

"Jocey (Florence) has great potential as a journalist. This internship gives her a chance to try her hand at the field and gain valuable experience," McBain said.

Craft show to be in park this weekend

Combine one of the most picturesque settings in the state with a gathering of over 150 craftsmen and women from throughout the United States, an open-air atmosphere and the result is Charlevoix's Thirty-third Annual Craft Show.

The Craft Show will be offered over two days, from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. on Saturday and 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Sunday.

All available spaces in Charlevoix's grass terraced waterfront parks will be filled by artisans displaying a variety of crafts — wooden furniture, birdhouses, pottery, jewelry, quilted works, toys, original folk art, baskets, hand woven rugs, dried florals and herbs, hand-painted clothes, Native American beadwork, decoys, dolls, stained glass and holiday items are just some of the crafts that will be sold.

SCRAPBOOK

Writer shares memories of a simpler Charlevoix

Marilyn Boss

'Days gone by'

As I was relaxing on the porch yesterday, I listened to remarks about the amount of traffic downtown, the difficulty in getting across town and how full the sidewalks were. It brought back memories of quieter times, slower times, in our little town.

In 1952, summer was busy, but not near so rushing as today. When Labor Day came, everyone went back to their homes in the cities and you could literally shoot a gun down Bridge Street and not hit a vehicle. It happened over night.

We all had seven digit phone numbers instead of the two and three digits we had previously. Charlevoix had the prefix of "Liberty seven" and Boyne City was "Junction two," East Jordan was "Lenox six" and Petoskey was only four digits at the time. I assume that may have been because Michigan Bell Telephone was located there. Later, they became a seven digit number area, with the prefix of "Diamond seven."

Fifty years ago, people took more time to enjoy each other's company. Quite a few Charlevoixians would take the family in their car and park downtown on Bridge Street in the evening to talk with others walking by.

Courtesy in driving habits used to be the norm. Today, it's everyone for himself. Defensive driving is a must today if you want to survive. Progress brings an end to the slower pace we used to enjoy. Of course, in looking back, we must also think of the automated things we have today, which we have grown so used to.

Back then, if a man was going to an auction sale, he would say to his banker, "I'm going to a sale tomorrow, so please cover my check for me if I find a large purchase. I'll be in to see you in a day or two to make arrangements to cover the check." The banker would agree.

I believe that deep down, people still want personalized service, as evidenced by the number of small banks that are starting up in smaller communities. They want more than being a number in a big institution's computer.

In 1952, as listed in the Charlevoix telephone directory, there were two attorneys in town. They were C.M. Bice and Floyd A. Supp. Today there are dozens. In the old days, of course, it was very seldom that anyone needed an attorney, as it was almost unheard of for anyone to sue because everyone in town was your friend and neighbor. If a man had too much to drink in the local tavern, the policeman would drive him home and make sure he got in the house. If someone mailed a letter addressed to the treasurer of the Masonic Lodge, it would get delivered instead of being shucked out by a computer. If you were a little short on cash, your friendly neighborhood grocer would charge what you needed until you could pay for it.

Many times a carpenter might end up building or repairing something for the person they owed money to. If you wanted to build a house or garage or a business of any kind, you didn't have to get permission from anyone, as there was no zoning. All you had to do was line-up where you were going to get your financing and in many cases money was borrowed privately from individuals who would rather lend it out to others than put it in the bank.

In 1952, there were seven new car dealers in town, plus the independent used car dealers. Skip Krahnke owned the Cadillac and Oldsmobile sales, Chuck Cooper, the Pontiac Sales, Fochtman and Cook from Charlevoix Oil Company had the Chevrolet dealership, Louie Wallace, the Packard sales, Northern Auto Company had the Ford and Mercury, Ben Brown had the Dodge and Plymouth, and Bud Klooster and Howard Ouderkerk owned the Hudson sales.

There were two banks at the time, the Charlevoix County State Bank at 225 Bridge and Charlevoix State Savings Bank at 217 Bridge. Charlevoix had three summer camps listed in the phone book; Camp Charlevoix, Camp Q-Gull and Camp Ta-Wa-Ma-Na.

The county government had 11 places you could call for help and today there are 47. City government had 11 telephones and today they have 31. In the real estate section of the phone book, only two are listed, which were the Belding Real Estate at 109 Bridge and Earl A. Young at 224 Bridge.

Another nice feature of the closeness of the small town, was that when any businessman died, every other business in town would put a card in the window, saying they were closing for the funeral. Quite often, when salesmen would travel through the town, they would find it locked up, as this was the custom. They even close the city hall and the courthouse.

It is great to reminisce about old times and customs, but things do change, some for the better and some for the worse. One thing we know for sure, Charlevoix is the greatest place to live and it is important to ensure that it remains that way. It takes involvement and constant vigilance to keep it unique.

Venetian Fest ready to go

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

City officials and Dan Barron, president of Charlevoix Venetian Festival Inc., said all systems are go for the 71st Annual Venetian Festival, a week-long celebration packed with activities, fireworks, music and more.

"Everything is running smoothly so far, plans are pretty well in place. Our entire organization is quite excited, our adrenaline is pumping," President of Charlevoix Venetian Festival Inc., Dan Barron said.

He explained that one of the benefits to the organization in the planning process is their involvement over the past three years.

"A lot of the nuts and bolts are in place long before the festival comes to fruition," he said.

He said that the city has also been closely involved which has helped ease the burden of the planning process. City Manager Mike Wiesner said that the city and the Venetian organization are closely involved. The Venetian games and entertainment take place on city property.

Wiesner said meetings have included planning for everything from trash and porta potties to permits for fireworks.

City land means that city police are brought in to serve and protect. When city police chief, Dennis Halverson was asked if the force is prepared he admitted it's tough to say.

"We never know if we are ready until we are done with it," he said.

Halverson added that he steps up enforcement by putting more city officers on duty and by enlisting the help of county police officers and state police officers.

The most common violations during the festival are related to traffic congestion and alcohol issues.

Barron said that some details and time frames still need working out but those always wait until the festival is here.

The festival kicks off at 7 p.m. July 22. The festival ends with two days of fireworks on July 27 and 28.

"The fireworks are a must see once again," Barron said.

Plans to be presented for DME site cleanup

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

The first major steps toward cleaning up groundwater contamination at the site of Charlevoix's DME Company located at 06342 Ferry Road are being taken.

Engineers representing DME Company will meet with engineers and environmental analysts representing the Michigan Department of Environmental Quality (MDEQ) July 21 to discuss the direction cleanup efforts will take.

"(At the meeting) They need to demonstrate that they are ready to go. By fall they need to be ready to work. We'll step in if we have to. There can't be another year with the plume discharging into the lake (Lake Charlevoix.) What we want to stop is the impact on the lake," Elaine Pelc, environmental analyst with the Gaylord post of the MDEQ said.

The company disposed of the degreasing solvent containing tetrachloroethylene (PCE) improperly and contaminated the site and the lake. Some people want to know why they are still using it.

Pelc admitted that even though there is no state or federal law banning its use, she is surprised DME is still using a solvent containing PCE.

"Many individuals have done away with the solvent PCE. It's so troublesome to handle. I do credit them for using the best technology to handle and use it in the manufacturing process," she said.

Pelc added that the new technology uses less of the solvent and that DME is no longer disposing of the spent substance in the ground, but is containing it and shipping it off to be recycled or incinerated.

Local man partners on hovercraft project

By JOCEY FLORENCE
Staff writer

By next summer, the ride from Charlevoix to Chicago might become significantly shorter if hovercrafts start patrolling the shores of Lake Michigan.

David Smith, Charlevoix resident and retired U.S. Coast Guard commander and David Daly, a retired banker of Indian River and a former resident of England, are currently creating L.M. HoverLink, which would provide hovercraft service from Chicago to different towns in northwest Michigan.

"The hovercrafts would enable people from Chicago to visit their second homes in the winter or to come up north to ski. People from around Charlevoix could go down to Chicago for weekend getaways or shopping excursions," Smith said. He, and his partner, want to bring two of the crafts to the area for this service.

Hovercrafts ride 13 feet above the water, which allow them to travel over ice in the winter. Because of this unique capability, Smith and Daly plan on providing service to Michigan year-round, instead of just in the summer. They hope this will encourage tourism for the area in the winter, the season that has traditionally been slow for businesses.

Smith and Daly hope to be in operation as soon as next summer. They also hope to collaborate with other transportation companies in the area, such as the Beaver Islander, and have the hovercrafts serve as feeders into other ferry services.

Smith has already considered a dozen possible locations at which the crafts could land.

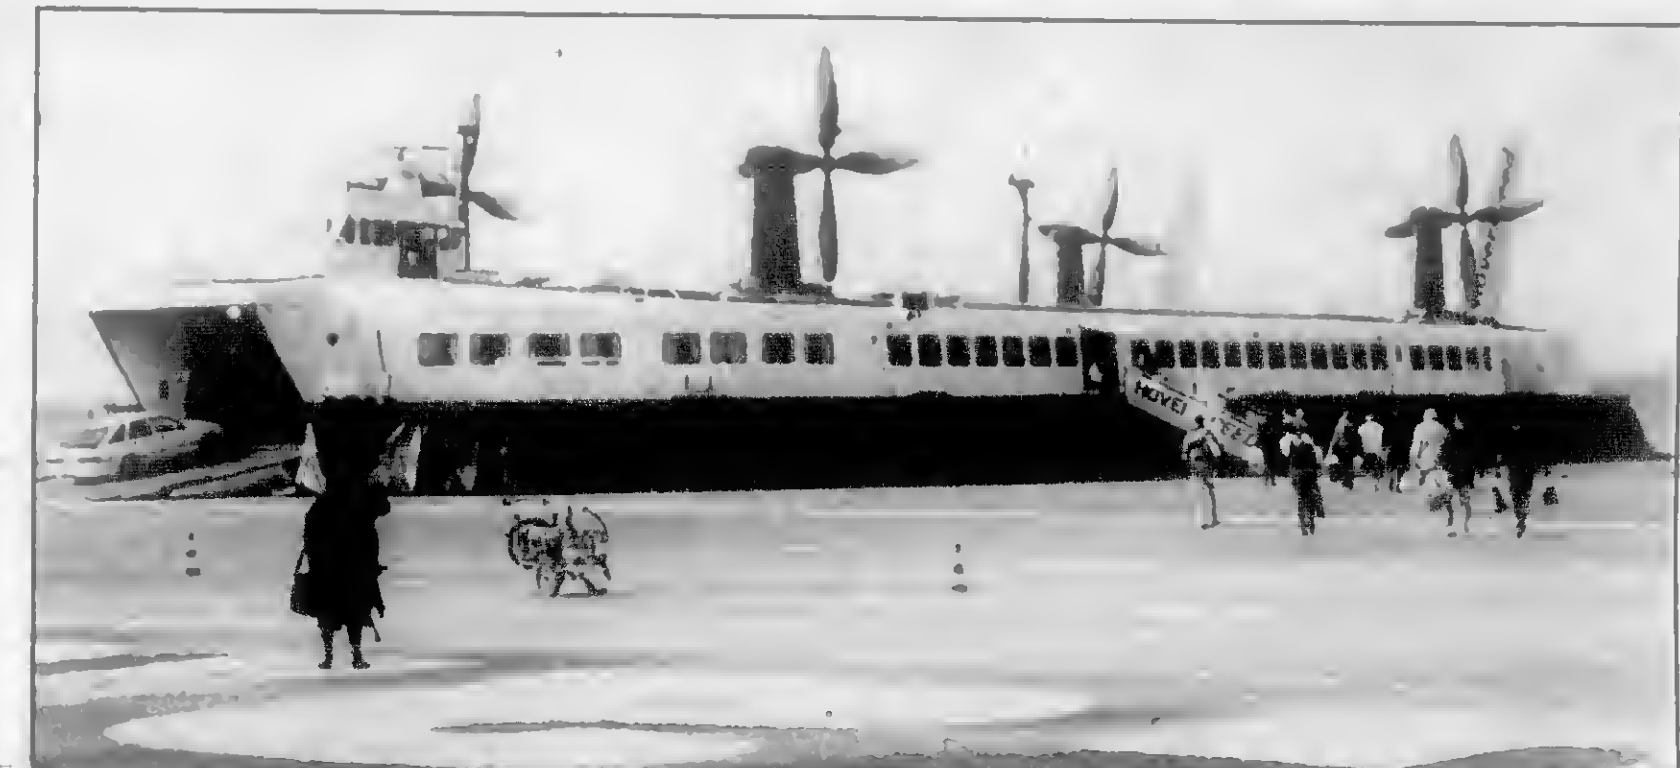

The crafts don't need to dock in a harbor. In fact, the only requirements for a landing spot are that it be large — about half the size of a football field — and that it be flat. Large, vacant parking lots are ideal locations.

Smith foresees the crafts landing in Traverse Bay, as well as in Petoskey. However, Smith said that it is "fairly difficult to envision a place to land in Charlevoix."

Ideally, the crafts would be permitted to land at Big Rock Point, both men said.

"Big Rock would be perfect for us. There are parking facilities and there are no surrounding homes that would be disturbed. That spot would allow us to serve both Petoskey and Charlevoix with one stop," he said.

However, Tim Petroskey, of Consumer's Energy at Big Rock, said he has not been contacted about this project. He added it is premature to even discuss future uses for the site.

A hovercraft like this could be seen cruising off of Charlevoix's coast in the future if a Charlevoix man and his partner succeed. (Courtesy photo)

"At this point no decisions have been made on this property," Petroskey said.

Although the crafts might not stop in Charlevoix, Smith and Daly predict that the operation will benefit Charlevoix economically. They hope that the company will create as many as 200 local jobs, as well as enhance the town's economy by bringing in more tourists from the Chicago area.

The crafts, which travel at an average speed of 70 miles per hour, would make the trip up the eastern shore of Lake Michigan in as few as three and a half hours, a feat that other boats and ferries are incapable of achieving.

"It's the perfect marriage between technology, the environment and demand. It doesn't make waves and disrupt the environment and the trip will cut down driving time," Daly said.

Hovercrafts are powerful vehicles, as well as efficient ones that are capable of transporting large amounts of cargo and passengers.

Norwood millage passes

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

Results of a special election in Norwood Township July 17 will mean a three-year, one-mill ($1 per $1,000 of taxable value) tax increase for Norwood Township residents and their continued financial support of township emergency services.

Sixty-four and a half percent of Norwood Township voters voted in favor of a tax increase for road repairs and 83.9 percent said yes to an emergency services millage renewal that will raise $5,145 in the first year.

While both proposals passed not many township voters left their opinion heard. Only 93 of Norwood 569 eligible voters turned out.

"I think that is horrible. Norwood Township has never had under a 60 percent voter turnout. I don't know what else we could have done to inform voters," Norwood Township clerk Doris Pearl said.

Pearl said that despite the low turnout the township is happy to see the result. She said that instead of taking funds for emergency services from the general fund, the township can pay for fire and ambulance with the millage money.

"We can use the money in the general fund for the many projects that need to be done that otherwise we would have no money to do," Pearl explained.

One such project that is in need of funding is renovating the township hall located at 19759 Lake Street in Norwood Township.

She added that the road millage will help finish up work being done on Richardson Road this summer and the board will be getting to work on formulating the road priority list.

OPINIONS

Help keep the water clean for good health

Recently we reported that the stormwater sewers in Charlevoix flow directly into Round Lake.

By reporting this, we told the story of the debate surrounding this, gave the reasons why stormwater drains flow into the lakes and most importantly informed the public that this was the case.

The reason we say this last item is the most important one is because it is something everyone in Charlevoix should remember when they are out washing their car, changing the oil or cleaning off their sidewalks and driveways.

When doing chores around the house, we seldom think about pollution or the effects our activities have on the environment. And some people have the mentality of "out of sight, out of mind" and do not think twice about pouring oil, cleaners or other toxic substances into the storm drain on the street.

But, these items are not out of our lives after they are poured down the drain, as our recent story highlighted. When you pour oil or toxic pollutants into the storm drain you are basically pouring them into the lakes.

It is basically like going to the beach and dumping in chemicals into the water that we bath in, play in and drink.

Water is vital to all of us in Charlevoix. Not just because it surrounds us and brings in many tourists who like to shop at our local stores. Water is essential for our survival because our bodies need healthy water to function.

While it may seem like this is not an important issue, realize that many places in the United States are not as lucky as Charlevoix and the rest of the state of Michigan. In many areas of the west, for example, water is almost like gold and people will fight for it if they have to.

Lawsuits and even physical assaults have been known to be caused by issues surrounding water.

So, let's take care of the water we are fortunate enough to have. We can start by helping to keep it clean.

Some ways to alleviate rage on that left turn to Bridge

Roger Knutson

'Ear to the ground'

Summer is seriously upon us.

I was reminded by a neighbor just yesterday, that we have two seasons in Charlevoix. No, not nine months of snow and three months of hard sledding as I used to hear from northern Minnesota. The two seasons in Charlevoix, I was told, are "Winter" and "Visitors." Visitors being all the people who want to live in Charlevoix and haven't figured out how to manage it yet.

The surest sign of both summer and visitors is of course the lines of stopped traffic into and out of the valley as the bridge fulfills its obligation to allow boat traffic access to Round Lake and Lake Michigan.

Over the six years or so that I have been a year-round resident of this lovely place and while rage at delay or inconvenience of many sorts has been growing in publicity if not in amount, I note with considerable pleasure the lack of bridge rage. People seem more likely to get out of their stopped vehicle and carry on a conversation with someone in the next lane than to fume silently or loudly about how long it is taking.

Maybe it's because we get to watch sunsets over the lake and even sunrises sometimes. I've always thought that the reason for the dramatic difference in social atmosphere on the east and west coast of the Florida peninsula was the product of the west coast residents and visitors getting to watch a tranquil sunset each day, while those on the opposite coast don't.

As a scientist, it is difficult for me to believe that the effects of watching a sunset could last for 24 hours, but they might. It may not even be necessary to watch a sunset to benefit. The certainty that there is a lovely sunset over the lake can be almost as calming as watching it.

It is well that bridge delays don't cause many problems because there is really nothing practical to be done about them.

However, there is a delay that might be alleviated. I have seen examples of what might be called Left Turn Off Clinton Onto Bridge Street Rage (LTOCOBSR). The combination of foot traffic crossing Bridge Street and all the vehicles previously delayed by the bridge opening who diverted to State and then Clinton to take advantage of the light produces almost as much obstruction as does the bridge.

There may be a solution. Communities in other parts of the country (southwest Florida comes to mind) where there is the confluence of much pedestrian traffic and the urge to make left turns, have solved the problem by reprogramming the stoplights. The new pattern provides for about 20 seconds of all way stoplights when pedestrians cross in any and all directions. Then the usual pattern of red and green and yellow serves the vehicle traffic and no walking at all.

With this stoplight program in place a dozen cars could make a left turn north onto Bridge Street with three or four more common now. With no walk signal for the pedestrians except during the all-way stops, both pedestrian and vehicle traffic should move more smoothly.

I suppose it is possible that such a pattern for the stoplights was tried in the past and it didn't work, but I don't remember it.

Why not give it a try? It could only make us more tranquil. Might even be better than the sunsets at curing any symptoms of Left Turn Off Clinton Onto Bridge Street Rage.

What the Stormwater Board does
Editor:

The Charlevoix County Stormwater Board of Appeals has met to review and amend the Charlevoix County Stormwater ordinance. Activities on construction sites have been identified as a leading cause of degradation and loss of fisheries and the source of stream, river and lake pollution.

The stormwater board is comprised of Jim Vanck, a representative from the Charlevoix County Road Commission, county commissioner Shirley Roloff, drain commissioner Jo Anne Beemon and four persons appointed by the county commissioners.

The commissioners appointed Performance Engineering employee Jim Malewicz, Emmet County resident and H & D employee Tom Irwin and retired builder and current county commissioner Jim Behling to sit on the board.

The county commissioners are seeking one more board member to fill a vacated seat.

The natural resources of Charlevoix County are the foundation of our quality of life, recreation and our economy. Growth must be managed wisely or we will kill the goose that lays the golden eggs.

The majority of resource protection must be done at the local level. In order to create a workable and responsible ordinance, we need a balanced board. It is important that the Charlevoix County Commissioners appoint a conservation ex-

Let your voice be heard on marina

Editor:

The letter to the editor from Jeanne Blumberg prompted me to find out more information about scheduled public hearings on marina expansion in Round Lake. I feel it's important summer Charlevoix residents understand that most of the public hearings concerning marina expansion will be carried out later in the fall and, therefore, we will have little or no opportunity to participate in the process.

United Design was retained by the city in June 2000 to present designs to the Waterways Commission for the dock expansion. The person in charge of the project is City Manager Mike Wiesner. He has printed a project timeline that can be picked up in his office. At present a planning consultant firm — Pollick Design Associates — will work with city staff personnel on site planning. The first project is a study of the bridge openings and road traffic which is not completed at this time.

The timeline lists the first public input meeting for some time in July or August 2001 for the park area only. The plan will be refined and a second public meeting is scheduled for October 2001. This meeting will include plans for the marina expansion.

Mr. Wiesner responded, "No" when asked if any portion of the study would be reported in the Courier by his office as details of the project unfold. He indicated the information would be available from his office and "the Courier can come to us." However, the Manager's office will notify all individuals of the exact public hearing dates if you leave your name and address with his office. Your feelings can be expressed via the Courier or request your letter be read during the public hearing by a personal representative or a member of the manager's office. The manager can also be contacted by e-mail at chxmgr@unnet.com.

As a summer resident I regret that I and others will not be included in the planning process.

WATCH activities

Often the most important work in environmental stewardship is done behind the scenes, with little fanfare and no headlines.

It is true that WATCH has waged some high profile battles over the years, most notably over cement dust and other pollutants from the Cemex plant in Charlevoix and the expansion of the Cedar Ridge landfill near Ironton.

But we also work quietly on other fronts that are no less important to Charlevoix County's environmental quality, but which may not generate as much attention.

For instance, most county residents are probably not even aware of a body called the Sanitary Board Code of Appeals. This board, made up of county supervisors, has the power to overrule assessment by Health Department sanitarians on the suitability of wetland lots for building septic systems and homes and has done so often. In fact, the Health Department has lost six of the last seven appeals before the board, meaning that several wetland areas deemed unsuitable for development by professional sanitarians are being built upon anyway.

A 1996 report prepared by the state Natural Features Inventory and recently noted by the Michigan Environmental Council estimated that development and drainage had cost 2,391,199 acres of an original total of approximately 8,530,000 acres in the state, a loss of 28 percent. However, the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service in 1990 put the total at approximately 5.5 million acres of an original 11 million, a 50 percent loss.

The WATCH board of directors has sent a letter to the chairman of the Sanitary Code Board of Appeals expressing our concern over the frequency with which Health Department rulings are overturned. We also plan to have a representative at all future meetings of the board.

This type of stewardship creates very little public awareness, yet is so critical to Charlevoix County's environmental integrity. And, the simple fact is, as we have said before, if WATCH does not hold the decision makers of Charlevoix County accountable in such matters, no one else will.

We are, of course, still engaged in issues involved with Cemex, Cedar Ridge and have also taken a strong stance against expansion of the Charlevoix public marina in Round Lake for both the potential environmental threat it poses and its negative aesthetic impact.

It is through the support of you and other members that WATCH is able to fulfill its mission of fighting for clean air, clean water and wise resource management in Charlevoix County.

Remember to follow the ways of Jesus

By CARA B. HOCHHALTER
Christian Education Director
First Congregational Church

In a song written by Bryan Sirchio, a UCC pastor and musician, he says that it is stated 87 times in the Bible that Jesus said, "Follow me."

More than just saying we have Christ in our hearts, to follow his way of life is indeed challenging (and open to people of all religious backgrounds).

What does it mean to follow someone? Remember the childhood game, "Follow the leader?" When the one in front put his or her hands up, you put your hands up and when the one in front skipped, you skipped. To follow Christ means to imitate his way, to the best of our ability.

Beacons of Blessing

What kind of life was that which we seek to emulate?

He intentionally reached out to those who were marginalized because of their ethnic or religious backgrounds, sickness or sinful ways, to tell them that they were loved by God and that he also cared for them.

He healed many people, but often said to those he healed not to tell anyone. Through his extremely clever and challenging stories he taught about forgiveness, peace and faith. He urged people who had disagreements to speak directly to each other first, seeking to reconcile their differences.

His life was not one of wealth in the material sense. His riches were found in love, in his relationship with God and with all living beings.

Jesus was religious. He worshipped in the Temple, he prayed the traditional prayers three times a day. He discussed the meaning of faith within the religious community and without.

As "nice" as Jesus sounds, he was not a timid person. He did not hesitate to stand up to authority when he felt an injustice was being done and challenged some of the religious and societal practices of his day.

If we seek to "follow" this amazing figure of Christ, how are we doing?

Disc golf to be one of many Venetian sports

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

The 71st Annual Venetian Festival will feature games galore — croquet, sporting clays, even the latest trend in golf, disc golf.

Rick Evans of Ellsworth picked up his first disc in 1996, tossed it across a Kalamazoo course and got hooked. Recently, Evans' interest landed him in Charlevoix.

Evans has built three Traverse City disc golf courses and is currently finishing up a course at Charlevoix's Mt. McSaub.

"It's going crazy up here. They (disc golf courses) are popping up all over the place," he said.

The local course is stretched across 70 acres on the Mt. McSaub property. Players will find the 18 holes on the front and back of the ski hill and along the cross-country ski trails. You even make it up to the top of the highest peak twice.

"When you are at the top, the views are phenomenal," he said.

Evans thinks that one of the best features of the sport is that it builds right into the topography he works with and thus has very little impact on the environment. He also sees the course as a way to better utilize the facility in the summer.

Before you grab your putter and head over to Mt. McSaub

"It's great exercise. It gets people out and trekking around."

Rick Evans,
Disc golf player

you should know if your club isn't shaped like a Frisbee, you have got the wrong equipment.

To check out what a disc looks like, go to ACE Hardware in Charlevoix, located at 403 Bridge Street, where you can hook up a new set of "clubs."

Once you get there don't make the mistake of asking where your cart is. In the world of disc golf, there are definitely no carts.

However, this doesn't exclude anyone, in fact it includes most everybody — walkers, outdoor enthusiasts, sports buffs and anyone with a sense of humor can play.

"It's great exercise. It gets people out and trekking around,"

Evans said.

The inaugural day of disc golf in Charlevoix will be during the Venetian games.

Evans encourages people who have never played before to come to try the course out at 10 a.m., July 22 when he will demonstrate how to throw basic shots and will explain the rules.

Then you'll be paired up with someone experienced if you're inexperienced and vice versa. At 3:30 p.m. there will be partner doubles.

Those interested in participating can register at the city recreation department located at 210 State Street in Charlevoix's City Hall.

YOUR HEALTH

BASES, Probate Court team up for program

Scott Kelly, BASES
'Your health'

The Recovery High program that BASES is involved in with Charlevoix Probate Court is a very unique program that is gaining attention for its effectiveness in dealing with adolescent substance abuse.

In the past year, we have had teenagers from 19 different counties participate in the program to receive help for substance abuse problems.

BASES provides the substance abuse services for Recovery High. These services include five evening groups, three after-school groups, individual counseling and a parent education group each week. Drug testing is also another important part of the program that is handled by BASES.

Charlevoix Probate Court has licensed several foster homes that provide a safe and drug free environment for youth that are unable to stay drug free in their home environment. Through weekly parent education groups at BASES and additional family counseling at outside agencies, family issues are addressed so that the teenager can return home to a supportive and understanding environment with proper supervision.

Probate Court also works cooperatively with an alternative school in Boyne City so that the educational needs of these young people can be addressed in a very structured, highly supervised, drug free environment. Classes are conducted during the summer months three days per week for Recovery High's most intensive participants. In this alternative school environment, young people have the opportunity to earn high school credits and get back on track prior to returning to their regular school.

Two years ago, transportation issues within Charlevoix County were a concern because teens were unable to get to the groups that they needed. Through a special grant, Probate Court was able to purchase a 15 passenger van to get teens to the services that they need to remain drug free.

For our local teenagers, there is a great deal of flexibility within the Recovery High program to help meet their specific needs. For some teens, substance abuse education and support are their primary needs. These youth can attend one to three evening groups per week depending on their schedules and level of need. Their parents are also encouraged to participate in the weekly education and support group to learn more about adolescent substance abuse.

For most teens, this is all they need to discontinue their use of alcohol and drugs and regain control of their lives. If they are unable to succeed at this least intensive level, they can participate in the evening groups five nights per week. If they are still unsuccessful, they may become involved in all of the groups at BASES — five nights per week and three after-school groups. If their school environment is a problem, they can become involved in the court supervised alternative school program. If their home life is a problem, they can become involved in the foster care program supervised by the courts.

As a young person improves in their ability to remain drug free and function appropriately in the school and home environment, they can move through the varying level of services in a "step-down" approach. If they have struggles several months later, they can easily return to the most appropriate level of care and get themselves back on track.

What does it cost the young person's family for these services?

For a local teen that can live at home, they can access all of the substance abuse groups at no cost. There is a $10 fee for each drug test and young people are tested two to four times per month.

For a teen that needs to be in foster care and access all of the substance abuse services, school services, drug testing and transportation services, the cost is $70 per day. When the 30 day cost of $2,100 is compared to the $8,000 - $12,000 cost for 30 days of inpatient substance abuse treatment found in the traditional hospital-based treatment program, it is easy to see why the Recovery High program has gained popularity by referral sources.

Recovery High is a program based on cooperation, shared resources and most of all - common sense based on years of professional experience in working with young people. The key influences in a young person's life include other teens, family, school, community and sometimes the court.

This program brings all of these key components together to help each young person become a success story.

Scott Kelly is the director of Bay Area Substance Education Services (BASES) located in Charlevoix. For more information, please call BASES at 547-1144.

Sidewalk issue tabled by council until Aug. 20

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

Charlevoix City Council listened to the concerns of local, seasonal and year-round residents and decided to table the proposed sidewalks included in upcoming plans for Michigan and Belvedere avenue infrastructure projects, Monday night.

This came after council realized it was divided on the sidewalk issue.

Mayor Alvin "Butch" Russell, third ward councilman Sherm Chamberlain, second ward councilman Gabe Campbell and first ward councilman Bill Haggard agreed to continue the sidewalk project with modifications after they reported hearing project support from around the community.

However, first ward councilman Norman "Boogie" Carlson, third ward councilman A.J. Withoef and second ward councilman Bill Bellows all supported abandoning the project based on complaints they said were heard from their constituents.

Bellows was more middle ground than his fellow councilman, he said he heard more opposition for the Belvedere project than the Michigan Avenue project.

At the meeting, Charlevoix City Police Chief Dennis Halverson explained a Belvedere Avenue pedestrian usage analysis he conducted from 8 a.m. to 2:20 p.m. July 14. He reported observing 726 pedestrians, 134 of whom walked in the street instead of using the sidewalk.

Safety was the major reason the city claims the north side sidewalk was included in the plans — getting people out of the streets and onto a sidewalk. But, Belvedere residents said pedestrians' safety would be compromised if the sidewalk were to go in.

John Winn said the 24 steep driveways along the north side make for a dangerous situation.

First ward councilman Norman "Boogie" Carlson said that after taking a weekend stroll down Belvedere with his family he agreed with the residents.

"There is no way you would see me pushing a baby stroller on that side of the street. I think the south side sidewalk provides a safe walkway. Even if there were sidewalks on both sides people would still walk in the street," Carlson said.

The residents were also upset that seven mature street trees would be removed to accommodate the sidewalk.

Belvedere resident R. J. Button came forward with a petition signed by 51 residents living on Belvedere Avenue and elsewhere in Charlevoix who were opposed to a south side sidewalk.

Dick Joseph, of the law firm Joseph, Corcoran, Telgenhof and Snyder, representing the petitioners came forward and said, "If Charlevoix is going to be a Tree City USA don't cut down 200-year-old trees. As elected officials you owe it to the community to look at these isues and further discuss them before charging ahead on something you can't fix."

Joseph said on Monday morning residents were out tying ribbons around trees that will be lost if the sidewalk goes in.

Belvedere residents suggested alternatives including: widening the existing sidewalk to make it more inviting, putting an ordinance into effect and enforcing it and installing signs to encourage people to use the sidewalk.

Council also decided to table the Michigan Avenue sidewalk expansion project that would extend the sidewalk from 431 Michigan Avenue to Charlevoix Elementary School.

Michigan Avenue resident Edith Gilbert questioned why the city planned to take out trees and build a sidewalk when most elementary students don't walk to school anyway. She believes a stop sign at the intersection of Division and Michigan Avenue would prove to be a more useful safety feature than a sidewalk.

Council's final decision was to award the infrastructure contract to CCMS in the amount of $1,185,489, with the exception of the sidewalks until more information has been brought to the table.

When asked the cost of the sidewalks specifically, city manager Mike Wiesner said he didn't have the project broken down like that.

Council plans to reconvene and discuss alternative plans at the Aug. 20 meeting.

Gallery 704 gives artist a chance to come back north

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

After spending about 18 years working downstate and away from her beloved northern Michigan, Audrey Shapiro has found a way to come home.

"I didn't like where I lived and wanted to do something that was less pressurized. Plus, I missed being up north," she said.

Shapiro was a teacher in Farmington Hills, after moving to the area from Bellaire 18 years ago. Since that time, she has wanted to come back to northern Michigan. Using her knowledge of pottery and crafts, she decided to move to Charlevoix and has opened up Gallery 704.

She said she picked Charlevoix because of its busy summers, plus she wanted to be near her friends in the Charlevoix-Antrim county areas.

"I really like Charlevoix. I am looking forward to the whole year," Shapiro added.

Gallery 704 features pottery created by Shapiro, as well as items from 20 other artisans. These include jewelry, antiques, blown glass, pastels, watercolors and handmade soap.

"Business has been good. I had a really nice reception from the townspeople," she said. Gallery 704 opened on May 25.

As for Shapiro's pottery, she said each piece is very functional.

"Some of it is more abstract. I like to explore with new colors and paintings," she said.

Gallery 704 is located at 704 Bridge Street. It is open throughout the year from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. daily.

For more information on Gallery 704, call the business at 237-0704.

Where Is It?

Tell us where in the Charlevoix Area you think this is.

In an effort to add a little more fun to our lives and yours, the Charlevoix Courier is working on creating interactive areas of the newspaper for our readers. In the spirit of this, we are announcing the creation of a new contest called, "Where is it?"

Each week, the Charlevoix Courier will publish a picture of some item on a local landmark or building. We invite our readers to send in their guesses on where this picture was taken.

Not only can our readers have a little fun testing their knowledge of Charlevoix, they can also win a little cash in the process.

Every six months, all of the readers who guessed correctly will have their guesses placed in a large box. The editor of the Charlevoix Courier, Jeremy McBain, will then pick a name from this box at random and that person will receive a check for $100.

Since every winning guess will be placed in the box, the more times you enter correct answers to "Where is it?" your chances of winning increase.

Hovercraft could be a new way to get to Chicago area

HOVERCRAFT

Smith and Daly predict that trips will cost between $250-$280 for a passenger and a car, and $125 for an individual without a car, one way.

"Any way you look at it, it's cheaper than flying out of Traverse City," Daly said.

Smith noted that the travel time would be "a perfect amount of time for dinner and a movie."

Also, because the crafts never touch the water, the ride is very smooth and stable, and eliminates the threat of motion sickness that is imminent on boats and airplanes.

The crafts have shuttled passengers and cargo effectively on the English Channel and the Baltic Sea, as well as been used in U.S. Marine operations, for over 30 years without incident.

The two specific crafts that Smith and Daly plan on using formerly ferried passengers across the English Channel and possess advanced radar systems that can detect floating objects, as small as sailboards.

Both men possess the experience that is necessary to undertake such a large project.

Daly, who is the chief executive operator of the project, has a history of involvement in mass transit activities, such as the hovercrafts that ferried across the English Channel.

Smith moved to Charlevoix in 1964. He joined the U.S.

Coast Guard and soon became second in command of the Coast Guard vessel the Sun Dew. Two years later, Smith became the group commander and was responsible for 15 light, search and rescue stations across the Great Lakes. It was with this job that Smith became familiar with marine operations on Lake Michigan.

Two years ago, Daly approached Smith with his idea to start a company that would provide the public with hovercraft service across Lake Michigan. Smith soon became the chief of operations of L.M.Hoverlink. His position requires him to determine the best routes for the crafts, as well as locate prospective ports.

Smith and Daly hope to be in operation as soon as next summer. They also hope to collaborate with other transportation companies in the area, such as the Beaver Islander, and have the hovercrafts serve as feeders into other ferry services.

Daly is also considering establishing a hovercraft manufacturing company that would sell newer, longer and narrower vessels, as well as hovercrafts that could be sold for individual use.

For right now, Smith and Daly are concentrating all of their efforts on their proposed Chicago-Northern Michigan operation.

"We are thrilled," Daly said. "It really is a heaven sent opportunity in terms of the usefulness of this craft around the shoreline of Michigan."

Top Rank site found to have wetlands, project still planned

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

On June 7, members of the Michigan Department of Environmental Quality Land and Water Management Division walked the new Top Rank transfer station site located off Bell's Bay Road and found the site is a regulated wetland.

The group's wetland finding came after they gave Top Rank owner Tom Rankl permission to establish a transfer station at the site.

"The wetland is considered 'contiguous' to the unnamed stream. This new information warrants revision of our previous letter to you dated December 18, 1998, wherein you were advised that the wetland was not regulated under Part 303," a letter from wetlands specialist John Arevalo to Rankl dated July 2 states.

Water and Air Team Charlevoix (WATCH) president Jerry Puhl, whose property abuts the Rankl parcel, said he told MDEQ officials the site should be regulated.

"That's what I tried to tell them several years ago. He (the MDEQ wetlands specialist at the time) said the land was too far away from the lake and he was going to allow the property to be developed," he said.

Puhl added that he is frustrated by the oversight because the land has already been irreparably altered.

Chuck Stein of Performance Engineers, Inc. of Charlevoix, told the MDEQ that work already done at the transfer station site has impacted 9.69 acres of wetland.

Furthermore, a utility corridor, that hasn't been completed will impact additional on-site wetland. Arevalo said Stein informed the MDEQ that the septic discharge line, electrical service and natural gas are proposed to be installed in this corridor.

When the MDEQ staff toured the corridor on June 27 they found some parts of it did not meet the definition of wetland and some did.

Rankl said that the 11.22 acres where the proposed transfer station site is located is an old cedar swamp. He said workers have already filled 10 acres of the land and described the land as having been converted from wetland to upland.

Rankl added that he hopes to break ground by the end of July.

"I hope to have a construction permit in the next two weeks. I have been waiting six years for this," Rankl said.

According to Arevalo's letter to Rankl, the MDEQ will allow the project to continue. The transfer station can be constructed on the 11.22 acre site without being required to obtain a permit that is usually necessary when building on regulated wetlands.

Arevalo states the department decided to allow the station to be established without a permit because of prior authorization from the Land and Water Management Division.

Rankl plans to build a large pole barn with liquid retention capabilities so that any liquid on the floor of the building won't seep into the ground but will be contained in a separate septic tank and hauled off the site.

"The state looks at transfer stations as a very low impact land use," he said.

However, any further building will require a permit.

Arevalo states that any of the following activities proposed within the regulated wetland, exclusive of the areas already disturbed by excavation, filling, installation of septic effluent lines/utilities and construction of the transfer station per the approved engineering plans will require a Part 303 permit: (a) placement of fill material in wetland; (b) dredging, removal or permitting the removal of soil or minerals from wetland; (c) construction, operation, or maintaining any use or development in wetland; or (d) draining surface water from wetland.

Youth Advisory Committee gives local grants

Charlevoix Courier Wednesday, July 18, 2001 — PAGE 19

From string instruments and basketball hoops to peer mentoring programs and substance abuse prevention efforts, area projects that serve kids are receiving some financial help from the Charlevoix County Community Foundation Youth Advisory Committee (YAC).

Members of the youth group recently announced grants totaling $33,755 to assist a variety of non-profit organizations that focus on children and families. This most recent round of grants brings the YAC's grant-making total to over $330,000 since the group began distributing money in 1994.

Money for the grants comes from the Community Foundation Youth Fund, a $1.4 million endowment designated exclusively for the benefit of area young people.

Twice each year, the YAC — made up of teen representatives from Charlevoix County — invites area organizations to submit grant requests. Using information gleaned from a local youth survey and other criteria they develop, the group evaluates each proposal before deciding how to distribute grants.

This summer's selected programs and their grant amounts are:

- Bay Area Substance Education Services — $3,000 to assist with building renovations; $2,200 for an in-depth analysis of a Charlevoix County student view survey.

- Beaver Island Youth Consortium — $1,000 to start an activities program for Beaver Island youth.

- Boyne Area Gymnastics — $3,100 for a tumbling pit in the new gymnastics facility.

- City of Boyne City — $4,000 for a waterfront community playground.

- Camp Daggett — $3,000 toward the barrier-free, indoor adventure and activity center.

- Char-Em Housing Coalition — $2,000 for activities for youth in the transitional housing program; $500 for the annual Paint Blitz.

- CHIP Counseling Center — $1,450 for substance abuse prevention education programs for area youth.

- Crooked Tree Arts Center — $1,800 for string instruments for Beaver Island youth; $3,000 for school and community performances by the Visions of Peace Drum and Dance Company.

- City of East Jordan — $1,000 to provide basketball hoops at the Civic Center.

- East Jordan Family Health Center — $1,000 for a comprehensive wellness program for overweight adolescents and their families.

- MSU Extension — $2,000 for equipment for the youth tennis program; $1,255 for 4-H Learning Lab kits; $500 for safety equipment for the youth wrestling program.

- Northwest Michigan Human Service Agency — $250 to purchase books for the Head Start Reading is Fundamental program.

- Planned Parenthood Northern Michigan — $2,000 to provide start-up funding for Project Straight Talk — a peer counseling program — in the East Jordan High School.

- Probate Court — $700 for a Creative Opportunity Workshop for youth on probation.

Members of the Community Foundation Youth Advisory Committee are: Abbie Adams, Kellie Gillespie and Kristen Russell from Beaver Island; Dylan Hall, Asuka Barden and Riley O'Brien from Boyne City; Rene Fiel, Adam Uley and Megan Pernicano from Boyne Falls; Patrick Gowell, Travis Smith and AnnaKate Trubilowicz from Charlevoix; and Jeremy Booze, Heather Jones and Tarn Leach from East Jordan.

Since it was founded by a group of local citizens in 1992, the Charlevoix County Community Foundation's assets have grown to over $7.3 million and it's grant-making to over $2.5 million.

A charitable organization dedicated to improving and enriching life in the area, the Foundation accepts gifts from individuals, families, businesses, and civic groups and manages them in a permanent endowment.

Every year, a portion of the endowment's investment income is used to support programs in education, the environment, the arts, human services, health and wellness, youth activities, community development and various civic projects while the principle of the endowment continues to grow, serving as charitable capital to benefit the area well into the future.

The Foundation and its Youth Advisory Committee will again accept grant requests this fall. For more information about the Community Foundation or grant-making guidelines, contact the office, 536-2440.

Local woman completes Norwood history book

By JOCEY FLORENCE
Staff writer

The complete history of Norwood is now available in a short paperback book, thanks to Nancy Ritsema and the Norwood Historical Society.

Ritsema, a Norwood resident for 35 years, decided to write a book that would showcase the unique and scarcely known history of the small town. In 1994, Ritsema, along with other community members, started the Norwood Historical Society. Soon after, the society began its work on the book, "Norwood, a Legacy of North Woods Living," which is a compilation of interviews, old pictures and stories written by Ritsema.

"My parents lived in Norwood, and my grandmother worked there, but I really didn't know very much about the history of the town. Besides the old-timers, most of us didn't know very much about the community," she said.

Ritsema said that the book was a "community effort," and was funded by donations, as well as through various charity events, such as quilt auctions held by the "Norwood Needles," a local quilting group.

The book was Ritsema's idea. Her parents moved to Norwood when she was in high school. It was then that Ritsema's appreciation for the small town was fostered.

"Norwood is just a small, charming, inviting community. It's close-knit, safe, and beautiful. It's an excellent place to raise a family," Ritsema said.

Because it is such a small town, Norwood — which is the oldest organized community in Charlevoix County — often gets overlooked by historians.

"After the lumbering industry in Norwood died, the town was lost in Charlevoix's shadow. Today, it still retains its small town feeling, and, because there are no stores in town, it lacks commercialism and tourism," Ritsema said.

It was her desire to document and share these unique qualities that encouraged her to create a book of the town's history.

The Norwood Historical Society received guidance from Glenn Ruggles, a well-known oral historian.

He encouraged the society to create the book in "the most professional way possible," Ritsema said. He also stressed the importance of including oral histories in the book, as well as interviewed some of the oldest Norwood residents.

"Oral history is the most effective medium for presenting history," Ritsema said. "It gives you a sense of immediacy, like you were there."

The biggest source of information for the book was Cathy Lord, an 82 year resident of Norwood. "She was a storehouse of wonderful stories," Ritsema said. Lord was also Ritsema's first contact for the book, as well as one of the founding members of the Historical Society.

The interviewing and researching process took the society four years.

"We kept finding new sources and special bits of information that we hadn't known before. Writing this book turned into a fascinating adventure," Ritsema said.

It took Tom Vranich, a book designer from Davison's Book Ability Incorporated, a year to complete the layout of the book.

The most challenging part of the process was gathering all of the information.

"Because no one had ever written a history of Norwood, we had a hard time finding information," Ritsema said. The society gleaned information from various northern Michigan history books, as well as from libraries, old records and documents and maps.

"Norwood personifies country living today," Ritsema said. "Today's society longs for a greater neighborliness and a slower pace. This longing is what makes stories of Norwood so appealing. They take us back to a time when life was simpler."

The book can be purchased from the Norwood Historical Society, as well as in local book stores. Call 547-2185 for more information.

Close the gaps in your medical history.

In these days of self-advocacy and personal health care responsibility, medical record ownership is very important. Having a complete record of your medical history, and your family's medical history, provides awareness, knowledge, confidence and control to you the patient, and it helps your physicians and other health care providers do a better job.

Beginning April 2nd, patients of the former Burns Clinic in Petoskey, during the years 1993 to 1999, will be able to get and keep original copies of their medical records. Distribution of these important files will continue for one year, after which all remaining records will be destroyed. So if you were a patient, or if you are the parent of a minor patient of the Petoskey office of the Burns Clinic between 1993 and 1999, go to the first floor of the former Burns Clinic Building in Petoskey where you will fill out a release form and pick up your medical records.

Photo I.D. is required and all records must be picked up in person. Release forms are also available on the Web at www.northernhealth.org and there is no charge for this service.

City water treatment plant given health, safety award

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

The Charlevoix Wastewater Treatment Plant won a Michigan Water Environment Association (MWEA) Health and Safety Award. "This award recognizes the Charlevoix Wastewater Treatment Plant for their commitment to health and safety in the workplace evidenced by an effective, well-established and documented health and safety program and the management and staff team who support, promote and cooperate in achieving the goal of a safe work environment in the water environment industry," Nancy Carpenter of the MWEA stated in a letter she wrote about the award.

City of Charlevoix water and wastewater superintendent Sam Creswell said that the award recognizes the plant's ability to maintain a safe working environment in a high-risk field.

"It's a dangerous, high-risk business, so they (the MWEA) recognizes people that don't have accidents," he said.

He said some of the risks include: chemical accidents, issues associated with working in an explosive and hazardous atmosphere and risks involved when employees work on high platforms.

The MWEA was established in 1925 and according to Carpenter is now recognized as an authority on Michigan's total water environment. The association is an organization with more than 1,900 professionals and 40,000 members worldwide.

The MWEA website (www.mwea.org) lists the group's objectives which include: advancing knowledge of the water environment, the encouragement of sound regional water quality control policy and increasing public awareness of the relationship between water resources and general public welfare.

Summer series races start with excitement

A. Nony Mouse

'Yachting notes'

With the Venetian Festival now upon us, it's time to plan for the next big event - the new Charlevoix Yacht Club "No Boundaries" Regatta on Aug. 4 with the first warning signal set for 11 a.m.

The Notice of Race is now available; contact Judy at 347-7225 or Linda at (231) 537-4484.

Spinnaker and Jam Divisions will compete on Lake Charlevoix for Perpetual Trophies. The top three finishers in each class will receive a matted Jim deWitt print. Those sailors not too interested in serious racing should ask about the "Fun Class" activities. There will be a big party back at the Charlevoix Yacht Club starting at 4 p.m. - including awards and a pig roast. "No Boundaries" is hosted by the Charlevoix Yacht Club and sponsored by Pat McKeown Ford of Charlevoix.

Meanwhile, as we go to press, still no stories on the Powerboat Rendezvous or the LaBlance Memorial Race, both last weekend. Since we can still see the silhouette of Beaver Island, we assume our well-mannered envoys behaved with great restraint and avoided having fun.

The Wednesday Summer Series got off to a great start on July 11, with 31 contestants completing the seven leg course. Only two mid-course swimmers seen - the women now lead the men in the persons overboard competition, two to zip. Neat move by CYGNUS who trailed LOST VERMONT for most of the race, but broke cover, lifted in clear air, tacked and re-entered the fray to ice-bow and slam-dunk VERMONT only a few boat lengths from the finish. Nosed her out by 22 seconds, for P-26 second place, just behind TIRELESS.

GOTCHA was first to finish and saved her time (1:35:21) in the Big Fleet but overall fastest time honors (1:29:21) went to HUSSY in the J-22 Fleet.

Another eight 22s crossed the line within the next couple minutes!

Results, first race, Summer Series: The "Big Boat" Fleet: 1. GOTCHA, 2. SLAPSHOT, 3. HOOTIE, 4. HOI POLLOI, 5. MINT

JULEP, 6. BALD EAGLE, 7. WIN-DRUNNER, 8. BABE, 9. SAFFRON, P-26: 1. TIRELESS, 2. CYGNUS, 3. LOST VERMONT, 4. ORIGINAL SIN, 5. ARTEMIS.

JAM: 1. FLASH, 2. POLO LOCO, J-22: 1. HUSSY, 2. SWINE FLEW, 3. II RECKLESS, 4. FIRST DATE, 5. SUPERFLUOUS, 6. EAU DE VIE.

7. HS MOISTURE MISSILE, 8. PALEFACE LITE, 9. ROCK STEADY, 10. THUNDERSTRUCK, 11. HIGH MAINTENANCE, 12. CRAZY HORSE, 13. WHAT'S HER NAME, 14. SCURRY, 15. HOG-TIDE.

MDEQ to review cleanup

She said that at the meeting, the MDEQ will also request that the company perform additional soil sampling including three locations over by the truck well area and in the lagoon area behind the plant itself.

Additional borings will also be performed near the road to make sure a clay layer is present. As of now there is a light marrow layer above the aquifer that looks like goosy, white, clay. Below the marrow is the contaminated aquifer being addressed. Below the aquifer the MDEQ hopes they'll find a clay layer.

"We need to make sure the clay layer is there to make sure the contamination is not impacting another aquifer," Pelc said.

She added that within the last week DME has indicated to the MDEQ that they have a plan to install a treatment system that will treat the groundwater contamination between the plant and Lake

Charlevoix.

One year ago DME and MDEQ heads got together and DME revealed 50 percent of the design. Now the MDEQ is ready to see the rest.

Aside from the "hardware" system, DME's plan includes oxygen injections. The injections are supposed to release a compound that facilitates the system.

Pelc said the contaminated aquifer plume runs under the plant site's old landfill and then migrates under the cedar swamp area, under Matthews Lane and then discharges into Lake Charlevoix. While it may seem a round about route to the water, Pelc referred to it as direct contamination to the lake.

She said the system DME plans to propose will run along Matthews Lane on the cedar swamp/wooded side to present the least possible disturbance to the surrounding neighbors.

Homes concerned about the quality of their drinking water need not worry. Pelc said there are no wells in the vicinity.

However, with the levels of vinyl chloride, the carcinogen PCE degrades too, well above the MDEQ's criteria of what is appropriate to protect the lake; fish may be impacted. The discharging may impact the plankton and other plant life fish feed on, limiting the abundance of food.

At this point the company is paying the tab for the cleanup which the MDEQ estimates will cost over $300,000. However, DME's initiative in the matter has not stopped the MDEQ, who are still engineering a plan if DME backs out.

The system is elaborate and the topography of where the contamination is located makes the project more challenging. The aquifer itself is slow moving so the contamination has to be treated in three separate areas first, by the plant itself, then moving to the middle of the plume and finally on to Lake Charlevoix.

There is a second meeting being planned for early August when DME and MDEQ representatives will meet with property owners to discuss project specifics and the timeline.

A representative for DME Company said they do not publicly comment on this issue.

Sheriff investigating two vehicle crash on July 14

The Charlevoix County Sheriff's Office is currently investigating a two vehicle personal injury crash that occurred at approximately 3:30 p.m. on July 14 at the intersection of Maple Grove and Quarterline roads in Hayes Township.

A vehicle driven by Kathryn Lieberman, 16, of Charlevoix, pulled into the intersection from a stop at Quarterline Road. Another vehicle driven by Glinda Thayer, 41, also of Charlevoix, was traveling south on Maple Grove Road at the time Lieberman pulled into the intersection.

The vehicles then crashed in the intersection. Lieberman and her passenger were transported to the Charlevoix Area Hospital where they were treated and released for minor injuries. Thayer and her passenger refused ambulance service.

The Sheriff's Office was assisted at the scene by Charlevoix City Ambulance Service.

Woman injured on Lake Charlevoix in accident

The Charlevoix County Sheriff's Office investigated a watercraft accident with injuries at approximately 6 p.m., July 8, on Lake Charlevoix near Whiting Park in Evangeline Township.

Djuana Garbo, 34, of Higgins Lake was cruising on a 1995 Yamaha PWC when she hit a large wave near the Whiting Park area of Lake Charlevoix causing her to be thrown from the vessel.

Garbo suffered a broken ankle from the impact with the watercraft and was treated at Charlevoix Area Hospital.

The story behind the 1901 channel bridge

By DAVID L. MILES
Charlevoix Historical Society

In contrast to the delicate feminine tracery of its predecessor, the bridge that was installed over the channel in 1901 could not have been more different in character; a bold, masculine, emphatic statement that proclaimed, "This is a bridge."

Its compact network of steel open-work girders strode and leaped and flew from bank to bank, its roadbed wooden planks laid end to end. With the necessary widening of the draw — demanded by the government — from just under 50 to over 70 feet, its point of balance now shifted to the north onto a solid concrete, not individual metal piling, base, giving it an asymmetrical profile. This fourth bridge, too, rode on a turntable for the next 46 years.

It had not been in place very long when it was discovered that a slight oversight or miscalculation caused a serious problem. Metal expands in hot weather and in a scorching the bridge expanded at both ends to freeze itself shut. The solution was to call the fire department, who dipped their pumps into the channel to spray each end with cold water in a slow process of shrinking the steel back enough for the bridge to open. Once the great liner Missouri was kept waiting for over an hour in the channel, its furious captain laying on his horn every few minutes, as if the blast would shake the bridge loose enough so he could keep his schedule.

But this was only one of the everyday happenings in the long career of bridgetender Elmer Johnson, who presided over that bit of water for 34 years, beginning in 1899 on old number three. He was totally devoted to his profession and reportedly never missed a day of work, never was docked a penny for any reason and probably never took a vacation.

He lived in the old "Hemlock mansion" hut on the south bank before the 12-by-14 foot bridgehouse was erected, then moved in there for nine or more months. It was a common sight to see members of his family hustling along Bridge Street with his lunch or dinner bucket in every season. Even after the lake ice closed the shipping season, which sometimes meant late January, he would be at the bridge, sweeping snow from the walkways and roadway, checking the mechanisms, making sure all was secure and shipshape. Once, for a few months, did his family enjoy his company at the dinner table. By April 1, he was back at his aerie, eager for the first boat to make its appearance in the channel. The bridge was his passion and joy, yet there were times in his career he probably wished he was anywhere else but on it when calamity struck three times, about nine years apart.

For its first few months, the bridge was turned by the same key-into-lock mechanism that turned number three, a cycle again taking about 8 minutes. But that soon came to an end. On one summer Sunday alone, Johnson reported that he had opened and closed the structure 92 times, a feat more readily accomplished then due to the dearth of automobile traffic. (Today, that schedule would have the local/tourist population storming the barricades.) It figures out to about a 21-hour day. He was quickly instrumental in having steam power installed.

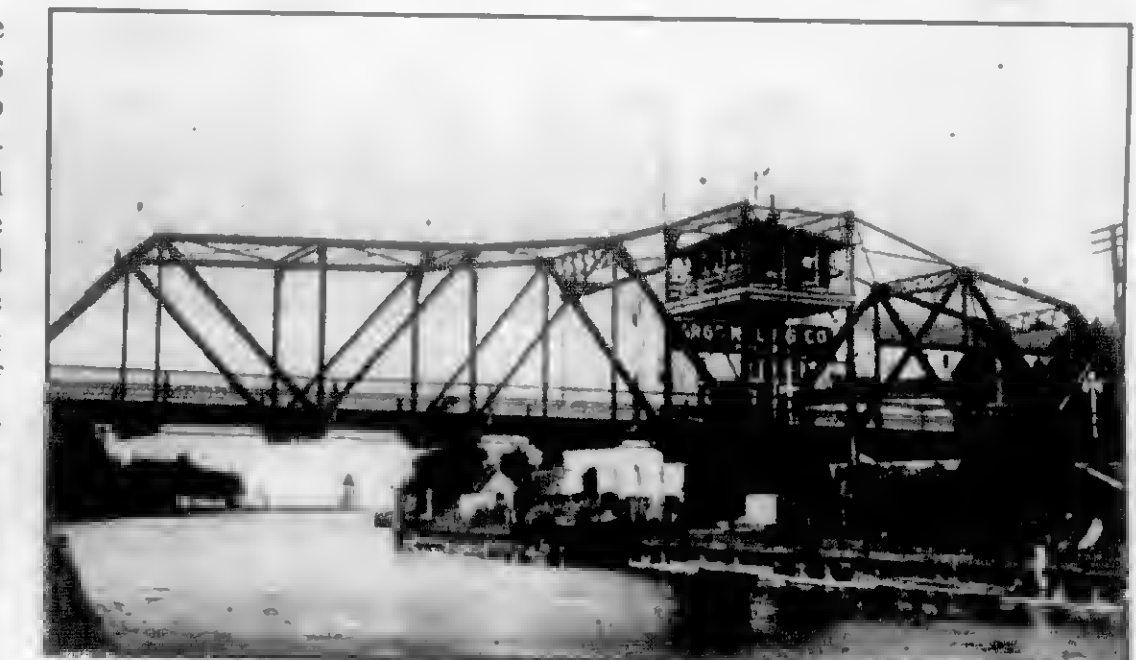

Apparently the government had been willing to construct a replacement bridge that duplicated the powering mechanism of the previous one, but would not spring for a power source other than to incorporate into the design the girders and placement of a future bridgehouse, leaving the installation expense up to the village, should it so desire. So the Charlevoix Lumber Company was paid $200 to erect a bridgehouse 18 feet over the roadbed above the support pier and turntable. A coal-powered steam boiler and engine were installed for $1,050, connected to a shaft that reached down to the gears. Horses delivered the coal in carts, it was transferred to a large canvas bag and hoisted up. With steam power in place, the great key was relegated to emergency status in 1902. A turning cycle now took about 5 minutes.

The worst thing that ever happened to the bridge itself occurred around 1910 just after the resort season had ended. Two of the medium-sized passenger steamers, with few passengers aboard, decided to leave Round Lake at the same time. Each left its berth and headed for the bridge and Lake Michigan. Captains have notoriously prickly egos, so neither one would cede right of passage to the other. Into the channel neck they both sailed at the same moment, side-by-side. Neither would give an inch. When they reached the slightly narrower draw, it caught them and they crunched to a halt as if in a vise. The revetment beneath the south approach collapsed. All those hundreds of tons of pressure straining to break free had to give way somewhere, and it was the bridge that royally took it on the chin.

The forces heaving against it actually knocked the bridge off its foundations to the degree that the pipes and hoses of the steam engine broke loose to spew steam and scaling water throughout the bridgehouse. As the bridge started to tip and the hellish waters attacked him, the sheer gut-wrenching terror Johnson experienced must have been unimaginable as his whole little world came close to total disaster. But fortunately the bridgehouse was big enough so he could leap out of harm's way and the bridge came up short of tipping over.

Finally the heaving stopped, the boats were extricated with surprisingly little damage to themselves and the captains reprimanded by their companies which assumed full responsibility and picked up the tab for repairs. So, once again we reverted to the cable guided scows to ferry everything and everyone over the waters for the six weeks needed to hoist and shift and jimmy the bridge back onto its foundation, a major engineering feat in itself. Had the bridge actually toppled over, or the boiler been positioned closer to him, the fall and/or the steam and hot water could have proved fatal for Elmer Johnson. He was very lucky.

But such was not the case for Mrs. George (Carrie) Ross on the night of May 4, 1919. The unfortunate mother of four lost her life in the most tragic accident ever to occur at the channel, when death came to the bridge. To be continued next month...

(A pictorial history of the six channel bridges is at the Harsha House Museum this summer. Hours are 1 to 4 p.m., Monday through Saturday, at 103 State Street next to the Congregational Church. Call 547-0373 for more information.)

'Work of love' Couple to restore the castle

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

Since Jan. 4, when Richard and Linda Mueller of Long Beach, Miss., purchased the historic Charlevoix site Castle Farms, the stone buildings on the site have continued to deteriorate.

But Richard said they are in the first stages of renovating the building, which was originally built in 1918.

In fact, things are right on schedule. In a letter submitted by Linda after she bought the property, she states she plans to work through property rehabilitation in phases. The first of which the couple is in the thick of right now — evaluation, planning and basic structural repairs.

"We have to develop a plan that will make the buildings safe for the next 100 years," Richard said.

After stopping the erosion, they will come up with a plan to preserve the site's heritage and then will hire contractors to do the job.

Venetian begins

A member of the Chicago based SHOP Choir sings with all her heart during Sunday's performance in the bandshell at East Park. The group entertained the audience with their gospel sounds as one of the first musical acts of the Venetian Festival. Also appearing on stage Sunday was the group Replay, an oldies and classic rock group. In addition to the musical entertainment, festival-goers were treated to a rescue demonstration by the U.S. Coast Guard in Round Lake. Events such as these will continue throughout the rest of the week as we celebrate another Venetian Festival.

Apportionment plan's appeal dismissed

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

The appeal of the Charlevoix County apportionment plan was dismissed last week by the State of Michigan Court of Appeals.

A group of Charlevoix residents and public officials made the appeal about four weeks ago, after the passage of an apportionment plan recently that redrew the county commission districts. This plan resulted in the city of Charlevoix and Charlevoix Township being split

"It is the legal equivalent of a slam-dunk."

Mary Beth Kur,
Charlevoix prosecuting attorney into two districts at the Pine River Channel.

The group stated that the approved plan was too confusing for the voters living in those areas with the splits and did not follow the law by splitting the city of Charlevoix and Charlevoix Township.

However, the appeals court ruled this was not the case.

In a written order, the court said, "Given the geography of Charlevoix County, the districts are reasonably compact and nearly as square as practical. The division of the city of Charlevoix and certain townships, as well as the combining of cities and townships into single districts, represents a reasonable choice, given the population distribution in the county and the attempt to satisfy the guidelines for contiguous and compact districts."

The ruling further stated, "The divisions in the adopted plan are along significant geographical features or township boundaries."

Mary Beth Kur, Charlevoix County Prosecuting Attorney and member of the Charlevoix County Apportionment Committee, said it

School gets high marks on Standard and Poor's test

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

Charlevoix received top ratings from Standard and Poor's, a New York-based company that recently completed a "School Evaluation Services" (SES) study, a new web-based school evaluation tool.

"I think it's (the study) a tool that can be useful if you were shopping for schools. But, it's not new information, it has been there all along," Superintendent of Charlevoix Public Schools, John Sturock said.

Sturock is disappointed that it cost the state $13 million to conduct the test in order to draw attention to information that was already available. He doesn't think that a lot of people will use it.

He said the study is a way for Michigan Governor John Engler to hold schools accountable.

"He (Engler) wants to hold schools accountable in an easy way; this (the study) is a business way. Not that it's not good stuff, but how does the common person digest and make sense of all of it," Sturock questioned.

The study's analysis is based on publicly available data from Michigan school's during the years 1996-1997, 1997-1998 and 1998-1999.

Their findings for the Charlevoix Public School Districts include a laundry list of academic strengths.

The district's graduation rate for the period studied is recorded as 94.8 percent, "well above the state average," 85.6 percent.

The study also found that the district had a wider achievement gap between economically advantagged and disadvantaged students than does the rest of the state.

"The proportion of MEAP tests passed by economically disadvantaged students is 48 percent, compared with 67 percent for non-disadvantaged students," the test results analysis states.

The Charlevoix gap was six percentage points higher than the state average.

Sturock said the reason for the larger gap could be that Charlevoix schools test all their students and many school districts do not. In support of Sturock's claim is the company's finding — "Charlevoix schools had moderately above average MEAP participation."

The Charlevoix District also proved to be wealthy. The district's per student operating expenditures of $7,097 were found to be moderately above the state average of $6,565.

And, the district's taxable property value of $292,874 per student is exceptionally higher than the state average of $133,829 and is among the highest in the state.

When considering what school will best suit a student, parents are urged to look beyond this study because it has holes. There are numerous variables Sturock says aren't accounted for.

The company even admits that the results are not entirely conclusive.

Under the "Important Data Issues" section of the study the company states, "There are many important aspects of schooling that are difficult to measure and are not well documented."

"SES is not an all-encompassing 'final word' on schools, but rather one means of school evaluation to be considered together with other measures, including those of a more qualitative nature," the study added.

For more information on the results log on at www.ses.standard-andpoors.com.

Frustrations, fun accompany the search for 'why?'

Jeremy McBain

'Just a thought'

This is a job full of frustrations that lead to humor.

In this job, I must make sure we tell our readers the truth and we can't hold back. Sometimes the truth is positive and sometimes it is negative....journalists can't control that.

But, the messenger is sometimes not liked very much. People tend to take their anger out on him or her.

In this job, my reporter and I are the messengers. We work as hard as we can to give our readers the truth about what is happening in their community, regardless of the light it shines on the city.

Many people understand this, but still hate the messenger. I understand that and accept it.

But, what is frustrating are those individuals in the community — especially those in government positions — who think news should only be positive, even if it means the truth is withheld.

They seem to think of us as their personal "public relations" company. And if we do not promote their event, plan or way of thinking, they tend to get angry with us.

"Why didn't you print that picture of such-and-such event I gave to you?" one angry person may ask. Perhaps their picture was just one of over 50 pictures of the same event we had and perhaps their picture was really not very good; they really don't care. In their mind, we should print exactly what they want and say exactly what they want.

As I said earlier though, this thinking usually comes from government officials.

"How dare you ask the community to comment on that issue," was one comment I heard recently by a city official who was mad about a "What do you think?" topic on the marina.

This official thought we should not ask the public what they thought on the idea of building a marina, because it was too early to get opinions.

However, the city had two "unofficial" plans of a new marina that were being shown at various community functions around town and were displayed in the lobby of city hall.

I guess this official just didn't want the community to discuss those plans. This same official also has expressed his anger with the stories in the Courier, saying we are negative and try to be controversial to sell papers. Like I stated before, I can't help it if a story is negative for the city government. I don't make the news.

This official has also gotten angry with us for some of the questions we ask. For example, a while back we wrote a couple of stories about those flower baskets hanging from light poles downtown. In researching the story I asked, "If a basket were to fall on a pedestrian, who would be responsible?" Apparently, it is inappropriate for me to ask this question to city officials about something hanging over the heads of pedestrians by thin chains.

On the same issue, our reporter Julie Musilek asked — after finding out the baskets were quite an expense to the city at over $20,000 — "Should we spend $20,000 on hanging baskets?" Angry officials felt it was wrong to question government spending habits in Charlevoix.

And this happens time and again. We ask a serious question, one that gets to the truth of the issue and anger the officials just by asking it.

Sometimes I find actions funny. It makes me laugh when government officials get angry at us for reporting the truth. I find it funny that officials accuse us of negative reporting when we just are reporting the silly things they do. While it is concerning it is still humorous that they sometimes seem to think they can tell us what to report.

Especially in Charlevoix, I have only been here for almost 2 years, but I have noticed some city officials really hate it when you question them about spending. They especially hate it when asked, "Why?"

"Why do we need to spend this money on this sidewalk project?"

"Why do we need a large marina plan?"

"Why" is a very powerful question for a reporter. It gets right down to the nitty-gritty of the issue. "Why" is generally not an easy answer for government officials to answer and still keep the spin. That is why I love it so much. I don't expect everyone to agree with me or what we think is news. What I hope our readers understand is the Charlevoix Courier does not purposefully go out and try to find negative stories just as we do not purposefully try to find positive stories. We take them as we find them and write them as we see them.

I also encourage our readers to ask "why" of their government more often. You may find out what it is like to be in my shoes and get a couple of chuckles out of the answers you receive.

Side note: We are holding this month's "What do you think?" question for one more week. Since the question is "What do you think about the Venetian Festival?" and this week is Venetian Festival, we felt we should give our readers more time to respond.

What I think about the Charlevoix Venetian Festival:

ing cars at such a pier will be an utter mess. Who will this pier benefit? Where is common sense?

Now I read that our city fathers want to put sidewalks along Michigan and Belvedere avenues.

Who wants more people trekking down these streets?

Who will these sidewalks benefit? Apparently not the protesting street residents who have the most immediate stake in how their streets are utilized. Where is common sense?

In the first instance, thousands of people will be further inconvenienced for the benefit of about 65 more boaters in an already crowded lake. In the latter two instances, very specific groups of Charlevoix residents will be directly inconvenienced for the questionable benefit of undefined members of the public.

These projects demonstrate a trend in the way our city is being managed — if we can find the money for a project, just do it! Perhaps a more thoughtful approach, respecting the interests of those most affected, even if their numbers are not great, would evidence a more sophisticated level of planning and leadership — something which our wonderful city deserves.

Remember traffic laws

Editor:
Regarding traffic laws: pedestrians versus two ton autos.

Before we hit one of our amply proportioned downstaters seeking to cross from one side of Bridge Street to the other, cone and fudge clasped to hand, isn't it time we reminded them that we are so civilized now that we have cross walks clearly marked for their use?

Further, for both the he-men and he-women pushing their barge-size SUV's up and down Bridge Street as well as our rotund guests, might we not publicize the fact that state law requires that motorists yield the right of way to any pedestrian occupying a crosswalk with so much as one tootsie and his double-dip cone?

Let's start obeying the law, drivers and walkers, before someone gets hurt or killed!

Thank you

Editor:

On behalf of the East Jordan Rotary Club, I would like to take this opportunity to publicly thank the more than 100 businesses of Charlevoix County that responded to our campaign to purchase complimentary children's tickets for our upcoming Kelly-Miller Circus on Aug. 18 at the Snowmobile Club of East Jordan.

Currently over 650 tickets will be distributed to needy children throughout Charlevoix County to attend either the afternoon or early evening performance.

Your support to these kinds of programs does make a difference. Role models are so important in shaping the values of young people. How gratifying to know that the ticket you sponsored could change the direction of a child's life.

If you or your company was missed in our original campaign and you would like to sponsor tickets, please contact event chairperson Barb Worgess at 536-2092 or any East Jordan Rotarian. Tickets cost $5 each and may be purchased in any quantity.

The East Jordan Rotary Club is committed to making the world a better place for everyone.

Again, thanks for your support of this community project.

Stormwater runoff

Editor:

Storm water run off and its effects on our land and water have come to the public's attention in the Charlevoix Courier (page 1, July 4), and a letter to the editor, (June 20), by Ellis Boal and Virginia Heick. Charlevoix residents are becoming concerned about the pollutants that stormwater carries to our lakes and streams, because we now live in an area with a large number of impervious surfaces from which contaminants drain. Each year with increasing development we have less of nature's filtration system, greenbelt areas, to protect our watersheds.

A meeting of the Stormwater Appeals Board was on June 22. Citizens concerned about prevention of loss of greenbelt areas attended in response to a proposal to delete parts of our Storm Water Ordinances, which encourage that buffer zones be left around wetlands and streams. This deletion was suggested by Mary Beth Kur, prosecuting attorney, and Wendy Armstrong, the county soil erosion officer, as part of an effort to eliminate material from the ordinances which cannot be enforced.

The response to a plea for the public to go to this meeting, as stated in the June 20 article, was impressive. About 20 people came, and they were allowed a unique opportunity to express themselves.

Norm Probert, on behalf of the Lake Charlevoix Association, read a letter which he would have sent to the committee. He asked the group to reconsider deletion of the buffer zone sections and said that the Tip of the Mitt Watershed Council could be asked for their expertise in revising the ordinance language, if the committee desired their help. He emphasized that the main concern of the Lake Charlevoix Association was the water quality of the lake. Tim Boyko, Hayes township supervisor, said that we need to harmonize the storm water ordinances and best management practices for protecting greenbelts. Few townships up north have protective zoning. Tim stressed to the county commissioners that we should set the "gold standard." Set an example and make ours the best ordinances for Charlevoix County.

Others said that in addition to needing stronger natural resource protection, Wendy Armstrong, our county's Soil Erosion Officer, who issues stormwater permits cannot do a proper job of overseeing activity on construction sites. It is clear that she does not have an adequate staff for the number of permits that cross her desk. I was surprised to hear in a June 12 meeting of the Stormwater Appeals Board that she does not visit residential sites unless she receives a complaint. Surely all sites, residential and commercial, should be inspected on a regular basis.

The majority of natural resource protection takes local impetus. Virginia Heick submitted a proposed revision of the ordinance sections which deal with buffer zones. She used published Tip of the Mitt guidelines. Let's hope this revision will have some "teeth" in it. An ordinance that sets best management practices as the standard would accommodate both people and our land and water. There is an appeal process for those who would need a variance. We'll need legal protection for our environment as the demands placed on it escalate with population growth. Let's also hope that our Soil Erosion Officer will be able to do her job more effectively with the aid of enforceable regulations.

William Carroll Connett IV: May 28, 1912 - July 19, 2001

William Carroll Connett IV was born May 28, 1912 in St. Louis, the only son of Mary Jessie Schlafly and William C. Connett III.

He died at 7:30 p.m. July 19 in Charlevoix from complications associated with a stroke.

returned to St. Louis determined to make something of himself and to have some effect on the world.

He became involved in Democratic politics and attended the Benton School of Law (1934-37) and its successor The City College of Law and Finance (1937-38) at night. He was admitted to the Missouri Bar in 1938 and started a private practice with Frank Morris.

His area of special interest was estate and tax law. For a number of years he maintained homes in Palm Beach, Fla., Elsberry, Mo., and Charlevoix.

William Connett married Josephine Desloge Fusz July 5, 1938 and the couple had two sons, William Carroll Connett V of Clayton and Squire S. Connett of Ellisville, and one daughter, Charing Fusz Scoular of Houston, Texas. Barbara was born June 2, 1941 in Petoskey, the daughter of Lawrence M. and Marian B. (Fowler) Wines.

She spent most of her life in the Harbor Springs and Good Hart area and has lived the past three years in Charlevoix. She was President of the Pine River Place Tenants Association and received the Charlevoix Rotary Club's Service Above Self Award in 2000 for her work at Pine River Place.

Several running for city council positions in fall

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

Battle lines have been drawn as five Charlevoix residents representing the city's three wards gear up to duke it out at the November 6 election when three seats on city council will be decided by voters.

Voters will be asked to decide whether or not first ward councilman Norman "Boogie" Carlson will retain his position or if a write-in candidate will prevail; if Bill Bellows will continue to represent the second ward or if Douglas "D.J." Way Jr. is the better man for the job; and whether the third ward would be better served by Shirley Gibson or Tom Rankl.

Carlson, 34, lives at 207 West Hurlbut in Charlevoix. He has represented the first ward for two years and at this time is running unopposed, but could be faced by a write-in candidate. The November election will mark the first time he will run for re-election.

Carlson said he should be re-elected because he has been attentive to the needs and concerns of his constituents.

"I think I have taken a real interest in the people in the ward (first ward). I try to listen to them and vote for the good of the community," Carlson said.

He added that if re-elected he hopes to play a role in "continuing to improve local infrastructure" and to closely monitor the East Park project.

Carlson shares the first ward with fellow councilman Bill Haggard whose seat is not up for election this November.

The second ward is currently represented by Gabe Campbell and Bellows. Campbell's seat will not be on the ballot, but Bellows will face off with Way.

Bill Bellows, 67, and his wife Bonnie, live at 507 State Street. Bill has been a councilman for a total of eight years. He feels that he should be re-elected because he has the experience.

"I think I have done a good job. I also understand the inner workings of the city and have taken seminars and courses in various aspects of city government," Bellows said.

Not only has he been on council and gained political know-how, but he says he also knows the community. Bellows has been a Charlevoix resident for 35 years.

But, even though he knows the community like the back of his hand, he isn't going into the election with a set of priorities.

"I have no specific agenda. I hope to continue with infrastructure improvements as planned," he said.

Outside of city hall you can find Bellows busy with the Knights of Columbus and American Legion Post #226.

Way, 38, lives at 1110 Beacon Street with his wife, Kristina, and their four kids: Kelly, 17; Stephanie, 11; Jon, 9 and Ben, 7.

Both he and his wife are Charlevoix natives and he thinks it is time for him to start giving back to the community.

"We have our home and businesses in town, this area has been good to the Way family," he said. "I don't have a gripe or a beef, I just want to give back. I'm pushing 40, it's time to do something for the town."

Way is a member of the Charlevoix County Snowmobile Council, a board member at the Charlevoix Assembly of God Church and is board treasurer for the Ezra House facility for the homeless.

The second ward battle is just as intense as the fight for the third ward seat.

The third ward race is between two Charlevoix residents who have never sat on council before.

Current councilman and deputy mayor A.J.

Withoef has not filed a nominating petition and isn't planning to return next year. Withoef said he is moving outside of the ward, so he will no longer meet eligibility requirements to serve.

However, his vacancy sparked the interest of both Gibson and Rankl.

Gibson, 54, is a Charlevoix native who has been politically active during her stay. Her involvement in local politics and civic organizations ranges from a 10-year stint as a county reserve police officer to five years of service with the city planning commission. This is the first time she will run for council.

Gibson is an employee for Northern Michigan Review in Petoskey, the company that owns the Charlevoix Courier.

She said when she first got involved in local politics she did so because she "didn't like things that were happening."

"I like politics. I think they (council) need someone like me. I'm not trying to cause trouble, but they need someone with new ideas on board; this is a democracy," Gibson said.

Gibson lives at 209 East Upright. She said she is especially interested in local environmental issues including: water quality and wildlife protection.

She also said she is concerned about Charlevoix's year-round residents. She said trends have shown Charlevoix is becoming more of a second home community and residents are having a tough time making it financially.

"I think I bring a needed new perspective that will represent others in the city of Charlevoix on council, that is, working people and women," she said.

Gibson is going toe to toe with Rankl, owner of local solid waste handling business Top Rank.

Rankl, 41 has lived in Charlevoix for 12 years with his wife Jeanne and his two boys, Zak, 12 and Jake, 10, after serving on the Charlevoix County Solid Waste Planning Committee he found he was ready to get more involved in local politics.

"I've seen Charlevoix grow through the past 12 years and I want to be part of that growth. I think I will bring with me a common sense, down to earth approach to what goes on," he said.

There will be no August primary to narrow the candidate field before the November 6 city council election when the three council seats will be filled.

Linda's planning tools have included attending seminars focused on barn restoration hosted by the Michigan Barn Restoration Society, meeting with state historical preservation representatives in Lansing and meeting with a group of engineers from Harbor Springs.

Richard said that Linda has taken a special interest in castles. She has visited over 75 castles and has taken extensive notes while touring. She also studied castles and cathedrals during an independent study while she attended college.

Richard's brother Glen said, "She is trying to refurbish the castle as close as possible to its original design. Linda wants to help the community and allow the castle to be used for different community events."

Richard said that the community events will most likely be centered around the courtyard area that, when facing the property from M-66, is located toward the rear of the site on the left. He foresees uses including a town meeting center and a wedding site.

Expert evaluation proved the Mueller family has a long way to go before wedding bells ring and meetings are called to order.

Glen said there are major structural problems in the first building on the left when you are facing the grounds. He said you

"We knew this project would be a work of love. We are going to make this thing a real jewel of the community."

Richard Mueller,
Co-owner, with his wife, of the Castle can't see the issues at first glance but experts have found it needs some work. He referred to this building as unstable and dangerous.

Richard added the building has similar structural struggles as the Leaning Tower of Pisa.

Other problems at the site include: roof rot, leaks, broken glass, crumbling brick and water in the basement of one of the buildings that the family is currently working on removing.

Richard referred to the project as "The Road to Restoration." The couple plans to take about five years to travel the length of the road. The intensive work will begin next year.

"We knew this project would be a work of love. We are going to try to make this thing a real jewel of the community," Richard said. Changes the couple will make include removing two site features that were not part of the original design — the grassy berm and the metal stage. Richard asks that those interested in purchasing the stage to call 547-5130 for more information.

The Mueller name first became associated with the 38 acres that make up the Castle Farms on Oct. 5 when the couple bought the property at a foreclosure sale held at the Charlevoix County Courthouse for $300,000.

The Reibel family who owned the property for 32 years were given six months to redeem it. The six month redemption period would have expired April 5, but Mueller made Kim Reibel, executor of the estate, an offer and Reibel accepted.

The Jan. 4 closing eliminated the six month redemption and finalized Mueller's acquisition.

Bay Township votes down wind generators

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

The Bay Township Planning Commission and township board recently decided for now, wind turbine generators won't be located in the township — but they may pop up across the water in Eveline Township.

On July 9 the Bay Township Planning Commission met to discuss whether or not to amend township zoning ordinance language to provide for the wind generators in the agricultural zoning district as a special use.

By a vote of 6-1 the commission decided that the proposed change didn't fit with the township's land use plan and they would recommend to the township board not to provide language in the zoning ordinance that would allow and regulate wind generators as a special use.

Planning commission chairman Bill Newman said that the language in the land use plan was about preserving open space, views and rural character.

"The most compelling thing was that they (wind generators) are definitely detrimental to open views," Newman said.

However, the flip side of the coin which was argued by township planner Audrey Etienne, who voted in favor of wind generators. She said without these "windmills" some farmers can't afford to continue to work the land, thus fragmenting farmland.

Working to minimize the fragmentation of farmland was also included in the Bay Township land use plan.

"It made it a tough issue and it was a tough decision. I guess we thought the detriment to the views outweighed the argument that one landowner could keep their land by doing that (locating wind generators on private property)," Newman said.

However, Newman said the private arrangements local landowners could have made with a wind generator business weren't a priority for the commission. He claims their focus was on whether or not the proposed change fit with the land use plan.

On July 12, the township board agreed with the commission and voted the proposal down by a vote of 3-2.

However, Charlevoix County Planner Larry Sullivan said there are three ways this issue could come up again in Bay Township. He said it could be brought up again by an application, by the volition of the township or through litigation.

"I think the township has to be careful. If it comes to litigation, I think the township will end up on the short end of the stick," Sullivan said.

He said township zoning has to adhere to the question, what are "reasonable uses." He then offered the example of cellular towers.

"It's like cellular towers, nobody wants them, but when it gets into litigation you're going to lose. You may as well have reasonable regulations. It's kind of a balancing act," Sullivan said.

Sullivan also said that similar proposals are being made in the county. He said Eveline Township is currently looking at their zoning ordinance language to see if wind generators are a possibility.

Venetian Fireworks lawsuit parties to face mediation

Charlevoix City Council met in closed session at 5 p.m. July 10 to discuss pending litigation that followed the July 1997 Venetian Festival fireworks explosion that claimed the life of Charlevoix resident Mark Yager and injured at least 15 others.

The 10 lawsuits that came about following the tragedy will be mediated at Charlevoix High School, 108 East Garfield Street at 9 a.m. July 31.

Former Detroit Circuit Judge Barry Howard will act as mediator at the meeting. The purpose of the mediation is to attempt to settle the cases prior to Charlevoix County 33rd Circuit Court Judge Richard Pajtas hearing additional motions.

BASES to raise funds for activities and building

Scott Kelly, Executive Director of BASES Teen Center, has announced a decision by the BASES Board of Directors to initiate a fund-raising campaign.

The goal is to raise $115,000 to support teen activities and to renovate the building. The campaign was kicked off with a donation of $2,500 and a pledge of an additional $2,500. Over the past two months $53,000 has been raised toward this goal.

BASES (Bay Area Substance Education Services) was started in 1994 by Kelly and his wife, Celia Partida. In 1997, BASES assumed operation of the community teen center and consolidated all activities into the building at 208 Lincoln Street. BASES is a nonprofit organization.

The Teen Center provides, at no charge, a safe environment for young people after school. Activities include recreation tutoring programs and a Junior Great Books class.

BASES is also a licensed provider of substance abuse education, prevention strategies and treatment services to teenagers of Charlevoix and Emmet counties; primarily Boyne City, Charlevoix, East Jordan and Petoskey.

Usage of BASES facilities and services has shown a steady increase in the two years from 1998 to 2000.

Sign-ins for the Teen Center are up 41 percent from 3,000 to 4,200. Participation in teen substance abuse groups and parent support groups are up 74 percent and 91 percent respectively.

The fund-raising program will continue throughout 2001.

For information or to learn about BASES teen activities and services call Kelly at 547-1144.

Where Is It?

Tell us where in the Charlevoix Area you think this is.

In an effort to add a little more fun to our lives and yours, the Charlevoix Courier is working on creating interactive areas of the newspaper for our readers. In the spirit of this, we are announcing the creation of a new contest called, "Where is it?"

Each week, the Charlevoix Courier will publish a picture of some item on a local landmark or building. We invite our readers to send in their guesses on where this picture was taken.

Not only can our readers have a little fun testing their knowledge of Charlevoix, they can also win a little cash in the process.

Every six months, all of the readers who guessed correctly will have their guesses placed in a large box. The editor of the Charlevoix Courier, Jeremy McBain, will then pick a name from this box at random and that person will receive a check for $100.

Since every winning guess will be placed in the box, the more times you enter correct answers to "Where is it?" your chances of winning increase.

Court dismisses appeal of apportionment

APPEAL

was always the committee's intention of following the letter of the law when they redrew the districts.

"(This ruling) is the legal equivalent of a slam dunk," she added.

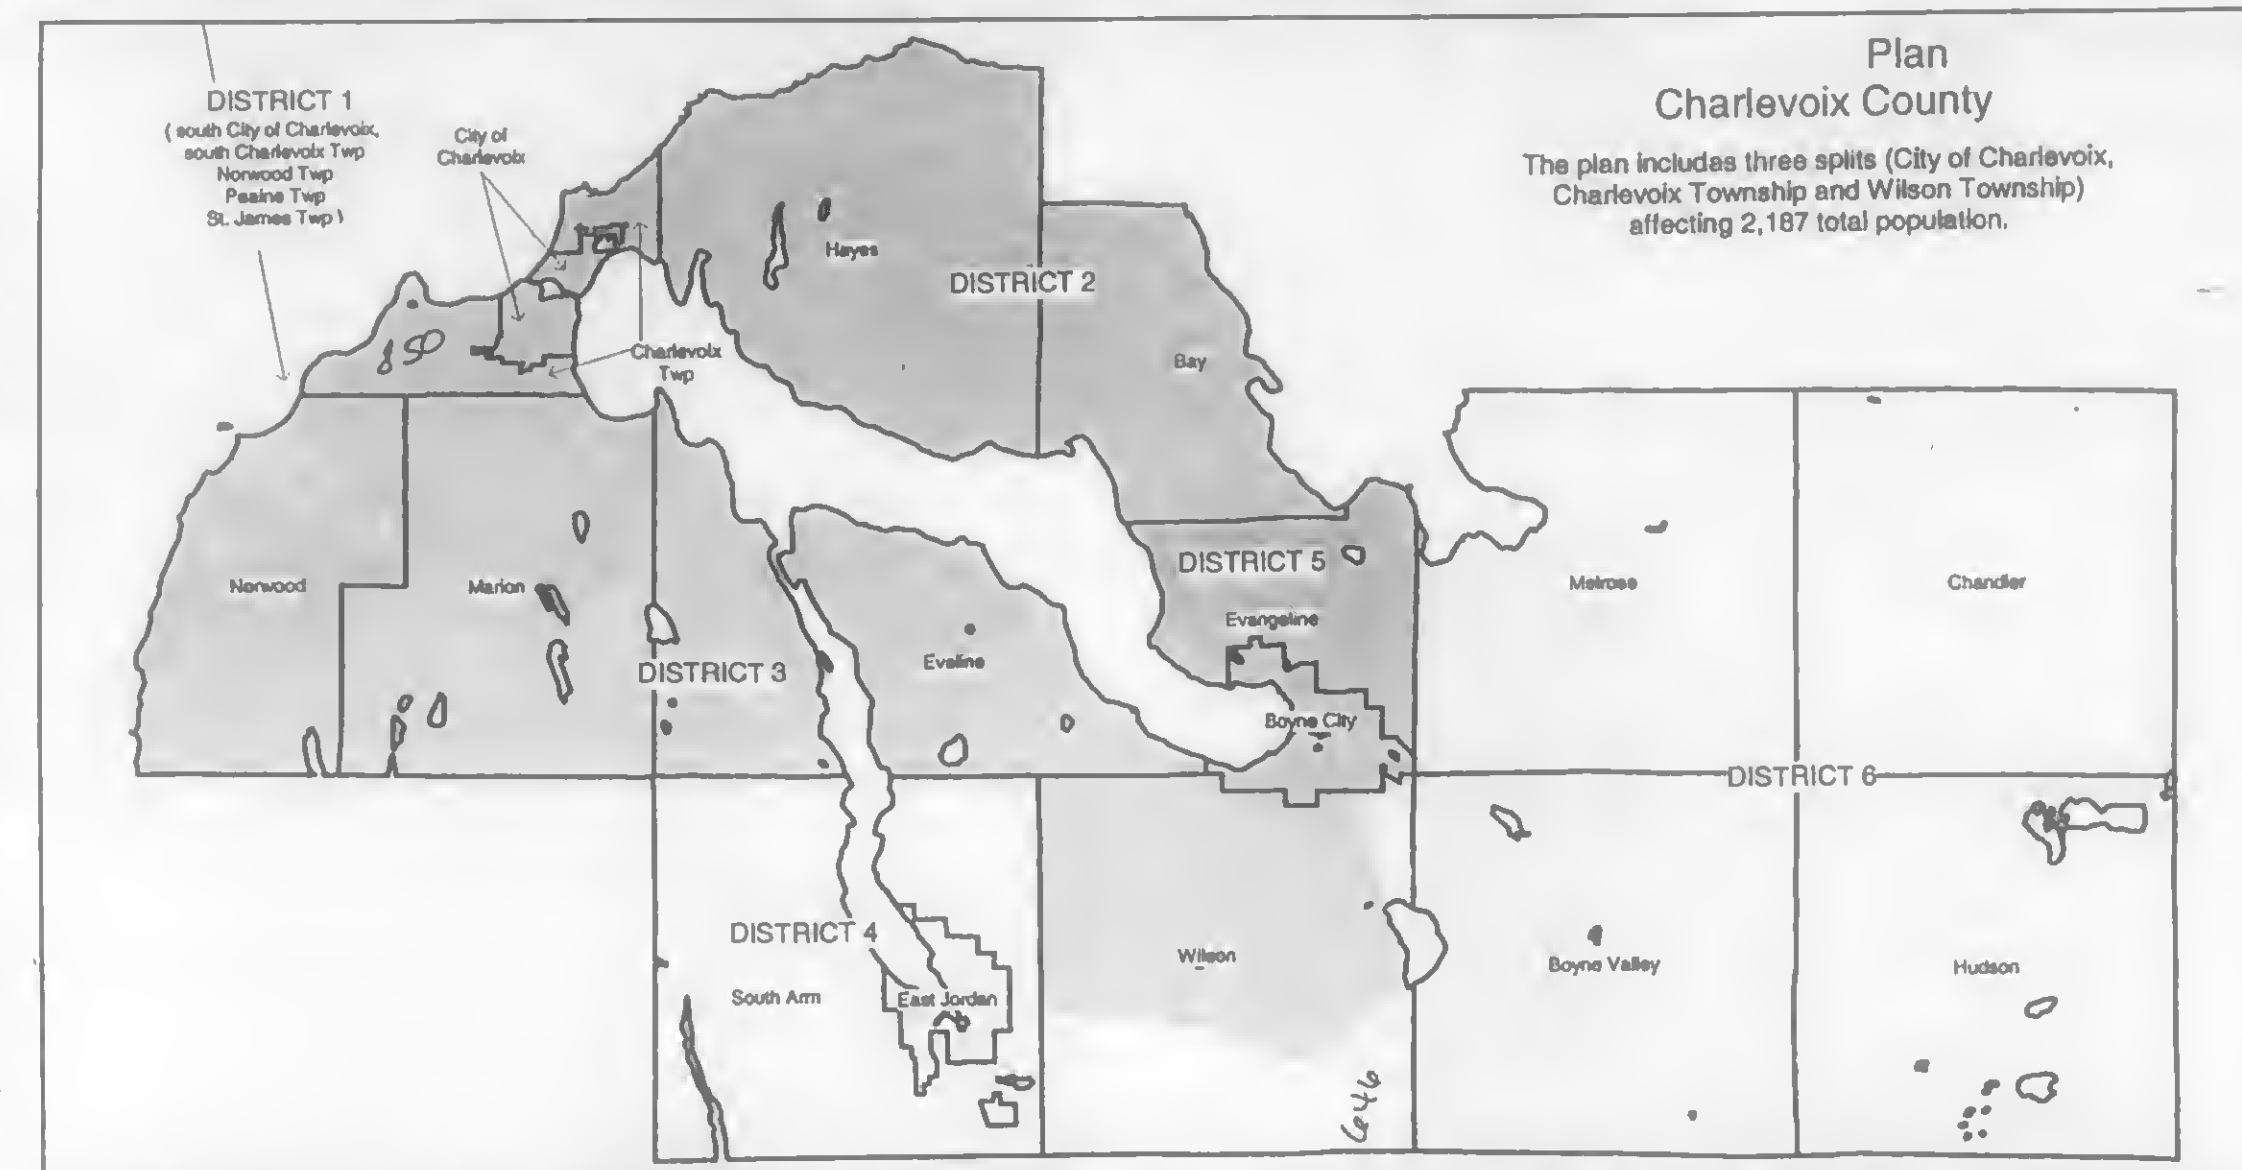

Every 10 years, an Apportionment Committee — composed of the Charlevoix County Prosecutor, County Clerk, the Charlevoix County Treasurer and representatives from the county Republican and Democratic parties — meets to redraw county commission districts based on the latest census figures.

Among the rules they had to follow was keeping each commissioner's district about even in population numbers and keeping the districts contiguous.

After much debate, the committee determined the best plan was one that changed the city of Charlevoix and Charlevoix Township from being in one district to two. The committee split the districts along the Pine River Channel, with one being north of the channel and the other being south of the channel.

Committee members John Haggard, Charlevoix County Republican Party Chair, and Joan Balch, county treasurer, did not vote in favor of this plan. Both Haggard and Balch were members of the group that appealed the plan.

After learning of the dis-

Charlevoix County's new commissioner districts will be as they are outlined above. The city of Charlevoix and Charlevoix Township will be split into two districts — District 1 and District 2. Voters living on the north side of the Pine River Channel will be in District 2, voters living on the south side of the channel will be in District 1. (Courtesy graphic) missal, Haggard said he was disappointed.

"Knowing the situation, it is very difficult to overturn the committee's decision. But you always hold out high hopes for that," he said.

Others whose names appeared on the official appeal included: Charlevoix Township supervisor Oscar Stroud and Charlevoix County commissioners Shirley Roloff and Donald R. Smith. Also coming out against the plan were the Charlevoix City Council, Wilson Township, Charlevoix Township, Marion Township and Norwood Township.

In addition to the appeal, the group supported a different apportionment plan which would have created seven commissioner districts and eliminated the district splits in the city of Charlevoix and Charlevoix Township, but would split South Arm Township into two districts.

However, the appeals court stated, "The court's review is not to determine whether the 'best plan' was adopted."

In a written response, Smith said of the dismissal, "The adopted plan certainly warranted a review. It is not in the best interest of the townships or the city of Charlevoix. The governing bodies of five townships and the Charlevoix City Council all voted unanimously to support an alternate seven district plan."

The court stated that their review was not to determine whether the "best plan" was adopted. It's apparent that Charlevoix County voters will have to deal with the adopted plan for the next 10 years."

Haggard said the group has no plans of taking the matter to the state supreme court.

Charlevoix Township has over $1 million in surplus

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

The Charlevoix Township budget which was accepted at a recent public hearing shows the township ended June with a general fund surplus of over $1 million.

"Our millage rate is relatively low. But, we have always been fiscally responsible. We would always rather have a surplus than come up short," township treasurer Theda Williams said.

She explained the township is hanging onto the "cash on hand" so that as the area continues to grow, the general fund will be deep enough to pay for expenses associated with water and sewer infrastructure projects.

"There are areas in the township that look like they will need sewer soon and that is a costly proposition," Williams said.

She explained that half of the surplus is designated for a sewer sinking fund that will pay for future projects.

The township plans to run lines to Pine Pointe first. Williams said the board expects Pine Pointe will have the service within the next five years.

For the year 2000 the township brought in $603,213.32 and spent $345,757.34 adding $257,445.98 to the surplus. The additional funds from 2000 brought the "cash on hand" total to $1,051,536.27.

The budget projects the general fund will bring in $584,548 in 2001-2002.

The highest anticipated expense for the township in 2001-2002 is associated with township highways and streets. The budget shows highway and street improvements may cost $120,000.

However, the township anticipated spending $75,000 in 2000-2001 on roads and highways and the actual budget from the period showed they spent no money in that area.

Where the most money was spent was on township board salaries which cost the township $89,112. The budget anticipates this expense will rise to $98,600 this year.

The budget also shows anticipated expenditures for the upcoming year to include $60,523.61 for capital improvements. Williams said the improvements the township plans to make have not yet been designated.

Aside from the $500,000 allocated to the sewer sinking fund there is an additional $500,000 in miscellaneous expenses.

Williams said the miscellaneous money is cash the township has saved that now earns interest. She said money could be used to maintain the township water system but the township has no plans to spend it all this year.

Gita Butcher is starting to live her life of adventure.

The 23-year-old student from Charlevoix — fresh from a one year stay in England — is packing her bags for a 1 to 2 year trip to Japan as a teaching assistant. Butcher leaves for the Asian country July 27.

Butcher will be staying in Kamimura, Japan and working as a teaching assistant for a school's English department. According to Butcher, Kamimura is a small town in the Nagano area of Japan.

"My duties range from quite a few things," she said. In Japan, the government wants students to start thinking about other languages early in their education. One of Butcher's duties will be to work with young students by just talking to them and working with high school students on improving their mastery of the English language.

She will also work with the English department by creating and implementing various seminars.

Butcher's chance to stay in Japan came after a meeting with the Japanese consulate in the United States.

While she was at college — Marymount College in New York — she was taking lessons in international studies. One of her teachers was a Japanese survivor of World War II and a well-known history professor and she encouraged Butcher to apply to a program through the Japanese consulate.

The program not only gives the Japanese a chance to learn English, but also gives Butcher a chance to experience the country over an extended period of time and at minimal cost to her. While in Japan, Butcher will be given a fully-furnished apartment to stay in, receive a tax free salary of $30,000 and will get a free airline ticket to and from Japan.

Butcher said she is excited to learn about the country first-hand and make some "personal connections with the people."

However, she said she is nervous about some of the customs in Japan. For example, when she arrives in the country, it is customary for her to give her hosts various gifts.

"Right now, I am thinking about bringing American things, I went to Kilwins and was looking at salt-water taffy. Plus, anything with English on it is very popular," she said. Butcher said even matchbooks with English wording on them would be great gifts.

Of course, this isn't the first time Butcher has found herself having to get acclimated to a new culture. While she was staying in England, as part of her schooling, she lived in a "flat" with several other students who were from England.

"I met some cool people....I didn't want to leave," she said. Once Butcher's stay in Japan is complete she said she is not sure what her plans will be. However, she knows that they will involve some sort of new adventure.

"In a perfect world, I would bike the Appalachian Trail," she said. Butcher added she is also considering some graduate studies.

"I don't know right now if I want to make a commitment to the real world yet," she joked.

Musical workshop to be offered by arts center

The Crooked Tree Arts Center will have a free workshop and set of master classes for young area musicians from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m. on July 31 at Petoskey Middle School.

The CutTime Players, a group of musicians from the Detroit Symphony Orchestra, will be presenting a demonstration and instruction for area music students. The morning will begin with a lecture/demonstration on the finer aspects of ensemble playing.

Students will be divided into eight groups for master classes on individual instruments. These sessions will feature three student performers who will be coached by CutTime Musicians for approximately 20 minutes as other students observe.

This is a great opportunity for area students to learn from professional, world-class musicians who have returned to northern Michigan after a week-long visit in November of 2001.

The CutTime Players will be performing on July 30 at the Petoskey Waterfront, Midway Commons and July 31 in Boyne City, in the bandshell.

Both of these concerts begin at 7:30 p.m. and are free of charge.

These free concerts are sponsored in part by Crooked Tree Arts Center, North Central Michigan College, Petoskey Area Jaycees, the Charlevoix County Community Foundation and the Petoskey Downtown Management Board.

To register for the workshop, please stop by the Crooked Tree Arts Center to complete a registration form. Space in the workshop is limited and is open to all area high school students.

Any questions should be directed to Karey Johnson, Education Director or John Van Patten at the Crooked Tree Arts Center, 347-4337.

The arts center is located at 461 E. Mitchell Street, downtown Petoskey.

Increase in permits seen following gun law's start

By JOCEY FLORENCE
Staff writer

Charlevoix officials say they have seen an increase in concealed weapons permit requests since the passage of a new law passed by Michigan legislature at the beginning of the month.

The law makes it easier to obtain a concealed weapons license and allow a greater number of individuals to carry a weapon.

Representatives at both the county clerk's office and the sheriff's office have noted that there has been a sharp increase in the number of residents requesting permits since the law has been passed.

A representative from the county clerk's office estimated that they have received about 35 applications this month.

Although the law has been met with wide opposition across the state, Charlevoix County Sheriff George Lasater said that he had no opinion of it.

"I'm just abiding by the law," he said.

The purpose of the law is to standardize the procedure by which a Michigan resident can obtain a concealed weapon.

Previously, the law had given local gun board unlimited discretion to deny permits to prospective gun owners. The law passed on July 1 has reduced the power of the local gun boards by forbidding the boards to deny a permit without a specific reason.

The law also raised the minimum age of a permit holder to 21 and has made criminal and mental health checks, as well as gun training courses, mandatory requirements in the permit process.

One of the conditions of the law gives prosecuting attorneys the right to resign from their local gun boards if they are in opposition to the law.

Mary Beth Kur, the Charlevoix Prosecuting Attorney, resigned from her position on the local gun board late last month. She stated she felt it would be a conflict of interest for her to stay on the board.

She is being replaced by Aaron Westerick, a police firearms instructor.

Youth from St. Mary's visit inner-city as missionaries

A team of young people and adults from St. Mary's parish in Charlevoix spent a week of their summer vacation reaching out to persons in need in the inner city of Detroit.

The team participated in a project called Young Neighbors in Action (YNIA). YNIA involves over 2000 participants in providing service to poor young children and families all across the United States.

This is the fourth missionary trip to the inner city of Detroit for the youth from St. Mary's. In the previous three years they have worked in a soup kitchen, spent time remodeling an old convent that is now being used to keep the youth off the streets, graffiti removal, landscaping, fixing up a home that will be used for the homeless, working with Alzheimer patients and distributing literature door to door about illegal toxic dumping and other environmental issues.

This year the youth spent the majority of their time working on what is called "Dismiss House." This is an abandoned home in the inner city of Detroit that was given to St. Rita's parish. The parish priest decided to fix up the house and use it as a place for people to live and rehab once they have been released from prison, they are given $75, a bus ticket and the clothes on their back and are expected to make it in society.

This house is a place for the people to live, learn life skills, get a job and be productive in society. The youth spent time painting, tearing down a garage, paneling and fixing up an attic, staining decks and other duties. They also worked at a convent that is being used as a youth house, tearing down brick walls and helping fix up the structure for the young people of the neighborhood. When the team finished with their work sites in the evening, they spent time learning and trying to get a better understanding of the needs of the poor and homeless.

Young Neighbors is an eye-opening experience for all who participate. The youth return to their communities with a better understanding of the needs and concerns of the poor. They also better understand their call to "feed the hungry, clothe the naked and shelter the homeless."

As many of the youth stated, they did not realize how fortunate they were and how they took things for granted.

The team this year consisted of: Melissa McDonough, Jennifer Scharenbroch, Dani Flowers, Tony Shearer, Shawna Flowers, Erin Buckner, Lee Barrett, Michael Flowers, Josh Christ, Sam Kupka, Alyssia McDonough, Tim Cross, Beth Egler and Patty Furtaw.

Michigan State University marching band to perform

By JULIE MUSLEK
Staff Writer

Each fall at Michigan State University, students return to campus and football season begins — the excitement of the crowd at the big stadium games is heightened by the intensity of the team's number one supporters, the band.

Every game, 350 students armed with instruments hit the field for half-time and pre-game shows. They rile up the crowd and celebrate touchdowns by simultaneously breaking out with the school's fight song.

Charlevoix's Venetian Festival is sort of like the local Rose Bowl and most would think two nights of fireworks, a carnival and 28 free band performances is enough to get people brimming with northern Michigan pride.

But this year, Charlevoix Venetian Festival, Inc. decided to team up with Lansing legend Tim

"This just fell into place. It's a great tribute to Charlevoix and the reputation the community and the festival has."

Tim Staudt,
Lansing resident who helped bring band to Charlevoix

Staudt to do something that hasn't been done before — they brought the MSU marching band to Charlevoix.

Staudt who has been a figure in sports radio for 30 years, said the band has never performed anywhere but for the team and has never been in northern Michigan.

"This just fell into place. It's a great tribute to Charlevoix and the reputation the community and the festival has," he said.

Ninety-three of the band members, along with band director of 13 years, John Madden, will perform in Charlevoix's street parade that begins at 11 a.m., July 28 and then they'll head over to East

Park for a 45 minute concert featuring more "traditional" music.

After the show, northern Michigan MSU alumni are invited to a picnic at Ferry Beach hosted by MSU alumnus Jeff Wellman.

The band will arrive July 27 via luxury buses donated by Dean Transportation. They will stay at "The Alpine" in rooms donated by Art Tebo who runs Boyne Resorts.

"In my mind this is extremely good for the Charlevoix area, a classy area to begin with, the MSU band is a very classy group and the Venetian Festival is very well organized. I'm looking forward to it," Staudt said.

Some safety tips to remember when on the water

Northern Michigan is starting another summer season, hopefully filled with many beautiful days and water-related activities.

These activities can be accident free and pleasurable if we focus on water safety, according to officials with the Northwest Michigan Community Health Agency and District Health Department Number Four.

Most water accidents are preventable, said Joshua R. Meyerson, MD, MPH, Medical Director of the health departments which serve residents throughout northwestern and northeastern lower Michigan.

Meyerson is medical director for Northwest Michigan Community Health Agency, which serves Antrim, Charlevoix, Emmet and Otsego counties. He is also Medical Director for District Health Department Number Four, which serves residents in Alpena, Cheboygan, Montmorency and Presque Isle counties.

In addition to his medical director duties, Meyerson provides specialized pediatric care to the Little Traverse Bay Band of Odawa Indians.

There are three key elements in reducing preventable accidents on the water, Dr. Meyerson said: 1) Supervision 2) Education 3) Use of appropriate safety equipment.

According to the American Water Ski Association (AWSA), water skiing attracts nearly 17 million Americans annually. The number of recreational swimmers, people enjoying power and sailboats, and those individuals who enjoy fishing, pushes the total number of people using the water millions higher.

Recent revisions in Michigan boating laws require mandatory wearing of a personal flotation device (PFD) by children under 12 years of age. Federal law has been changed to require a type I, II or III PFD on vessels fewer than 16 feet in length, in place of type IV or a throwable device.

Type I and II PFDs - or life jackets - are designed to turn an unconscious person face up in the water and are required to be worn by children under age six. The type III, sometimes called a ski vest, provides flotation but won't turn a disabled person onto his or her back.

Most boating fatalities are the result of capsizing or falling overboard. Some 80 percent of drowning victims are not wearing PFDs.

"Most boating accidents are sudden and unexpected," Meyerson said. "There is little, if any, time to reach for a personal flotation device, which is why you and other boat passengers should wear one all the time while on or around the water."

According to the U.S. Consumer

Product Safety Commission, in a comprehensive study of drowning and submersion incidents involving children under age 5 at the time of the submersion incident, one or both parents were supervising most victims. It is best to have one person with their full attention directed to safety in charge of supervising children on or near the water. When more than one person has the responsibility, it is too easy to be distracted if even for a short time, feeling that someone else will be watching the child.

Personal flotation devices should also be used by anyone who is around or using docks, Dr. Meyerson stressed.

"Children or adults can fall in between boats or docks and not be noticed," he said. "The use of the proper PFD can help to keep anyone alive if an accident occurs."

Additionally, the misuse of alcohol while boating is just as dangerous as it is when driving a motor vehicle, Meyerson said.

"It is also just as illegal. The same basic laws that cover motor vehicles apply to boating. It is illegal to operate a boat under the influence or while impaired by alcohol," he said.

Many local law enforcement agencies and the U.S. Coast Guard offer courses on water safety. In Michigan, the operator is responsible for the legal requirements and safe operation of a boat even if he/she does not own the boat.

"By being safety conscious, this can be a safe and fun summer for everyone," Meyerson said, noting the following precautions:

- Take time to learn the proper safe rules for your water-related activity;
- Be prepared with the right training and equipment; and
- Know the location of anyone that is enjoying the water with you.

Concert to be given to dedicate new organ

Organist Laurence Smith will be in concert July 29 at the First Congregational Church of Charlevoix, dedicating the newly refurbished and revoiced organ to which has been added five ranks of pipes.

The program, beginning at 3 p.m., will include numbers by J.S. Bach and W.A. Mozart and compositions of contemporary composers.

Laurence (Larry) Smith, regarded as one of the finest organists in Michigan, is a graduate of the Interlochen Fine Arts Academy and was a student of Robert Murphy. He received Bachelor of Music and Master of Music degrees in organ performance at the University of Michigan where he studied with internationally known organist Marilyn Mason.

Smith was director of Music and Worship at Bethlehem Lutheran Church in Traverse City from 1980-1999 when he resigned to accept the position as choral director at the Interlochen Arts Academy. He has been on the faculty from 1980 to the present time.

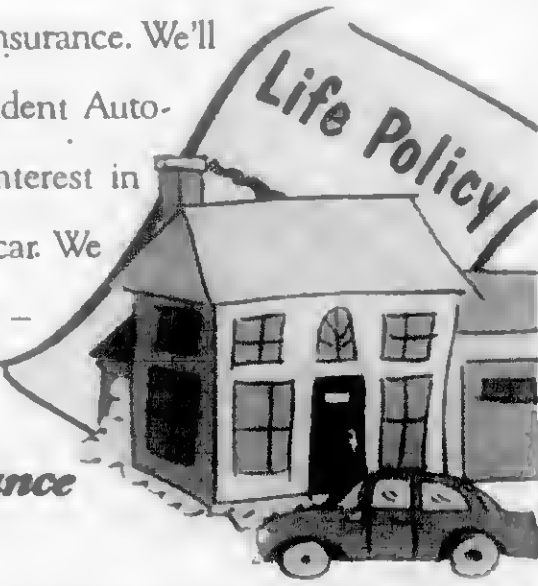

He became organist at St. Philip's Church in June, 2000.

The public is invited to share in this celebration and reception which follows. There is no charge, but donations will be accepted.

Stormwater board debates stormwater ordinance changes

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

The Stormwater Board of Appeals met July 12 to discuss the Charlevoix County Stormwater Control Ordinance and stepped one pace closer to a finished product.

The group is working their way through the almost 60 page ordinance, page by page. Board member and county commissioner Shirley Roloff said changes are being made to areas of the ordinance that county soil erosion officer Wendy Armstrong has had trouble enforcing.

One of the major areas where the group is looking to make changes is buffer zone language. Roloff said they are taking a close look at the definition.

On June 22 the group met with interested citizens and both listened to and recorded their concerns. The group also plans to look at how those concerns relate to the changes being made to the ordinance.

"They (county residents) should be involved, this is what it's all about. We are setting up procedure for the county," Roloff said.

The group has scheduled another work session for 9 a.m., July 27.

Roloff said they hope to complete the ordinance at this next meeting - the session may be the last before the public hearing.

Results are in for the latest yachting races

A. Nony Mouse
'Yachting notes'

A (Brief) Moment in the Sun: The vast multitudes gathered in Charlevoix-the-Beautiful awaiting the results of the Douglas Lake Sunfish Regatta broke into thunderous applause as it was first announced that Charlevoix Yacht Club skippers Tom Barnes and Linda Orlow were first in the Racing Division and Recreational Division, respectively.

The crowd quieted a bit when it was learned that there had been a scoring error, but then recovered as the correct final results were announced.

In the Racing Division: First, John Coble; Second, Tom Barnes and Third, Julian Magnus. Trailing were (4) Jay Butler, (5) Linda Norton, (6) Dan Reagan, (7) Dan Norton and (8) Tammy Orlow.

In the Recreational Division: First, Linda Orlow; Second, Otto Busard and Third, David Tuthill. Twenty-three Sunfish participated in the three race series with the third race being sailed in a virtual calm.

Congratulations to Barnes and Orlow and the rest of the Douglas Lake sailors on putting on a very successful event.

Charlevoix Yacht Club Summer Series: Meanwhile, back at home, those relying on wind power last Wednesday nursed their own way home or had help from their right-wing neighbors who fired up their dastardly infernal combustion engines.

Yes, the second race of the Summer Series was cancelled — which probably means that the scheduled open date (Sept. 5) will now feature a make-up and be the last race of the Summer Series. Tonight's race is actually two races sailed as one as it is also scored as the Charlevoix Venetian Regatta and may include some non-yacht club entries.

LaBlance Cup Race: A good breeze on or abate the beam granted the 15 participants a swift voyage to St. James on July 14. On July 15, the return trip was a very different story as the breeze faded and then died, an hour or so later, to come back with gusto.

In Division 1: The Jib & Main Fleet found ECLIPSE to be the winner with 3 points (1, 2), then APOTHECARY 4 (3, 1), BIG RED also 4 (2, 3) and FLASH 8 (4, 4). Overall JAM honors go to APOTHECARY as it had the best total corrected time for the round trip. OUR THYME II dominated the Spinnaker Division 2 with 2 points (1, 1), LOST VERMONT 4 (2, 2), ORIGINAL SIN 6 (3, 3), ARTEMIS 8 (4, 4), WINDSWEEP 11 (5, 6) and POCO LOCO 11 (6, 5). Spinnaker Division 3 had a real battle with HOI POLLOI 4 (3, 1) the winner. Then it was HOOTIE 5 (1, 4), MINT JULEP 7 (5, 2), WINDRUNNER 7 (2, 5) and SLAPSHOT 7 (4, 3).

OUR THYME II takes the Overall Spinnaker honors for fastest round trip. No word back from the Powerboats regarding their Beaver Island Rendezvous that same weekend.

Nautical Trivia: It was too easy! All but one responded correctly.

Amundsen's unnecessary word was Celsius as degrees F or C are the same at -40. More next week.

The Charlevoix Yacht Club "New Boundaries" Regatta is Aug. 4 with the first warning signal set for 11 a.m. JAM and Spinnaker Racing Fleets as well as a Fun Fleet for recreational sailors follows, at 4 p.m., with a big party and pig roast at the club. Call Judy at 347-7225 or Linda at 231-537-4484 for information.

Summer Sunday Sailfish Series: No results yet but it was a good opening day except, from here, it looked like Tom Barnes won all four races. 1 p.m. next Sunday!

The Charlevoix Yacht Club is closed Friday. Enjoy the fantastic Venetian Fireworks display on Lake Charlevoix: expect the greatest show ever seen this side of Latitude 45 degrees north. Many thanks to the Venetian Festival Committee and its many contributors.

We hereby give a special salute to the club's own Dan Barron, the committee chairman!

Yachting Notes is submitted each week during the summer months by the Charlevoix Yacht Club. To contact the club, see its website at www.charlevoixyachtclub.org or call 547-9170.

Charlevoix Junior Golf competition results

The Charlevoix County junior golf program had its traditional week of skill testing and competition with the following results.

In the putting tournament Allen Brooks and Adam Wager tied for first place for the 14 and over age division. In the 12-13 years bracket, there was a tie between Jacob Kirby, Tyler Luchtefeld and Kyle Smith. Madison Pache topped the 10-11 year old division. It was Nikki Spiegel and Kyle Shomin sharing the 8-9 year old championship.

In the chipping skill testing, Greg Wager won the over 14-year-old flight. Ivan Parker easily bested the competition for 12-13 year olds. For the 10-11 year olds, Nick Gersch emerged the winner and for the nine-year-olds Doug Reynolds and Tyler Manning tied.

In the pitching event, Bill Foster easily won the 14 and up division. In the 12-13 years group it was tied between Brian Livingston, Kevin Kusina, Jarod Kirby and Chris Waha. The 10-11 years division went to Jay Cahill and Justin Berman who tied.

The popular program again has over 200 youngsters registered and will finish the season in the next two weeks with tournaments.

Boaters reminded of firework's safety zones

The Charlevoix Venetian Festival Incorporated will sponsor fireworks displays on July 27 in Lake Charlevoix and July 28 in Round Lake in Charlevoix.

These displays will require safety zones to be established. These zones will be marked with orange buoys and will be in effect just prior to the arrival of the fireworks barge.

The barge is scheduled to arrive at both events at 1 p.m. Fireworks will begin at 10:15 p.m., July 27 and will last until 11 p.m. Fireworks are scheduled to begin at 10 p.m., July 28 and signal the start of the boat parade with a pause in fireworks while the parade makes its way through Round Lake. The boat parade and fireworks are scheduled to end at 11 p.m.

On July 28 anchoring in Round Lake will be limited to the extended anchorage area on the north side of Round Lake. A Venetian Festival ambassador boat along with the Coast Guard Auxiliary boats will be in Round Lake throughout the day to assist boaters and to provide information. The ambassador boat will be monitoring Channel 9.

The United States Coast Guard, the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department, Emmet County Sheriff's Department and the Department of Natural Resources will be patrolling Lake Charlevoix and Round Lake to ensure both federal and state compliance of the law.

This will include safe boating laws and arrest of persons operating under the influence of alcohol. All vessels are cautioned to remain outside the safety zone unless they are granted permission to enter from the Coast Guard Patrol Commander. The safety zones will be disestablished at the conclusion of the fireworks.

There is only one goal, to ensure that boaters have a safe, enjoyable Venetian Festival.

Go! Fest to be at Charlevoix High School this August

This year's Go!Fest will take place Aug. 3 and 4 in the Charlevoix High School gym.

The festival will be conducted as three events. At 9 p.m. Aug. 3 there will be a multimedia presentation featuring DJs, musicians and visual artists collaborating to create a total immersion environment. From noon to 5 p.m. Aug. 4 there will be an open house with entertainment by local groups, films and tours of the high school studio.

At 7 p.m. that night there will be a concert featuring a variety of bands and performers. Headlining this year's show will be Soul Food from Chicago. Also appearing are Kalamazoo based Clockwork and Charlevoix's own, The Mural Project.

Tickets for the evening events are $10. Advance two-day tickets are available for $15 at Charlevoix Camera and Sweet Sam's. Festival proceeds will benefit the high school recording studio which was donated by Go! in 1998.

Go!Fest is a volunteer event and the group is looking for bands and DJs who would like to appear. For more information log on to www.gofest.org or www.go-multimedia.net or call (231) 409-2030.

It is hosted by Go Multimedia, a not for profit company based in Charlevoix.

Go Multimedia is a production company run by local young people with the support of a board of directors. It has produced several CDs of local musicians and are active supporters of musicians and performance artists.

Go Multimedia has also elected four new members to the board of directors. Mike Corcoran, Gary Grundman, Gary Stutzman and Roger Waters were added to the board and the board accepted the resignation of Mark Muniak and Karl Gilewicz. Gary Stutzman was elected secretary and Roger Waters was elected treasurer.

CAMP CHARLEVOIX

NEWS OF ACTIVITIES

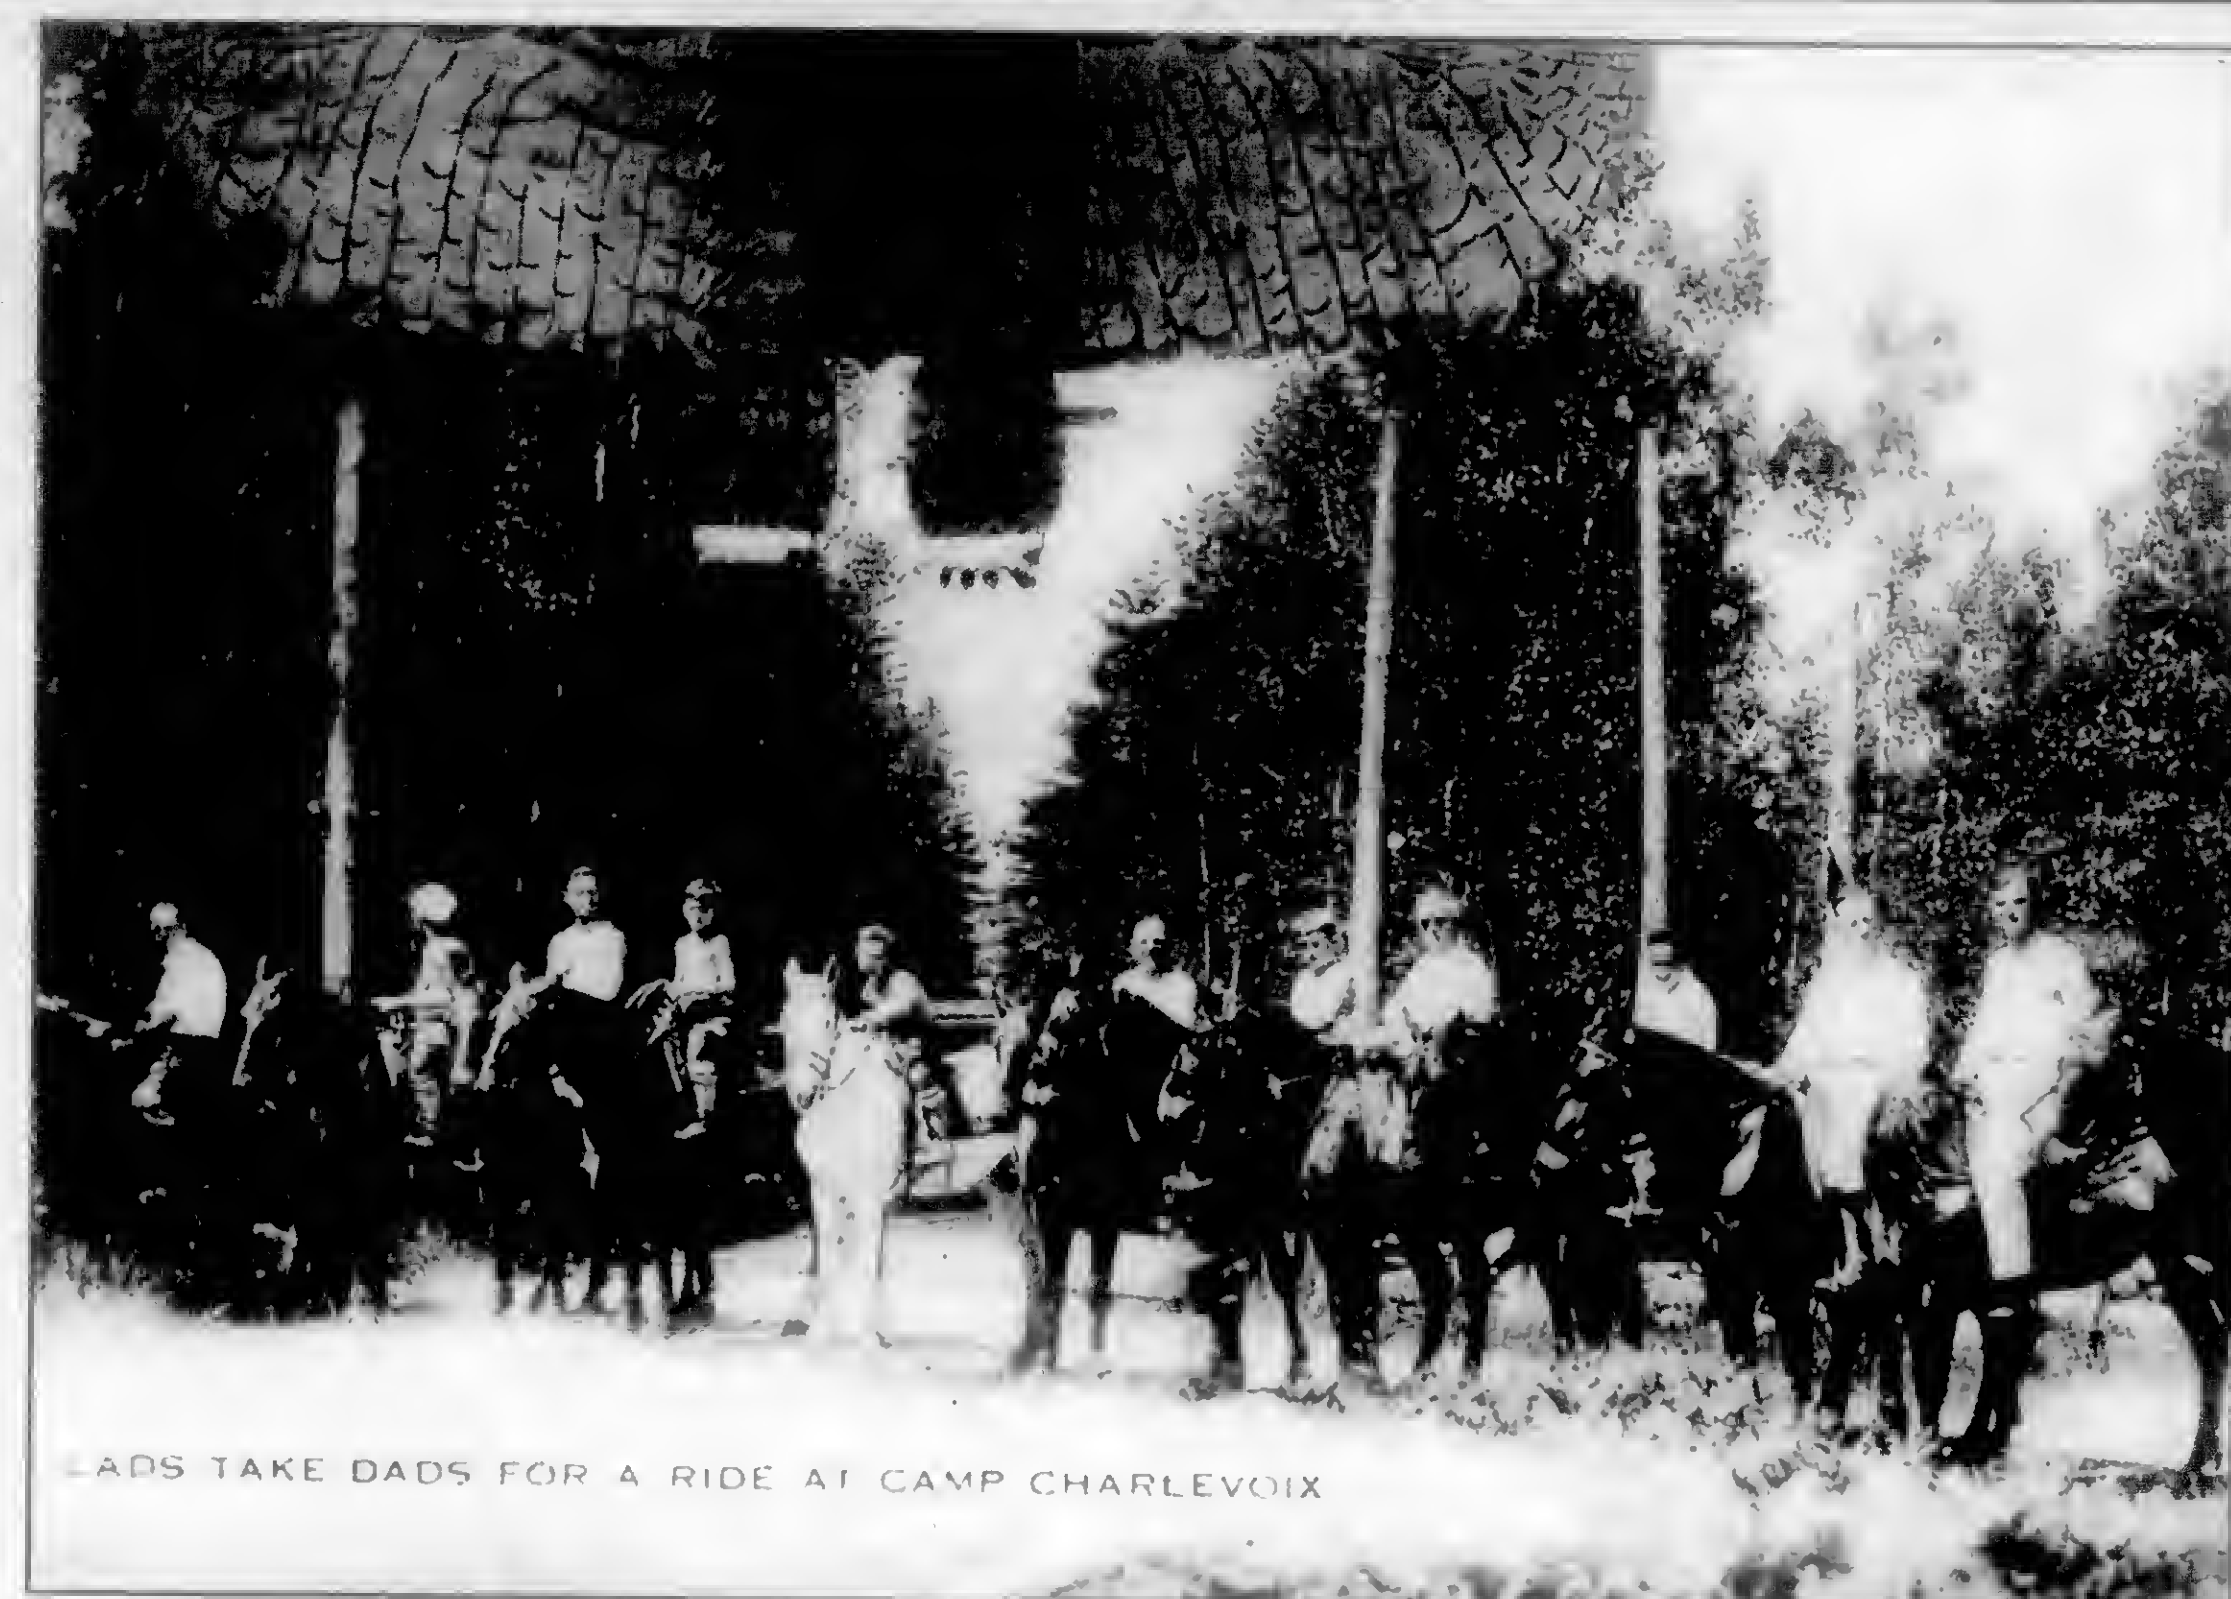

Camp Charlevoix welcomed 104 boys to a summer of fun and learning June 30. Already there and prepared to give them expert instruction a wide variety of skills and activities was a staff of 29 plus several persons to provide necessary services for the campers.

The staff includes many interested persons from all sections of the United States. From the Badlands of South Dakota came Byron Bradfield to teach campers to ride horses and rope calves as the real cowboys do it out west. From the Michigan woods came "The Hermit" Howard Schwartz, to instruct campers in the art of camping in the wild, tracking and trapping wild animals, blazing trails and many other phases of camping — skills which he learned by actually living in the woods for several years. He is widely known as a competent trapper, camper and guide. From other sections of the country have come competent instructors in all athletics, handicraft, sailing, canoeing, ceramics, riflery and many other skills and activities.

The campers are from Florida to New York, from Louisiana to Wisconsin. They arrived by bus, train, car, and even by airplane. Saturday night they were entertained by the traditional pillow fights, the contestants fighting while sitting astride waxed poles. Chapel and vesper services were held Sunday in the lodge around the fireplace. Later services will be conducted in the boys' own chapel in the woods.

The head staff of the camp is composed of veteran campers Jack "Mickey" Maguire, who returns for his third season and who will direct the athletic program and be head of the seniors; Jim Smith, returning for his second season who heads the intermediate section; and "Chris" Christopher the oldest of the staff, who returns for his fourth season of camping and who heads the junior section; Fred Kreuger, director of activities, serving in this capacity for the second time; and Mr. and Mrs. Lewis C. Reimann, directors and owners of the camp. Dr. Kenneth Campbell of the University of Michigan hospital staff and Mrs. Mildred Vandenberg are in charge of the health needs of the camp.

Monday was a busy day for the campers — they met those who instruct in the various skills and activities, and were told what to look forward to in those fields. Then they chose their activities for the first week, no easy matter, with such interesting activities to choose from as horseback riding, riflery, canoeing, handicraft, ce-

This print is from a postcard with a postage stamp from 1938. The writer of the postcard spoke of the fun the boys at Camp Charlevoix were having, especially riding the horses. ramics, tennis, sailing, dramatics and many others.

The Green and Grey Leagues took shape Monday night and promise good competition in softball, basketball and volleyball. The names of captains of the Green and Grey teams will be announced later. The Fourth of July will be the occasion for a track meet between the Green and Grey teams.

OFFICIAL OPENING OF BATH HOUSE SUNDAY

PROGRAM AT LAKE MICHIGAN BATHING BEACH

Celebration Sponsored by City Officials for Inspection New Entertainment Facility

Charlevoix will celebrate the official opening of the new municipal bath house on Lake Michigan bathing beach with an informal program next Sunday, July 8.

One of the numerous benefits the national administration provided through its welfare relief efforts, the bath house, originally started under the CWA and completed as a federal emergency relief project, gives Charlevoix one of the most up-to-date and complete bathing beaches in northern Michigan.

Built of native limestone and of attractive design, the bath house accommodations include everything modern — shower baths, toilets, dressing rooms, etc. A concession operated under lease by Mr. and Mrs. D.H. Crouse of Sandusky, Ohio is complete and up to the minute in every respect.

The grounds surrounding the bath house have been landscaped and beautified. Shrubs and trees have been set out, the lawns seeded and a roadway with sufficient parking space for automobiles, built encircling the building. Immediately to the north of the bath house is the playground equipment which provides the finishing touch to a complete bathing beach.

Sunday's program, designed more than anything else to draw citizens to the bathing beach to inspect the new layout, will open at 1:30 o'clock with a parade in which the city band, Legion bugle and drum corps and automobiles will participate. A program of swimming races and water sports is being arranged and the city band will give two concerts, one in the afternoon and another in the evening at 8 o'clock. With the program still in the making, all details cannot be announced at this time.

City officials desire that citizens attend the program Sunday afternoon and thus avail themselves of the opportunity to inspect Charlevoix's newest entertainment facility.

MANITOU CREW ON A STRIKE

Threaten to Desert Ship Sunday at Local Dock

Because of the alleged unwholesome food and lodging, the stewards, oilers, engineers, firemen and lookout-men of the steamship, Manitou, threatened to desert the boat at the local docks here early Sunday afternoon.

The crew numbered about 20, the majority of them being high school students, who evidently could not endure the deficient appropriations. Their complaint was precisely one that created a typical hunger strike. For two days, they declared their meals were composed of shredded wheat biscuits, oatmeal and condensed milk as a constituent. Some complained of infested bunks, and that the bedding was not changed for weeks.

It does not appear quite possible that such conditions could exist on passenger boats of modern navigation. We learn, however, that the captain was not aware of these conditions and immediately proposed a conference at the dock. After an hour of deliberation the conclusions were such as to affect a reconciliation and the crew, headed by the chief engineer, returned to their respective duties.

Festival of fun

Venetian Festival ends soggy but successful

By JULIE MUSILEK

City and Venetian Festival officials said the 71st annual week-long festival filled with two nights of fireworks, 28 bands, a carnival and games around every corner went off without a hitch.

President of Charlevoix Venetian Festival Inc., Dan Barron explained that aside from minor complications associated with pulling off an event of this magnitude, this year was smooth sailing.

Charlevoix City Manager Mike Wiesner also said he had no Venetian related mishaps to report.

Charlevoix Venetian Festival Inc. has been in charge of planning for the event for the last three years. During that time many additions have been made that have extended the festival from three days to one full week, two nights of fireworks, a craft courtyard, games and more.

"When we received the festival from the (Chamber of Commerce) there were a couple dozen volunteers; now there are more than 300. We've quickly evolved into a true community organization," Barron said.

Barron said his personal Venetian favorite is the boat parade and harbor fireworks which, despite rainy conditions, still saw a substantial turnout. This year, Barron said he observed the parade and fireworks from the barge where they started.

"It was absolutely awesome; the intensity of the light turned the water an amazing shade of blue," he said.

Speaking of fireworks, some may be wondering why Friday's fireworks display was so spectacular. Well, Barron offered two reasons: First, you literally get more bang for more bucks.

Veterans reunited after 49 years apart

By JOCEY FLORENCE
Staff writer

A Charlevoix veteran of the Korean War was recently reunited with two of his comrades after 49 years.

Pete McKenzie, a long-time Charlevoix resident, fought in the Korean War in 1952. It was in Korea that he met Richard Pixler and Bob Keller, his lieutenant. The three men quickly became close friends.

However, when McKenzie returned home in 1953, he and his two friends completely lost touch. It seemed as though the men would never speak again, until the intervention of another soldier in their battalion.

"This fellow retired and needed something to pass the time. He got on the internet and set out to locate as many of the 30 of us that fought together," McKenzie said. The man — Richard Gram of Chicago, Ill. — called each of the men and sent them lists of the phone numbers of the men that he had found.

Pixler, who lives in Iowa, then contacted McKenzie, and the two of them contacted Keller, who is a retired professor at the University of Wisconsin. The three decided to meet in Madison, Wis., Keller's hometown.

McKenzie anxiously awaited the meeting and described himself as "tickled to death" with the opportunity to be reunited with his two close friends.

McKenzie and Pixler arrived in Madison on June 20. The three men and their wives went out to lunch. Keller then showed his visitors around the campus of the university and presented each man with a gift that he had acquired during his travels.

Keller's gift to McKenzie was a "jewelry box" made in Korea over 300 years ago that is traditionally passed down through the heads of the family.

"Bob (Keller) doesn't have any children and he figured that I would pass it on to mine," said McKenzie.

Overall, the meeting was a success. "The three of us were quite close, but you never know how much people change," McKenzie said. "We all sounded the same as we did 50 years ago. We looked pretty much the same too, just with a little more weight."

The men plan on keeping in touch.

"I've already received a letter from Richard (Pixler), and my wife and I suspect that the Pixlers will be visiting soon," McKenzie said.

McKenzie also foresees meeting more of his former comrades, or maybe even having a reunion. "I hope to meet with as many of the other people as I can," he said.

Correction

The photo caption in last week's edition of the Charlevoix Courier on page 24 should have described the pictured boats as Sunfish and stated that the event was sponsored by the Charlevoix Yacht Club. Additionally, the story should have stated "Congratulations to Tom and Linda Orlow and the rest of the Douglas Lake sailors on putting on a very successful event."

Also a phone number was reported incorrectly in the photo caption for the Charlevoix Area Community Pool auction. The phone number should have been 582-0486.

OPINIONS

What should we do about drugs in school?

The responses are in from last month's "What do you think?" question and it appears that readers are: A) Too busy to respond or B) didn't care about the topic.

The question was: What do you think about the Charlevoix Venetian Festival? We received one official response.

The only official response was from Kay and Don Heise of Charlevoix. They wrote: "The music has been fantastic. Kudos to the organizing committee." From our conversations with various people on the street while covering the festival, people seem to enjoy the festival and have a very good time at it.

Therefore, we congratulate the Charlevoix Venetian Festival on a job well done and wish them continued success with future festivals.

On to the next "What do you think?" topic.

Since August is the time when families are getting ready for another school year or preparing to send their children off to various colleges, school related topics are on everyone's minds. One of the biggest topics today is drugs.

According to a survey conducted last year, drugs seem to be rearing their ugly heads in our local schools. But, what do you think we should do about it? Is it even something we can address?

What do you think?

Therefore, this month's question is "What do we do about drugs in schools?" We want to know what you think and what are your ideas for solving this problem.

Come on folks, this is a big issue that we should be addressing as a community. We need your ideas to solve it. Don't just sit around complaining about it. Now is your chance to voice your opinion publicly.

The usual applies: Keep your response under 250 words, sign your copy and keep the personal attacks out of it. Send your response to the Charlevoix Courier at P.O. Box 117, Charlevoix, MI 49720; e-mail it to charlevoixcourier@charlevoixcourier.com; fax it to (231) 547-4992 or drop it off at our office located at 112 Mason Street in downtown Charlevoix.

The deadline for responses is Aug. 24.

What is a stem cell and why should we be concerned?

Roger Knutson

'Ear to the ground'

What are stem cells anyway and why should anyone be concerned about them?

To answer the second question first, George W. Bush and his advisors are in the process of trying to decide whether federal dollars should be spent on human stem cell research. Congress could potentially overturn the president's decision, whatever it is.

The decision is not about whether stem cell research will continue, but whether the federal government should fund it. The research will go on whatever the president's decision might be, but it would certainly be slower without federal funding.

We should probably all be concerned about the appropriate expenditure of our tax dollars.

"What are stem cells" is a more complicated question. Stem cells generally are those cells of an organism that are as yet undecided about what they will become: Whether they will become skin or bone, muscle or pancreas, brain or stomach.

Most stem cells are present in very early embryos, when the embryos consist of only a few cells. At this early stage of development each cell is capable of becoming almost anything, including a whole organism.

Many years ago a careful researcher separated the early stage stem cells of frog embryos and demonstrated that each of the separated cells could develop finally into a whole frog. Something similar occurs naturally in the formation of identical twins in humans.

By the time an embryo consists of more than a few hundred cells, decisions have already been made about which cells will become skin and which will help form the stomach. Cells of any mammal are, long before birth, mostly committed to a particular path of development that cannot easily be altered. Stem cells by contrast have the potential to become any part of the organism.

Stem cells can be grown and maintained in glass dishes in a laboratory. Properly stimulated they can be caused to become many different kinds of cells. Theoretically they could be caused to become pancreas cells, or nerve cells or muscle cells or almost any other kind. It is this capacity to grow into worthwhile cells that makes them so valuable.

For a serious diabetic, new pancreas cells would mean an essential permanent cure of the disease. For someone with Parkinson's Disease, new brain cells of a particular kind could alleviate the symptoms of the disease or eliminate it completely.

The potential of human stem cells to cure serious human disease of many kinds is nearly unlimited.

The legal question is about whether human stem cells should have some rights accorded human beings under the law.

Each stem cell is a potential human being, given the right circumstances. The right circumstances are the successful placement of the stem cells into a human uterus. Without the uterus, the stem cells are only cells that can be grown in a dish and with further research can dramatically increase our capacity to cure human suffering.

If we somehow were to declare human stem cells as fully human under the law, no such research would be possible without facing the prospect of being charged with murder for discarding a dish of stem cells.

Those valuable cells do not deserve the full protection of the law, but they do deserve the respect given anything with a life. Such respect does not preclude research, it only requires that research be done with care and concern for the living things involved.

Thank you Muellers, shame on real estate agents
Editor:

As a lover of what Charlevoix the Beautiful means, I want to thank Linda and Richard Mueller for what they are doing. They are restoring a part of Charlevoix's beautiful and interesting history - Castle Farms — the Loeb estate.

Anyone not familiar with the true story of Leopold and Loeb's attempt to commit the perfect crime, should check Meyer Levin's book "Compulsion" from the library. Clarence Darrow, the famous evolution/"monkey trial" attorney, and Charlevoix, played important parts in this "Crime of Our Century."

In contrast, what the Muellers are doing for Charlevoix is what some local realtors are doing to Charlevoix's downtown.

Well known resident realtors are leasing stores on Bridge Street to whoever puts the cash in their hands. No regard is being given to the quality or reputation of these 90 day leasers.

These stores are akin to businesses being operated out of the back of a truck.

think about what kind of visitors are being attracted to our town by these hand written signs, scotch taped to storefront windows. Walk in the downtowns of Petoskey, Bay Harbor or Harbor Springs and see the quality of stores we once offered.

I feel bad for the older, traditional Charlevoix merchants, who have stuck it out and now face trying to sell their quality merchandise to a changing level of buyer walking our downtown.

Shame on our local realtors who have less regard for what Charlevoix should continue to be, than the Muellers, from far away in Mississippi.

Excited for 'Wolf Park'

Editor:

I stand at the brink of something exciting. After having graduated in June, the journey of my life will really begin - in Indiana.

Surrounded by cornfields, an oasis exists in the form of Wolf Park. This special non-profit organization raises wolves for the purpose of behavioral research. Their studies have helped many animals, in captive and wild settings, and I will be part of this.

On Aug. 20 I leave for a 3 month internship at Wolf Park. Once there, my jobs will vary from making supplemental "meatballs" for the older wolves to helping gather roadkill and farmer donated calves for wolf consumption, as well as the less glamorous job of cleaning up wolf scats!

While there I have the opportunity to carry out a research project with the wolves. Being at Wolf Park will hopefully help me decide between my two career considerations, research biologist or zookeeper.

The park is also open to the public 6 days a week, so I will be guiding tours and running the gift shop. They also have a newsletter, which I may write articles for. But, of course, the best part of my stay will be the ability to socialize with the wolf, a beautiful and sadly rare creature in our world.

I can hardly wait until Aug. 20 rolls around!

Not all visitors are 'Fudgies'

Editor:

I would like to extend to your readers and year-round residents of Charlevoix and its environs a long over-due thank you for the many years of pleasure that my family and I have experienced each summer season while visiting your beautiful area.

In the 1950s my mother came to the Charlevoix area as a working university student who provided summer home care to an elderly resident. She was generously allowed use of the car on her days off, and was urged to familiarize herself with the area. In doing so she developed life long affection for Charlevoix which remains rooted in our extended family today.

After her marriage, mom brought my dad to Charlevoix to share with him the beautiful beaches, vistas, sunsets and views which she had enjoyed in the previous years. Our family album boasts many photos taken on the Michigan Beach. One of these photos shows mom in a stylish sun hat and huge beach cover up (8 months pregnant with me).

As a child, our family trips "up north" continued. One of my greatest delights was our time spent in Stroud's cabins, combing the beaches of lake Charlevoix and Michigan for Petoskey stones, watching the sunsets and then combing the gift shops in town with mom and dad.

In time, I too brought my family to Charlevoix. This August my husband and I will be bringing our grandson to the area to begin a fourth generation of summer fun.

I ask the residents of your lovely town to keep in mind that all of the summer visitors are not "Fudgies," or "amplified proportioned" jay-walkers. We, as many civilized others, have shopped for groceries along side of you, followed the rules of the road, waited in line patiently in traffic and in gas stations with you, despaired of over development with you, and sympathized over the quantity of noisy and rude guests impacting "Charlevoix the Beautiful." But mostly, we have returned from year to year to quietly enjoy the delights of the area while monetarily supporting local vendors and businesses.

Your readership is fortunate to live in such a caring, gifted and beautiful community. All we guests ask is to share in those gifts with you for just a little while and that the residents realize that from the west coast, to the east coast, on or off of the continent "the public" can be rude anywhere.

P.S. — By the way, where do the residents of Charlevoix vacation (thus becoming guests elsewhere) anyway? Rebeka Ozolins-Ceravolo

Rittenhouse accepts job at Traverse City West

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

After seven years of running from performances, to class, to festivals, Charlevoix school district band director Raphael "Raphie" Rittenhouse is ready for balance.

Raphie, 34, is stepping into the 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. life — he has turned in his tuner for an office seat at Traverse City West Senior High School which is going into its fourth year of existence, and services grades 10-12.

"I've bent over backward to spend time with my boys. I think this (move to a new position) will allow me to be a better parent. The school day is more contained than the role of band director," he said.

Raphie will begin the 2001-2002 school year in Traverse City where he will be the school assistant principal, one of three administrative roles there.

"This is a big step up, I've had the degree since 1997 which tells you I have enjoyed what I do here.

I could have used it right away," he said.

So, Raphie, the "happy-go-lucky director," will now be "Raphie the enforcer." His area of expertise will be discipline and special education — a role some may wonder if he can handle, but Raphie says, "No sweat."

"There are about 350 more students than are in our entire district, but I really feel I'll develop a relationship with those students. I'm not afraid of that role. I think I can make a big difference in their lives," he explained.

Over his seven year stay with the Charlevoix district, many have seen Raphie waving his arms and directing the flow of music at school performances. He also has kept busy teaching music for grades 6-12 and organizing the fifth and sixth grade summer music camp.

So how can such an artistic role be traded in for that of a disciplinarian?

Raphie said he isn't going to make a complete trade, he sees his musical background marrying into the new role. Raphie added that the school has a number of good things going on, including an exemplary fine arts program.

"I think the fact that they chose someone like myself shows they value their arts program," he said.

He said one thing he's learned in his nine year career, with both the Charlevoix and Esperia school systems, is that, "Teaching makes you a high quality person. Every year as I interact with the students there is some growth and change."

However his transition within the field of education won't be easy.

Premenstrual disorder is real and treatable

Have you heard the joke about the woman with PMS? Jokes that start out this way are pretty common - so common, in fact, that women with an extreme form of PMS called premenstrual dysphoric disorder (PMDD) may not feel comfortable discussing troubling symptoms with their healthcare provider.

However, doctors know PMDD is a real and very treatable medical condition.

"It was around the end of my cycle that things would get very intense and difficult. Just getting my two boys out the door to preschool was a horrible, complex task, or so it seemed at the time. The greatest news was that there was help," remembers Lari Start, who has been diagnosed with PMDD.

According to Sheila M. Marcus, M.D., a psychiatrist at the University of Michigan Health System and a clinical assistant professor of psychiatry in the U-M Medical School, up to 75 percent of women experience some physical, emotional or behavioral symptoms before their periods begin.

"PMDD is a more severe condition than PMS and it is present in a much smaller number of women. These women experience fairly significant symptoms that interfere with their day-to-day functioning, either socially or professionally. Irritability is probably the hallmark symptom, but other symptoms include significant depression, anxiety, sleep disruption, low energy and possibly appetite cravings," Marcus said.

An important key to diagnosis is determining whether or not symptoms occur all the time. With PMDD, symptoms appear around the last week in the cycle and go away a day or so after menstruation begins. The debilitating but cyclical nature of PMDD makes it easy to diagnose. Because PMDD has both emotional and physical aspects, it is often a psychiatrist or a doctor specializing in women's health, such as an obstetrician/gynecologist, who makes the diagnosis.

Yet, it has only been in the last decade or so that PMDD has gained recognition as a medical condition. In part, this is due to the understandable fear that many women have of being laughed at for over-reacting to PMS. Women have been suffering needlessly and in silence, in effect contributing to low level awareness of the disorder.

He will miss those things that make Charlevoix quaint and home. He said he will remember fondly walking through town and having 20 Charlevoixians walk up and say hello.

"This has been a very pleasant experience. I have always enjoyed that interaction, it is one of the things I'll really miss when I transfer over," he explained.

The move hasn't been easy for his family either. His wife, Julie, a social worker and their two young boys, Gabe, 4, and Jesse, 2, have gotten attached to Charlevoix.

Raphe said that after being on vacation Gabe told him, "I'm so glad to be back in Charlevoix."

But, Gabe gave Raphe the green light to move. He said they can go ahead and change houses as long as there is still room for him to run around.

He plans to move his family to the outskirts of Traverse City's west side after their home in the city of Charlevoix sells. Raphe plans to commute to and from Traverse City until the sale.

Raphe has faith that the district is ready to fill the position with a talented individual or individuals.

"I think the district is in a position to cover my position even for this year. They are poised to do the right thing for the program as we grow," he said.

With the new auditorium on the horizon Rittenhouse said this is the perfect time for someone to be stepping in.

Superintendent of Charlevoix Public Schools John Sturrock said the district is in the process of filling Raphe's position.

"I wish him well. It's a career move for him, moving into the administrative ranks. It's a loss to the district, but I wish him well," Sturrock said.

Raphe said he still plans to be involved in the Charlevoix community.

What causes PMDD?

Experts believe that PMDD is a type of mood disorder. Women who have PMDD also have an increased likelihood of developing a major depressive disorder and postpartum depression. They also may have a family history of depression or PMDD.

"Like most of the depressive disorders, we believe PMDD probably has something to do with the neurochemistry of the brain and the particular vulnerabilities of the female brain to rapid shifts in hormones, such as estrogen. This is not something you can simply snap out of, or pull yourself up by your bootstraps. This is a true chemical or medical condition," Marcus says.

There are a number of treatment options for PMDD. Working with her physician, each woman should find that combination that works best for her. Treatment can include an exercise program such as resistance training or moderate aerobic exercise. Dietary changes also can be helpful. Consider eating meals on a regular basis and limiting caffeine, alcohol, salt and chocolate. Taking calcium supplements and B-6 vitamins may help.

Marcus recommends cognitive therapy, where women can learn different thinking strategies. Women can also keep a calendar of their moods so they are aware, and can make family members aware, of when the distressing period of the month will be.

"It's important, to the extent possible, to limit the most stressful life events during that time when you are most likely to be dysfunctional," she said.

There is also a growing body of evidence to suggest that selective serotonin re-uptake inhibitors (SSRI), a type of anti-depressant medication, is also helpful, and they are most commonly prescribed. Sometimes they are used in pulsatile fashion, increasing the dose around the time menstruation begins.

Lari Start sums it up this way: "PMS is certainly a very common ailment among women. But, if it's getting to the point where it is affecting your life, how you treat your children, your family and friends, get help. Life is good for me now. I am myself all the time and I enjoy every day with my children and my husband."

No solid plans for East Park on record

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

According to Charlevoix City Manager Mike Wiesner, there are no plans in writing for East Park renovations and consultants are still gathering information on the community.

Wiesner said the Ann Arbor based consultants, Pollack Design Associates, hired to work on renovations to East Park have spent this summer gathering newspaper articles, looking at copies of city master plans, downtown development plans, old plans of East Park and has had discussions with some of the primary users of the park. During their next trip to Charlevoix sometime in August, they plan on speaking with more of the prime users of the park.

"They are getting a level of understanding before a public input meeting," Wiesner said. He added he does not know when a public meeting would take place on the matter or when the consultants would be back in town.

However, Wiesner said there has been talk in the past of creating underground buildings in East Park along the waterfront, as there currently is at Bridge Park.

"I would assume that the view is valuable to the community, so I assume underground buildings will be looked at," he said. "Nothing has been put to paper or discussed with the consultants."

However, Wiesner said the issue of underground buildings needs to be addressed as the city moves forward with plans on purchasing and demolishing the Wharfside Building — located just behind the pavilion in East Park.

In order to buy the building, the city is trying to get a grant from the Michigan Department of Natural Resources trust fund. This trust fund was created from oil royalties in the state.

The trust focuses on giving money to be used for outdoor recreation uses to buy land, Wiesner said. Therefore, the city needs to determine if the trust would allow underground buildings to be constructed on the Wharfside site.

"We are trying to get that question answered before we proceed with acquisition (of the Wharfside Building)," Wiesner said.

According to Wiesner, other funding sources the city has contacted to raise money to buy the Wharfside are: The Michigan Waterways Commission for $500,000; the Fry Foundation and the Community Foundation for $500,000.

HEALTH

Be careful of bug bites and stings

F. James Stewart, M.D.

'Your health'

A planned vacation in the north is often an exciting, eagerly awaited event in a young child's life.

The opportunity to swim in a lake, picnic with parents in a park setting and walk in the woods are times that may not be experienced in the child's metropolitan lifestyle and children and their parents come to the north to bask in the beautiful, beach-side resorts. The northern merchants look forward to the summer influx with thoughts of opportunity and open their doors. The north has other year-round occupants who may not be offering such a pleasant welcome. These are the insects, and some of them can be darn-right unfriendly.

Most visitors to the northern woods and beaches can attest to the power of an insect so small, that it is invariably called the nooseum (no-see-um). These insects look like miniature black flies and live near the beaches in wet, stagnant pools and on moss covered rocks. They are incredibly blood thirsty and attack the back of the scalp and neck of both children and adults. They don't just bite, they tear a mouth-size chunk of your skin off and bore deeply into the wet flesh underneath to feed. They will feed until they drop off or are swatted away, and the resulting bite usually festers and bleeds briefly. Within a day or two the lymph nodes in the back of the neck will swell, often to the point that it makes turning the neck difficult. Black flies, mosquitoes and sand flies are two-winged insects (Dipterans) and their bites, while a nuisance, are not usually as clinically significant.

In the Hymenoptera order of insects, however, two major families are significant. They are the vespids (yellow jacket, hornet and wasp) and the apids (honeybee and bumblebee). Stings from venomous hymenoptera insects are the most frequent cause of significant, potentially life-threatening reactions.

Between .3 and three percent of the general population is at risk for an anaphylactic reaction, there is usually a drop in blood pressure, granulated swelling or itching, sometimes a rash and shortness of breath. Such a reaction needs immediate medical attention. A previous large local reaction (swelling of a hand or arm after a sting) is not predictive of a future anaphylactic reaction.

How can you know whether you will have such a serious reaction to a sting? An allergist can perform a venom challenge test in an office or hospital setting. If you have a positive skin test, you are at risk, as approximately one in five is a positive skin test will have an anaphylactic reaction to a sting. Immunotherapy is indicated and will protect against a life threatening reaction. Immunotherapy is highly protective against bee stings, wasps, hornets and yellow jackets.

Yellow jackets are the principal cause of allergic reactions to insect stings in the U.S. They build their nests in the ground, on walls or under eaves of houses. Gardening, lawn-mowing, exterior house painting and other warm-weather activities often lead to an individual inadvertently provoking yellow jackets. On the other hand, honeybees and bumblebees are relatively docile and are not easily provoked.

The Africanized honeybee, the so-called "killer bee" is an aggressive insect. When disturbed, massive numbers of these bees may attack a person. Although the venom of the African bee is no more antigenic or toxic than that of the European honeybee, (the usual honeybee found in North America) stings by massive numbers of Africanized bees have led to death secondary to the large amount of venom which is injected.

How to protect yourself and your children? Insect repellent probably won't work. Avoidance is helpful and if the insects are provoked, flight is definitely warranted. If you or your family has a history of anaphylaxis, then a bee-sting kit should be carried by the affected subject and at least one other adult family member. A cell phone and the knowledge of your location is helpful in alerting the local EMS.

Planning, insect avoidance, and preparedness can help insure that your vacation to Lake Charlevoix and its woodlands and streams will be a pleasant memory and not one marked by tragedy.

Fire leaves Marion Township couple homeless

By JULIE MUSILEK
 Staff Writer

On the morning of July 25, Stoneham was in the garage of his Marion Township home, gassing up his lawn tractor when his rheumatoid arthritis kicked in and he started to struggle with the five gallon metal can.

The weight of the can coupled with the pain in his fingers quickly pulled the can onto the concrete floor below. Its impact with the floor let out a spark that ignited the gasoline.

Stoneham was still holding the inflamed canister, but soon loosened his grip and frantically ran out of the garage. He turned back moments later to search for his dog, Wesley, who was helping him with the yard work that afternoon.

As his eyes darted around the garage, he said he felt Wesley's wet nose pushing him out of the inflamed building to safety.

Once the two were out in the yard Stoneham spotted a woman with a cell phone and had her dial 911.

Dispatch notified the City of Charlevoix Fire Department and the Charlevoix Township Fire Department at 10:21 a.m. that there was a fully involved structure fire at the intersection of Loeb and Ferry roads.

City of Charlevoix firefighter and emergency medical technician Bob Roloff was at the corner of Loeb Road and M-66 when the call came over his radio. Roloff was the first on scene, followed by other city firemen who arrived seven minutes after the call came through.

Soon, city firefighters were joined by Charlevoix Township firefighters, who combined to put a total of 25 men and women at the scene struggling to keep the fire under control.

But, the fire that started in the garage had quickly spread to the attic, which according to Roloff, made it more difficult to get to.

The attic fire also made the tresses weak and the wet roof sagged, threatening the safety of the firefighters who battled from the inside.

Once inside, firemen discovered a dangerous gas tank line that had been severed by the heat of the fire. The LP gas was flowing freely and ignited.

"It didn't blow up, it was just burning like a torch," Roloff said.

Roloff and city fire chief Doug Carver said they were able to put the fire out in about 15 minutes. They then dug around for hot spots. The report states the fire was cleared at 12:12 p.m.

As a result of the accident, the Stoneham family lost their home, almost everything inside and the family Dodge Grand Caravan which was parked in the garage. But fortunately, James, his wife of 45 years, Donna, a Charlevoix native who wasn't in the home at the time, and Wesley walked away without a scratch.

The couple did have homeowner's insurance and the family is currently living in a Charlevoix motel while they look for a new home. He said it will be a couple months before the new home goes up but they do plan to rebuild at the same address.

Stoneham said, all in all they are holding up well. "We have to be," he added.

Firefighters battled a blaze last week that ultimately took this Marion Township home. (Photo by Julie Musilek)

Beach business-owner concerned about litter

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

Lisbeth Wittenberg, Charlevoix resident and owner of The Ferry Beach Café says she's disappointed in how the beach is being maintained, but she is supposed to help clean up a portion of it.

Wittenberg rents space for her business at Ferry Beach from the city of Charlevoix for $50 a week. "I went to deliver lunch to one of the lifeguards and couldn't believe the amount of trash on the beach. It was gross. Who wants to put a blanket down on garbage?" she said.

So, she decided rather than tiptoeing around the refuse she would opt for the more pro-active approach. She plans to use the public's love of her hot dogs to her advantage. Anyone who brings a grocery bag full of trash to her café on any Sunday before Labor Day will receive a free hot dog and soda.

Even though Wittenberg has thought of a crafty way to clean up the beach she still wonders how it became so cluttered with litter in the first place. She questioned why someone from the city comes and picks up the trash in the receptacles but no one comes

"I went to deliver lunch to one of the lifeguards and couldn't believe the amount of trash on the beach."

Lisbeth Wittenberg,
The Ferry Beach Café owner to maintain the beach.

Ferry Beach is located off Ferry Avenue within city limits and two city officials said they are doing their part in keeping the beach clean. In fact, Wittenberg's city contract says she's supposed to maintain the area around the concession stand.

City of Charlevoix Recreation Director Ike Boss said, "She's paying kids to do a job she's supposed to do as a lessee. We are reasonable, we don't ask that she clean the whole park, just the general area of the concession stand."

The contract between the city and Wittenberg dated June 4 states: "It shall be the singular responsibility of the Concessionaire (Wittenberg) to maintain the premises in a clean and neat fashion, to assume maintenance of the grounds in the immediate area of the Beach Concession with respect to any paper, wrappings or other evidence of concession sales."

Wittenberg said she cleans up the area around the stand regularly, but her issue is more with the sand area.

Boss said lifeguards pick up paper on the sand beach when there is no one in the water. Wittenberg urged beach-going smokers to curb the litter urge. "Please do not leave cigarette butts on the beach. By leaving a cigarette today you are leaving garbage for the next 15 years."

City street superintendent John Martin said Wittenberg's remedy to the trash issue was a good one. He explained that the city empties trash receptacles daily and every morning the same person that empties the cans, walks around the recreation area and picks up litter.

The concession stand use agreement between the city and Wittenberg is good from May 31, 2001 and expires Labor Day, Sept. 3.

Venetian art

Alle Hodge, of Charlevoix, painted herself a masterpiece during last week's Venetian Festival kid's day in East Park. Festival officials estimate the number of children at this event doubled from last year. (Photo by Julie Musilek)

Venetian Festival a success for businesses, residents

VENETIAN

That is, the festival coordinators allocated more cash to the fireworks budget. Secondly, Barron said he has established a strong personal relationship with the two master pyro-technicians who make it all happen.

Apparently, the pyro-technicians spend the Venetian week in Charlevoix as a combined business and personal venture; they even bring their families. They have made the Venetian festival fireworks a signature shoot.

In fact, this year's multicolored ring fireworks were made specifically to come here.

"This year's display was markedly larger and we plan for next year's to be markedly larger than this year," Barron said with excitement brimming in his hoarse voice from the weekend that had him running all over town.

Other exciting events that saw huge turnouts included the "Kids' Day" in East Park.

"It was a little slice of Disney's Magic Kingdom in East Park," Barron said.

He attributed the success of the event to Kids' Day chairpersons

Mark and Vickie Greyerbehl of Charlevoix. Barron added that three times the number of kids that came out last year, were in the park this year.

The Venetian games also saw twice the number of participants. Barron said with surprise that the tennis tournament had 63 men and women volleying this year.

The Saturday morning parade was estimated to last one hour but ran over a half hour because so many floats and people were involved. Barron said that having the 2001 Rayder boys basketball team accompanied by the 1938 state finalists was a real treat.

Bringing up the rear was the show many waited an hour and a half to see — the Michigan State University Marching Band. Barron described the show they put on after as somewhat of a pep rally.

"It was almost like a football game. This is really Spartan turf," he said.

Even vendors scored big this year. Barron said local service organizations made out. The Charlevoix Rod and Gun Club sold out of food by Saturday and had to close up shop.

Other local organizations were less directly helped out. The Northwest Academy Soccer Team helped staff many of the events around town and were recognized for their help by "a sizable contribution" from the festival.

Aside from vendors directly related to the festival itself, local merchants also felt the crowd Barron estimated to be 50 percent larger than usual. Lines wrapping around the corner of Antrim Street showed the Villager Pub brought in some serious revenue Saturday night; similar lines were also seen at the Townhouse Bar.

"We think we've found the right formula for making this festival work — Using satellite events early in the week, music in the evenings and then, full day events Thursday through Saturday," Barron said.

DME, MDEQ discuss cleanup plans for site

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

According to Elaine Pelc, environmental analyst with the Gaylord post of the Michigan Department of Environmental Quality (MDEQ) the meeting July 20 between the MDEQ and Charlevoix's DME Company "went fine."

At the meeting, the company shared additional information they had collected pertaining to the contaminated groundwater situation with the environmental group. At one point they were concerned that a clay layer under the aquifer was not present which would lead to a possible more serious situation.

However, the company confirmed that there is a clay "confining" layer below the aquifer.

The company also informed the MDEQ that they did find contamination where the truck well is located and at the site of the former disposal pond. They found traces of DCE and vinyl chloride both of which result when PCE degrades.

The company also found contamination in the ground-water near the main plant building. But, the contamination the company found came as no surprise to environmental analysts with the MDEQ.

"For as long as they have used the solvent, from the 50s to the early 80s when they started managing it, the solvent pretty much got everywhere," Pelc said.

DME's plan is to install additional monitoring wells by the main building to determine where groundwater flow is discharging to. Pelc said the water could be discharging into both a nearby stream and into Lake Charlevoix.

The wells will determine the direction the groundwater is flowing and what concentration the contaminated groundwater is leaving the property.

The additional wells are going to be installed in August.

The MDEQ didn't have to give much additional guidance,

Plans for cleanup of DME site discussed

Pelc said the company's consultant knows what's required of them. The groups concurred on the steps being taken at the two locations.

The next steps are to install the wells and get them on a monitoring schedule with those that already exist, then to collect data from the wells and then clean up.

Pelc added the environmental agency was impressed by the amount of work the company has done on the south end of the plant site over the last couple of months.

Additionally, the MDEQ, DME representatives and Matthew's Lane property owners met to discuss the plan July 26. At the "informational meeting," DME representatives revealed the proposed layout of the treatment system that will work to cleanse the contaminated groundwater along Matthew's Lane.

Pelc said the property owners asked good questions and DME representatives responded. The next step is for DME cleanup contractors to get permission to access the property owner's land in order to install a portion of the treatment system there.

Pelc added that nothing will protrude from the ground. The water that is pumped out will go to the DME property, over by the plant itself, where it will be treated.

After being treated, the clean groundwater will be put back into the aquifer. Pelc said the clean groundwater will help by introducing oxygen, which helps degrade the contamination in the aquifer.

Pelc added that she foresees the final design being submitted to the MDEQ in the next two weeks to be reviewed and "hopefully approved."

Construction will start after approval.

Hayes Township wants road satisfaction

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

The Hayes Township Board is disappointed to see that Old 31 road work that was completed in 1999 isn't holding up — the pavement is buckling and the board wants to see it fixed.

"We want satisfaction with the latest project, everything else (other road projects) is on hold until Old 31 is completely done," Tim Boyko, Hayes Township supervisor said.

Pat Harmon, manager of the Charlevoix County Road Commission said the group plans to fix the rough patches by the end of the summer.

"We are going to stand behind it. If we have to go back and fix it, we will. We are going to make it good," he added.

Harmon blames two things for the road's problems — first, the winter frost freeze cycle which he said isn't good for any road and secondly, the old road still lies beneath the pavement.

Harmon said if the township had decided to remove the narrow road below it would have tripled the cost of the project but may have saved everyone from the severe cracking of the surface.

The road commission handles the majority of township projects as all the roads across the 15 townships in Charlevoix County are considered county roads. The commission then subcontracted the Old 31 project to H & D of Bay Shore.

Hayes Township levied a road millage that initially collected funds for five years. The sum of the five years was spent on the Old 31 work which cost the township close to $500,000.

The total project spanned a five mile stretch, from Murray Road, to Boyne City Charlevoix Road at $100,000 a mile.

Harmon explained that in 1997 the north end of Old 31 was worked on and some small cracks later reared their menacing heads. But, he said the cracks on the north end were nothing like what the south end is seeing.

He was surprised at the difference between the outcome of the two projects as the same process was used to rebuild both ends.

In the November 2000 election, a Hayes Township road millage was passed which allowed the township to levy 1 mill for the next five years.

Boyko said they are holding off on starting new projects until the work that was done on Old 31 is brought up to par.

Harmon said once the road commission has coordinated with H & D, work will begin. The road commission is planning on patching up the cracks on the current road, which lies over an even older road.

They do not plan to resurface the whole project area, but instead will start by the township hall which is just south of the intersection of Burgess Road and Old 31.

Then, they then plan to move over to a section of cracked pavement by Greensky Hill.

Harmon said the repairs will come at no cost to the township.

Township clerk Ethel Knepp said that after the Old 31 job is done, the township board will revise their outdated road priority list.

"I would like to have a town meeting so residents can be involved in prioritizing the list," she said.

Knepp added that the list that will be revised was established six or seven years ago to let voters know what roads would be worked on if the millage were passed. She added that since then people have moved in and out of the township and the priority list has changed.

The board did not re-prioritize the project list prior to the November election.

The millage will collect .9744 mill in 2001, the taxable value in Hayes Township is $117,638,508 and beginning December 1 the township projects that the road fund will collect $115,000 for its first year.

However, road work is expensive and Boyko said residents should not expect the township to take on major roads, like Boyne City/Charlevoix Road. He said the board is interested in fixing secondary road systems and that roads in need of repair, like Boyne City/Charlevoix Road are too massive of projects and they need county funding.

"The general philosophy was to fix up some of the roads that will never get the attention they deserve from the road commission. They have to concentrate on roads like, Thumb Lake Road, Boyne City/Charlevoix Road....," Boyko said.

Even though some secondary roads will be repaired as a result of millage funding, Boyko is not in favor of the millage.

"I don't like the road millage. I'm much more inclined to go the route of a user tax, like the gasoline tax. But, voters voted it in," he said.

Funds gathered from the millage are put into a designated township account that is used only for road reconstruction, not general maintenance.

Aside from road work, the township is also involved in building a public park by the township hall. The township owns 28 acres where it will have a picnic area, basketball hoops and bike racks.

Remember to water your trees this summer

This hot, dry time of year we appreciate our fine shade trees, but the young ones planted along our city streets need our help — water.

So the Charlevoix Shade Tree Commission requests — please water those trees along your streets in front of your homes and businesses. This is the critical time for watering and, please, do not use weed killers around them.

Speaking of shade trees; do you notice how much hotter it is where shade trees are absent? It is a fact. Fill in the gaps along Charlevoix city streets by calling Linda Weller at City Hall (231) 547-3270 and ask for free (tax-paid) shade trees to be planted this fall in those bare, hot gaps in front of your homes.

The Shade Tree Commission also reminds you to ask your neighbors to request trees to fill in where there are spaces.

Weller can help you select from the many available — maples, elm, ash, linden, callery pear and red oak (spring planting 2002). The commission only asks that you keep them watered from June through September for several years.

More Charlevoix Yacht Club sailing results

A. Nony Mouse
'Yachting notes'

A great sailing breeze enabled the fleets to complete a full seven-leg course at the Charlevoix Yacht Club Summer Series, with all but one boat finishing well before 9 p.m.

The J-22 HUSSY led the way, crossing the finish line at 8:17 with a crowd of other J-22s barely seconds behind. Second place went to FIRST DATE, third to SWINE FLEW and then SUPERFLUOUS, all within one minute of HUSSY.

Following were EAU DE VIE, ROCK STEADY, HS MOISTURE MISSILE, HIGH MAINTENANCE, THUNDERSTRUCK, PALEFACE LITE, WHAT'S HER NAME, SCURRY and NO NAME YET. GOTCHA was first across in Spinnaker I (the big boats) and saved her time over SLAPSHOT by just seven seconds. Then it was HOI POLLOI, HOOTIE, MINT JULEP and WINDRUNNER.

In Spinnaker II, BALD EAGLE was over a minute ahead of BABE while SAFFRON trailed by several. It was a great race in the P-26 Fleet with LOST VERMONTNER nosing out TIRELESS by seconds.

ORIGINAL SIN captured third while CYGNUS and ARTEMIS followed. SANDPIPER retired. FLASH dominated the JAM Fleet, as it was nine minutes later before POCO LOCO crossed the line. On corrected time, that gap narrowed to less than four minutes. CHEEMAUN nailed down third, then APOTHECARY in fourth while ORION retired.

Venetian Cup Race: While the Charlevoix Yacht Club skippers were competing in that regular Summer Series race, they were also competing against themselves and other entrants for the Venetian Cup. The two Spinnaker fleets are scored as one and ended up GOTCHA, SLAPSHOT, HOI POLLOI, HOOTIE, MINT J, BALD EAGLE, BABE, SAFFRON, WINDRUNNER and VANTAGE (welcome!). All other classes remained as shown above.

Venetian Fireworks Spectacular: The Friday Evening Extravaganza on Lake Charlevoix was truly awesome. If you missed it, I simply don't have adequate words with which to convey even a simple image of that premier pyrotechnic display — I can only surmise that it was the best ever seen in this part of the world (and I include Detroit's Freedom Festival in that evaluation).

Summer Sunday Sunfish Series: A faint breeze finally strengthened, the course was changed and, after some delay, nine contestants started a series of races.

Josh Barnes, in his first sail since the foot injury a month ago, nailed down first in Race 1 with Suzy Balter second and Tom Barnes (complete with crew of two very junior ladies) third. In Race 2, Tom got revenge; Josh was second and Gina Lepman, third. A. Nony left the course after Race 2 and watched as the races continued for two hours.

Don Bowerman, Sunfish Fleet Captain, advises that the final results show Tom Barnes, Suzy Balter and Gina Lepman, in that order. Following the adults, Don introduced three junior skippers to the thrill of Sunfishing and sudden immersion in the cool waters of Lake Charlevoix. Quite a sight and great fun! Join us about 1 p.m. next Sunday off Pine Point.

Charlevoix Yacht Club "New Boundaries" Regatta: This Saturday followed, at 4 p.m., with a big party and pig roast at the Club! Call Judy at 347-7225 or Linda at 537-4484 for information.

Charlevoix Yacht Club Aug. 3: Hosts Tom and Linda Orlow, John and Judy Gordon have lined up a full moon for your viewing pleasure. Join us at the club!

Cedar Ridge expansion denial upheld

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

The Waste Management of Michigan Cedar Ridge Landfill located in Eveline Township will most likely be capped by next summer.

"The legal interpretation by the DEQ (Department of Environmental Quality) was correct and the judge backed that up. There won't be an expansion at the landfill," John Ozoga senior environmental engineer for the Gaylord post of the Michigan Department of Environmental Quality (MDEQ) said.

Four months after Ingham County 30th Circuit Court Judge James R. Giddings heard oral arguments in the lawsuit Waste Management of Michigan brought against the MDEQ, he issued an opinion.

The opinion upheld the Charlevoix County Planning Commission and the MDEQ rulings issued in 2000 to deny Waste Management an expansion permit as the plans did not comply with the Charlevoix County Solid Waste Plan's surface water isolation criteria.

Both the Charlevoix County Planning Commission and MDEQ ruled that Sear Creek which could be negatively impacted by an expansion was a permanent flowing body of water based on the county MIRIS map.

However, Waste Management of Michigan fought this claim and presented evidence to both the county and to the MDEQ in an attempt to prove Sear Creek is not a permanent flowing body of water. Their evidence ultimately fell short.

"It (the opinion) was a decision that was a long time coming but it was the right decision. Even when the first solid waste plan was developed this landfill did not meet the expansion requirements," Charlevoix County Planner Larry Sullivan said.

"The people I have talked to are very happy it's nice to see a plan that is recognized and supported."

Waste Management can still appeal Giddings' ruling.

"This decision is subject to appeal, but it would be nice to see the issue put to rest. Whether it will be or not, I don't know," Sullivan said.

Ozoga and Sullivan said trucks may still bring loads for disposal, as the landfill has not yet reached final grade. Sullivan said foundry sand from the East Jordan Iron Works will still be brought to the site to fulfill the contract between Waste Management of Michigan and the East Jordan company.

Ozoga said the MDEQ is pushing for fall capping because they don't encourage winter capping. They hope to have the work done before Christmas,

"This decision is subject to appeal, but it would be nice to see the issue put to rest."

Larry Sullivan,
Charlevoix County planner

which is one reason Ozoga said the department wished the opinion would have come in earlier.

However, he added that a lot of the engineering involved in the capping process has already been done.

There isn't any need for cleanup around the site after the capping. In fact, Ozoga said of all the landfills he has dealt with Cedar Ridge is the cleanest.

He said as of July 30 all on-site monitor wells were clean and had never been referred to the county health department as a result of contaminated wells.

Ozoga said that once the landfill is capped, there will most likely still be flares and gas vents at the site. He projected into the future and said the landfill will green up and become a grassy hill.

He added they have been approached by people who think the site can be used for a golf course. But he said most likely not as they are installing a $1 million cap on the fill and they wouldn't want to compromise its quality. He even said that the root systems of trees were undesirable.

The only thing the site could be used for is fuel for the distant future when technology finds a use for the waste, Ozoga added.

Some tips to keep yourself free of foodborne illness

The potential for foodborne illness is present regardless of whether you are camping, at home, on a picnic, or eating in a restaurant, according to officials with the Northwest Michigan Community Health Agency and District Health Department Number 4.

"People should know that foodborne illnesses are uncommon, that food and water supplies are generally safe, and that the chance of acquiring an illness while eating at a licensed restaurant is unlikely," said Joshua R. Meyerson, MD, MPH, medical director of the health departments which serve residents throughout northwestern and northeastern lower Michigan. However, the potential for foodborne illness is present.

Meyerson is medical director for Northwest Michigan Community Health Agency, which serves Antrim, Charlevoix, Emmet and Otsego counties. He is also medical director for District Health Department Number 4, which serves residents in Alpena, Cheboygan, Montmorency and Presque Isle counties.

The basic food safety measures and food handling techniques which everyone should abide by include:

1) Choose foods processed for safety. Many foods are best in their natural state, such as fruits and vegetables; others are not safe unless they have been processed. All vegetables and fruits eaten raw need thorough washing. When assembling cold salads, chill all ingredients before assembling the salad, including the dressing and canned meats.

2) Cook food thoroughly. Many raw foods, notably poultry and meats, are very often contaminated with disease-causing agents. Thorough cooking will kill the pathogens, but the temperature of all parts of most foods must reach at least 140 degrees. However, cook poultry to 165 degrees F; pork to 145 degrees F; ground beef to 155 degrees; and rare roast beef at 130 degrees for two hours. Use a thermometer to make sure the food has reached the proper temperature.

3) Eat cooked foods immediately. When cooked foods cool to below 140 degrees, microbes begin to grow.

4) Store cooked foods immediately. If you must prepare foods in advance or want to keep leftovers, be sure to store them either hot (140 degrees or above), or cold (41 degrees or below). If hot foods are to be refrigerated, they must be rapidly cooled to 41 degrees F or less in under four hours.

5) Reheat cooked foods thoroughly and quickly. All parts of the food must reach at least 165 degrees within two hours.

6) Avoid contact between raw and cooked foods. Safely cooked food can become contaminated through even the slightest contact with raw foods. Wash and sanitize all utensils and cutting boards after they have been used for raw meats and before cutting raw vegetables and fruits.

7) Wash hands repeatedly. People should always wash their hands thoroughly before working with ready-to-eat foods and after using the bathroom, using a handkerchief, touching any soiled object or surface, handling raw food (especially poultry and meat), eating, smoking and touching or scratching any area of the body including ears, mouth, nose or hair.

8) Maintain adequate hand washing facilities. This includes hot and cold running water, soap and sanitary towels.

9) Keep all kitchen surfaces meticulously clean. Since foods are so easily contaminated, any surface used for food preparation must be kept absolutely clean. Every food scrap, crumb, or spot is a potential reservoir for germs.

10) Protect foods from insects, rodents and other animals.

11) Use water and ice from approved sources.

12) Frozen foods must be thawed in a refrigerator, under cold running water, in a microwave or as part of the cooking process.

13) Ask questions. Contact the health agency if you have questions or concerns about food safety or food handling.

New deputy named for duty on Beaver Island

William Church, a 23-year-old graduate from Lake Superior College in Sault Ste. Marie, has been assigned by Sheriff George T. Lasater as the second deputy sheriff on Beaver Island for a six month authorized assignment.

The second deputy sheriff funding was a combined effort between Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners and both township boards on Beaver Island.

Church is from Midland County where he grew up on a farm and his father was a deputy sheriff with the Midland County Sheriff's Office. Prior to graduating from the police academy, Church did his internship with the Midland City Police Department.

Church's hobbies are fishing, hockey and diving.

This is his first assignment in law enforcement and he is looking forward to putting his knowledge and skills to use and
